Selectmen consider binding Town Counsel rulings for access by public

New approach to public service

TO THE EDITOR:

After watching last week's selectmen's meeting, it appears the newly constituted board is looking to adopted a new approach to public service.....eliminate the public !!!

Cook estate options

TO THE EDITOR:

It seemed, however briefly (see paragraph 3 and 4 below) that a pipe to Hull to serve Avalon, Cook, Cedarmere and the State organization that handles drainage from the landfill, could be legal, if ownership is structured carefully and if our sewer commission agreed. This should obviate lawsuits by any of the above four entities. If the contract with Hull strictly limits the contracted flow, it may be that we would be insulated from successful lawsuits for additional tie-ins.

The town should anticipate the possibility (maybe the probability) that, in the future, without that pipe, (1) the condo association that takes over management of Cedarmere may soon demand to be hooked up to an off-site sewage treatment system (2) Avalon and/or the State may sue for the same (3) The soil on Cook estate may prove to be unable for long to accept the wastewater from more than a few units (even fewer than the number the selectmen are tinkering with at this moment) and hence require off-site treatment.

Of course Hull holds the strong cards to negotiate price and terms, having been smart enough to build a treatment plant with excess capacity and an ocean outfall when such an outfall still was permitted and the cost of plant was largely paid for by the State. And of course Cohasset would have to plan, years ahead, what to do on termination of the contract with Hull. But there has to be such planning and rational action anyway, because sewage treatment needs are going to increase substantially, if not for any or all of the three reasons above, then for others not listed.

The hopeful vision of a pipe to Hull was stimulated by the surprise suggestion recently from two of the three sewer commissioners that a pipe to Hull could work, and the seeming belief of town counsel that if approved by the sewer commission and with careful attention to ownership, route, etc. that it could be legal. Until then, a pipe to Hull was not considered because of the well-know previous opinion of counsel to the effect that, without sewer commission approval, such a pipe was not legal. (The widely circulated email suggesting concealment of the previous opinion, though cloaked as public-spirited outrage and duping some recipients, was but another piece of mischief that helps perpetuate the poisonous atmosphere we have developed in the last two or three years).

But then the sewer commission voted against the pipe to Hull, perhaps sensitive to the outcry that it would stimulate growth along 3A, or perhaps for more rational reasons. (If the contract with Hull strictly limited the contracted flow, it is believed that we would be insulated from successful lawsuits for additional tie-ins and hence from stimulating undesired growth).

Anyway, that hope for saving Cook and precluding lawsuits (from the four entities listed in paragraph one) was extinguished.

Although some dumb things were said or implied at the May 2 selectmen's meeting (e.g. sell the lots adjacent to Fairoaks to a developer, put a damper on public input, use a developer rather than a consultant to advise on revising the RFP, don't bother understanding the reasoning behind the original RFP), Selectman Vanderweil wisely recommended that the real long-term absorption capacity of the soil be better established before settling on the number of units.

Should it be determined that the soil can support fewer units than can be "affordable" and the project still be economically viable, then other options must be considered. Such options as: (1) subsidizing the cost of developing (2) exercising our option to purchase, and reselling; (3) exercising our option and eventually building something of economic or other benefit to the town; (4) reconsidering a pipe to Hull; (5) seeing if any of the critics have anything constructive and worth pursuing; (6) letting go, and letting some entity other than Cohasset benefit from this valuable real estate.

Post Office Food Drive is tomorrow (May 14)

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Post Office Letter Carriers Food Drive will take place on Saturday, May 14th to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry. This Food Drive provides us with enough food to stay stocked through the summer months. The following items are needed:

- Condiments
- Jam
- Spaghetti Sauce
- Spaghetti O's
- Solid White Tuna
- Peanut Butter
- Large Sized Fruit Juices
- Cereal
- Canned Fruit
- Cookies and Crackers
- Shampoo
- Dish and Laundry Detergent
- Cleaning Supplies
- Toilet Paper
- Paper Towels
- Kleenex

Please remember to place non-perishable food items in a bag by your mailbox on Saturday and be sure to check for expiration dates. Thank you in advance for your continued generosity.

Urges 'yes' votes on override question

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset voting is on Saturday, May 21, from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. in the Second Congregational Church (next to the Cohasset Town Hall). There are two questions on the ballet: 1.) A $400K operational override 2.) A debt exclusion for sewer enhancements for several sewer districts (including the Little Harbor area).

Since I will be out of town on the weekend of voting, I have voted absentee in favor of both the operational override and in favor of the debt exclusion for sewer enhancements for several sewer districts. Maintaining the high quality of the Cohasset Public Schools and building a sewer system for the Little Harbor area are the responsible things to do. I urge all of you to vote Yes on both ballot items.

On the weekend of May 21, and 22, I will be at the University of Vermont in Burlington, Vermont. My oldest daughter, Lydia Guild, is graduating with honors. I would like to extend heartfelt thanks to the teachers, administrators and the school committee, who were responsible for and did an excellent job of educating Lydia from Kindergarten through graduating from high school. They instilled in Lydia skills which made graduation from college with honors possible. My youngest daughter, Jessie Guild, is in her first year at Colby College. She too went to the Cohasset Public Schools from Kindergarten through graduating from high school. In the Cohasset Public Schools she was educated, molded, and shaped to study hard and stand out even in a challenging environment. Thanks to the Cohasset Public Schools for again doing an excellent job.

This year the Cohasset Public Schools have a new Superintendent, Dr. Denise Walsh, who by the way is doing an excellent job. Please show your support for Dr. Walsh's educational improvements and financial transparency with a Yes vote on question one.

Clearing starts along the old rail bed

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As you read this the clearing should have started along the railroad right of way. It is the MBTA's intention to clear from the Scituate line, moving toward Hingham.

However, recently the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection notified the MBTA that the wetlands in the vicinity of Lincoln Lane are the habitat of a rare turtle. No construction activities can take place in these wetlands until after July 1. Otherwise the endangered turtles will be jeopardized. So, the clearing will start at Beechwood street and move toward Scituate up to the turtle habitat. And from Beechwood, clearing will move toward the Hingham line.

One of the things you may notice is that in some places the width of the clearing is much wider than at other places.

One of the things you may notice is that in some places the width of the clearing is much wider than at other places. In general, the reason for this is to enhance safety at the railroad crossings. Since the trains will not sound their horns when approaching crossings for the entire Greenbush line, visibility down the track from each street crossing becomes of paramount importance. Thus, in the areas adjacent to crossings, the trees and undergrowth will be cleared quite a bit wider than in the areas where there is no crossing.

In face, the MBTA's design standards call for a cleared swath 70-feet wide at each crossing, tapering down to 30-feet wide 1,000 feet away from the crossing in either direction. The MBTA will try to adhere to this clearing standard whenever possible, without specifically taking more land. So, even though the clearing away from the grade crossings will be about 30-feet wide (15 feet either side of the center of the tracks), there will be areas at the crossings where it can be as wide as 70 feet (35 feet either side of the train tracks).

Taxpayers have tough decisions to make

COMMENTARY

LEONORA JENKINS

The Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers want to thank all of those who participated in their Issues Forum. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh, school committee chair Jamie Williams, school committee member Alfred Slanetz and sewer commissioner Ray Kasperowicz plus all the interested residents who took the time to come out, ask questions, make comments and attempted to keep informed on the issues.

It was an interesting and information packed evening with topics ranging from the schools to sewers to town debt.

The school superintendent indicated during the course of the evening that her department would require at least a 6.3 percent increase every year in their budget. The current step and column raises are 2.67 percent of the budget which gives the eligible teachers an approx. 4.5 percent raise and with new employees being hired at higher steps and columns, thus salaries will continue to have the largest impact on the budget.

Mr. Kasperowicz pointed out Cohasset has the highest per capita debt of any town in the area at $11,800.

The figures for the cost of living raises (typically 3 percent) and the $1000/year longevity for employees from the 15th year to retirement are not included in the 2.67 percent. Dr. Walsh also stated the current budget has no money appropriated for a teacher's cost of living increase. The school committee is currently bargaining with the teachers union for a new contract. If there is an increase in teacher compensation it will not be paid for by this override.

Mr. Kasperowicz pointed out Cohasset has the highest per capita debt of any town in the area at $11,800. Neighboring towns are substantially lower, Duxbury ($4,000), Hingham ($2,500), Norwell ($3,236), and Scituate ($2,900). Of town's with similar demographics, the only town with a debt above $4,000 is Weston at $7,900. This information is based on 2003 DOR data

Understandably there is some concern with the two upcoming overrides. One is an Operational Budget Override that will be an immediate, permanent increase to everyone's taxes by over 2 percent bringing the total tax increase for next year up to almost 10 percent on every home.

The other one is a Debt Exclusion question which means that once the debt is paid that amount is gone. The taxes will not be increased immediately on the real estate bills with the Debt Exclusion but rather it will appear as we incur the debt. This Debt Exclusion amount will not be appearing in the 10 percent tax increase for the next fiscal year which begins July 1.

Residents will have to make some hard decisions when they step into the ballot box on May21.

HEALTH NOTES

We are creating our own ecoterrorism

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A short time ago, an important document arrived in the mail of everyone in Cohasset. It wasn't particularly noticeable, looking like junk mail; and so most of us just threw it out, saying "ho hum just another spring gardening scam by someone wanting to sell fertilizer." Unfortunately this document was a brief, very readable handbook on how to protect our pets and loved ones from dangerous debilitating illness; prevent damage to our environment; and save countless dollars that would otherwise be spent in useless home and garden maintenance.

The 2005 Greenscapes Reference Guide is a comprehensive 16-page summary with color photos telling what we need to know about enjoying life in a natural environment. It tells how to manage your own lawns and gardens, how and when to fertilize, when and how much to water, how high to cut grass. It has a section on designing planting beds, pesticide alternatives, composting, drainage. It lists low maintenance plants and tells how and where to use them.

This document, designed specifically for the South Shore and its environment, tells how to increase your property values, save money on water bills while nurturing a safe environment for your family, and enjoy more free time by reducing landscape maintenance. It has a list of participating South Shore nurseries and many other sources of good information about living in a green community.

If you have a service do your outside maintenance, the Greenscapes program has held workshops for commercial lawn-care professionals and can provide a listing of such sources. It also has a series of workshops for those who are really interested in obtaining more knowledge about the various aspects or lawns, landscape and turf management.

We are the victims of our own ignorance. If we don't know enough about the world surrounding us we are exposing ourselves to unknown perils.

Fortunately, the Greenscapes Reference Guide is now available at the board of health, the water department, the Cohasset Town Hall, and the library. Go there and get your copy.

We are the victims of our own ignorance. If we don't know enough about the world surrounding us we are exposing ourselves to unknown perils. A member of the Water Resources Protection Committee has a word for it: ecoterrorism. In spring when she looks at a lawn, she sees an entire ecosystem under the grass. There are moles, chipmunks, worms, ants; a myriad of little insects and little growing things, quantities of biota, various types of life underground. All living together in a natural system. And then along comes Turfbuilder or some such. It's spring and agri-industry must be fed. So out come the ads and the lawn care specialists, and the green-lawn experts. They know it's time to go to work.

After all, they know that if you fertilize and add water, things will turn green. Growing roots that protect from the heat is another matter. And besides, in a while the lawn will start to turn brown and they can call it grubs and saturate the ground with herbicides fungicides, grub killer, etc.; another marketing opportunity. The ecoterrorists are at work. When they are through, they leave dead unproductive soil awaiting cinch bugs, hardy weeds, grubs, etc. Then they can sell irrigation systems. And in the fall, there are other opportunities. But more about that later. In the meantime the chemicals, artificial phosphates, nitrates and other components for explosives are leaching into the soil along with all of the poisons associated with many of the ailments of man such as autism, asthma, cancer, etc. wrecking a balanced ecosystem. And we go outside and have parties and cookouts and play on our lawns, heedless of the carnage going on under the grass and the various threats to our health.

LIBRRY CORNER

Book Sale -The Friends of the Cohasset Library are holding a book sale Saturday, May 14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., on the second floor of Our World Children's Discovery Museum, which is also holding its estate sale. Access to the book sale is through the library Children's Room or museum entrances. Book prices are only $1 for hardcover books, DVD's, CD's and books on tape; 25 cents for children's books and paperbacks; or five items for $1. Patrons will also have an opportunity to take advantage of the special "Buck a Bag" promotion from 3 to 4 p.m., as well as to buy a Cohasset Library book bag for $15 and fill it with books at no additional cost.

All proceeds from the sale go to the Friends of the Library who fund children's programs, the Museum Pass program and other community and outreach programs. For more information call the library at 781-383-1348.

Antique Appraisal Event -Bring a favorite collectible or treasure to Sunrise of Cohasset, 125 King St., for appraisal by antique specialist Andrea Hunt on Sunday, May 15, from 2 to 4 p.m. Registration begins at 1:30 p.m. Admission is $10. Proceeds benefit the library. RSVP to Sunrise at 781-383-6300.

College Admissions 101 -College admissions consultant Marlena Alex, will present an overview of the college admissions process on Monday, May 16 at 7:30 p.m., in the Meeting Room. Geared to high school students and parents just beginning to think about applying to college, the program will provide information on determining a list of schools, standardized testing, interviews, completing applications, working with the guidance counselor and how college admissions offices make their selections. All are welcome.

Music with MamaSteph -MamaSteph performs Monday, May 16, at 10:30 a.m., in the Meeting Room. This is a drop-in lap-sit program for young children and their caregivers, generously funded by the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Open to all communities and ages.

Holly Hill Farm Lecture Series - Meg Moore, a local nature enthusiast, will present a lecture on wildflowers, Thursday, May 19, at 7 p.m., in the Meeting Room. Professor of Geology, Peter Dillon, will present a lecture on outcroppings, rock ledges and geology on Thursday, June 2, at 7 p.m. The lectures will be in the Meeting Room. The public is welcome. Admission is free. For information call Jon Belber, Holly Hill Farm, 781-383-1455.

Independent Film Series - May 26 film night features "Wilby Wonderful." Scandal rocks the quiet town of Wilby Island threatening to change life for the residents forever. Showing in the Meeting Room at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Book Discussion Group -Join us Friday, May 27 at 10 a.m., for coffee and discussion of "The Plot Against America," by Philip Roth. Advance registration is required. Call Judy Simons at 781-383-1348.

Upcoming Author Event -Author Margaret McLean will discuss her book "Under Oath," a swiftly paced first degree murder and conspiracy trial in Charlestown, Massachusetts, on Tuesday, June 21 at 10 a.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Artist Exhibit -Pembroke artist Becky Haletky celebrates her 25 years as a professional artist with a retrospective exhibit at the library through June 30. Known primarily for her realistic watercolors, Becky has also worked in several other media over the years. The show includes hand tinted photographs, photo collages, acrylics, and watercolors.

Muzzy Language Programs -Many of our "Cultural Connections" discovery kits include Muzzy language programs for children. Muzzy is a powerful learning tool for children of all ages.

Kits are available in Spanish, French, Italian, and German. Each kit contains two story DVD's of designated language; one vocabulary builder DVD with over 250 words; one audio CD (great for the car); one voice-prompted CD-ROM for the youngest computer users; one story DVD in English, a colorful script book that follows the story scene by scene; and one Parent's Guide with additional tips and ideas. All "Cultural Connections" discovery kits may be borrowed for two weeks. Kits are provided through a Library Services and Technology Act grant awarded to Cohasset Library by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners, under the provisions of the Institute of Museum and Library Services.

First Lady's standup routine

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A word of caution for Laura Bush. Make sure the mike is off before you start telling those jokes. You know the ones I mean. The ones rated XXX by the family values folks who turn out in droves to support George and his friends.

Remember Hillary Clinton . . . oops, "Rodham" Clinton. The time she put on those designer clothes and posed for a fashion layout in Vogue magazine and sold as many copies as Jackie Kennedy to the consternation of her friends.

"She didn't prove, as her advocates insist, that a modern woman can be all things," pouted one woman in a letter to the editor. "She proved that after becoming a powerful lawyer and policy maker, she still needed to be a sex object."

Laura, in a talk at the White House correspondents' dinner, got off a doozy describing husband George's efforts to become a Texas rancher after all those years of book learning at Andover and Yale, with an occasional detour down to Morey's.

I repeat the line in a family newspaper for the simple reason that it is crucial to this column and in no way intended to rouse the prurient interests of the reader, if I have one left after reaching the fifth paragraph.

"He's learned a lot about ranching since that first year when he tried to milk the horse," she said. "What's worse, it was a male horse."

It was jokes like that that got me thrown out of Miss Madden's fifth grade class at the Thomas A. Watson School.

I didn't see her tell the joke in the original, which, incidentally, was written by Landon Parvin, one of Ron Reagan's former speech writers, but I got a look at the audience reaction in the reruns.

Democrats laughed uproariously; most Republicans smiled nervously; those Republicans who listen to Rush Limbaugh and read Ann Coulter looked like lobsters that had just been dropped into boiling water by Mary Tyler Moore.

But there is a better than even chance that a good standup routine won't hurt Laura's standing with the American people after all.

Remember Nancy Reagan was pilloried for her practice of accepting the loan of fashionable clothing from American designers, saying she was just giving a boost to the nation's fashion industry. Her advisers convinced her to give them to museums.

Whereupon, as a parting shot, Nancy turned up at the annual Gridiron dinner wearing a garish outfit of prints, a boa and beads, singing, "Secondhand clothes/To museum collections and traveling shows." Critics were charmed.

But no First Lady has ventured so near to the edge as Laura Bush.

"One night," she said, "after George went to bed, Lynne Cheney, Condi Rice and Karen Hughes and I went to Chippendales (a male strip joint). I won't tell you what happened, but Lynne's Secret Service code name is now "Dollar Bill."

Have you guys heard the one about the traveling salesman and the farmer's daughter?

CHAMBER CHATTER

Map and business directory — The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced that a Cohasset map and business directory is in the works. This new marketing tool will provide a comprehensive categorical listing and brief description of retail and service businesses in town. As a benefit of membership, Cohasset Chamber members will be listed free of charge.

It is very important that members update their contact information. Members are advised to check the Chamber website to review business information, or complete the Contact Information Update form mailed with the Chamber renewal notice.

All updated information is due no later than June 1. For a limited time only, the Chamber is extending a special offer of $125 for a directory listing/description to non-member businesses. The $125 fee includes a Chamber membership effective immediately, through July 31, 2006.

For further information, call Jane Higgins Norton at 781-383-0708 or Mike Conlon at 781-383-1616.

Fairoaks puts selectmen in frying pan over Cook plans

Want assurances about open space

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There was standing room only as residents from the Fairoaks Lane neighborhood turned out in droves for Tuesday's selectmen's meeting.

In light of last week's comments made by newly elected Selectman Gary Vanderweil that the town should consider allowing the three acres of Cook property located on the Fairoaks neighborhood side of Sohier Street to be developed and not retained as open space, the residents came out to protect their buffer.

Fairoaks Lane resident Joe Nedrow who is also a member of the senior housing committee has been very involved with the process of developing the Cook Estate land.

"One of the things we were most cognizant of were abutters," he said, during preliminary discussions on developing the site. Nedrow explained abutters include homes on Red Fox Lane and Fairoaks, and the Deer Hill and Osgood schools.

"This will stir up a whole new controversy and it's not worth it."

— Joe Nedrow, senior housing committee

Nedrow said he assured his neighbors before the November 2003 Town Meeting, which voted to give the project the go-ahead, the portion of the estate on the Fairoaks side (behind the Mobil station) would be kept the way it is.

"You should honor the work that has been done on behalf of our committee for abutters," Nedrow said. "This will stir up a whole new controversy and it's not worth it."

Selectman Michael Sullivan agreed with Nedrow. "A lot of effort went into considering the neighbors," he said adding he has heard tests have indicated at best one or two single-family homes could be built on the property.

Nedrow noted Sohier Street is one of the main entrance points for Cohasset. "What better way to conserve than on one of the main roads coming into town," he said.

The town is trying to build much needed senior housing on the Cook Estate property. However, soils will not allow wastewater from the 95 proposed units to be disposed of on site, as was planned, and a municipal sewer connection is not an option. The bidding process has begun again and the town is in round two of developer selection as a downsized project will need to be built in order for its wastewater to be accommodated on site.

Vanderweil has sent copies of soil tests — performed at the town's expense on the Cook Estate — to Dan Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates for a review. Vanderweil is a former sewer commissioner and Tutela has provided engineering for the town's sewer projects.

Vanderweil said he had only briefly spoken with Coughlin, but from his first glance at the tests, said there could be severe limitations on the site, and he was not convinced 60 units could be built. He then suggested the soils across the street undergo testing to see if they could support development.

Vanderweil was not present at this week's meeting, and therefore the board agreed not to take a vote which would ensure the Fairoaks side acres will not be included in the Request for Proposals, which will be sent out to prospective bidders. The entire board is expected to be in attendance at its Tuesday, May 17 meeting when a vote could take place on the RFP regarding the Fairoaks side property.

Nedrow said if the option of building on the three acres comes back on the table, "I can tell you you'll have some aggressive opposition."

Costs of Cook project are adding up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

No ground has been broken on the Cook Estate property off Sohier Street, but town costs incurred for the project are adding up.

Roughly 18 months after Special Town Meeting gave the go-ahead to pursue mixed-income senior housing at the site, the town has spent $450,000 with the potential to incur more costs.

Voters back in November 2003 allocated $4.5 million to purchase roughly 22-acres from the Cook heirs. The town would then immediately turn around and sell that land with the town's adjacent roughly 8 acres to a developer for $5.425 million during a simultaneous closing. Northland developers bid $175,000 more than the town's minimum bid price of $5.25 million.

The town was slated to receive a profit of $925,000.

The town hired engineers to test soils, consultants to help with the proposals, and attorneys to protect the town. In addition, the town put down a refundable deposit of $200,000 to secure the deal with the Cook heirs.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said Northland Residential, the company that won the initial bid round last year, put down a $100,000 deposit, which has been returned.

If the town receives a bid of $5.425 million for the project during the second round and no more money is expended for the project, the town stands to gain roughly $666,000.

Charges associated with the project date back to August 2003, three months before Town Meeting approval. Town funds, including some reserve fund transfer money, have paid for roughly $78,000 worth of work since then. The other bills have been paid from $300,000 in money the town borrowed which will be repaid from the $5.425 million at the closing.

Thomas Mulhearn, who conducted the original appraisal of the property, cost the town $4,200.

Soon after, GLC Development Resources was hired to help the town help market the Cook property to developers.

Bills for GLC have been paid for out of the regular budget and with borrowed funds. Roughly $24,000 was paid from the budget and $115,000 from borrowing. The last bill incurred by the company was in November 2004 and was paid in January.

The town conducted soil tests on the Cook land both before and after the Town Meeting vote. Engineering firms John Cavanaro Consulting and Coler & Colantonio were hired to complete perc tests as well as soil boring tests. Cavanaro's fees totaled roughly $14,000 which were paid from the budget, and Coler & Colantonio's totaled around $33,000 — $8,000 of which was borrowed.

Legal fees are expected to continue into the future, and between fees for Deutsch Williams, the firm which acts as Town Counsel, and special counsel Myrna Putziger, $30,000 has already been earmarked for costs the town is expected to incur, which will be paid for with borrowed money. The town has paid a total of $15,600 for Putziger's services so far, and $12,700 for Town Counsel, all of which has been paid through borrowed funds except for roughly $4,000. Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said Putziger served on the zoning board of appeals and is considered to be one of the better real-estate lawyers in the state.

Buckley said the $300,000 has cost the town $6,000 in interest. The town can expect an additional $1,000 in interest as another $100,000 will be borrowed within the next couple of weeks to cover future costs.

Until very recently, the town had been working with Northland Residential to build "The Villages at Deer Hill," a senior housing project which would have provided 95 units of mixed affordable and market-rate senior housing.

However, plans to accommodate the project's wastewater on site failed and sewer was not an option. Therefore the project had to be downsized so the wastewater could be handled on site.

State procurement laws require all bidders have a fair opportunity to submit plans for projects. Because the project was substantially downsized, the town is drawing up another Request for Proposals that will be sent out again to solicit a new round of bids.

The idea has been floated for the town to borrow $4.5 million to purchase the property from the Cook heirs, which could buy some time. The heirs have a fiduciary responsibility to use the money for various charities and obligations, and a closing date has been set for Sept. 15, 2005. If the town decides to purchase the property Buckley said assuming 3.5 percent interest, it could cost roughly $13,125 per month.

How much money has the town spent on the Cook Estate?

Appraisal:	Thomas Mulhearn	$4,200
Engineering:	Coler & Colantonio	$32,861
	John Cavanaro Consulting	$14,100
Consulting:	GLC	$138,350
Legal:	Deutsch, Williams	$16,450
	Myrna Putziger	$15,691
	projected fees	$30,000
Interest paid on borrowed $	First Southwest	$7,263
Deposit to secure deal with Cooks		$200,000
Total:		$458,915

Projected legal fees could come in higher or lower than estimated. Town will be reimbursed for deposit by developer at closing and could recoup other costs through sale of the site.*

How Northland's project got the nod over the competition

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cook Estate project is going back out to bid, but the Northland Residential Corporation which was selected one year ago is not being ruled out as the developer to make senior housing off Sohier Street a reality.

Over the past 14 months, Northland — which said it will participate in the new Request For Proposals (RFP) process — has worked with the town to build 95 units of mixed-income, senior housing on the Cook Estate property off Sohier Street. But without adequate soils for wastewater disposal on site, the project has be downsized. Under state procurement laws , the project must go out to bid again, selectmen said.

As the town embarks on a new RFP process, it's a good time to review how Northland was selected in the first place.

Last year, the town went through a lengthy process which scrutinized 75 bid proposals for the project. The "Request for Proposals advisory committee" said one of the most important aspects of the proposals were qualifications of the developer and the development team.

RFP committee members scrutinized each proposal using a point system rating how well each development met the town's criteria.

In addition to Northland, Deer Hill Partners LLC of Braintree (in association with Coler & Colantonio, Inc., Ross Assoc. Architects, and Stockard, Engler & Brigham); Cohasset Residential LLC (c/o Black Rock Development of Hingham); Abbott Real Estate Development LLC of Boston; and Baran-Keen (Baran Companies of Boston and Keen Development Corp. of Cambridge) were under the microscope.

Out of a possible 100 points, Northland came in first with a total of 83. Blackrock/Northwest had a total of 77, Abbott Real Estate had a total of 73, and Baran-Keen totaled 72.

The selection committee was impressed with Northland's years of experience permitting projects in environmentally sensitive areas; the Cook Estate is flanked by wetlands. Northland completed other projects comparable to what it has proposed for the Cook site, including the Villages at Brookside, a senior housing community in Bourne that some RFP advisory committee members visited.

The committee liked the fact that site plans took into consideration the target market for the development, providing amenities the active, 55-plus crowd wants. All units have a first-floor master bedroom, one or two car garages, and loft spaces. There would be walking trails along the perimeter of the entire village, which could be linked with present or future "off-site" trail networks. The plans also include a common garden facility available for all residents, and the existing Cook residence will be

MedFlight called for industrial accident

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

An industrial accident on Atlantic Avenue Wednesday sent a 24-year-old Falmouth man to Brigham and Woman's Hospital in Boston with head and arm injuries.

"He does not have any life-threatening injuries."

— Police Chief James Hussey

A MedFlight helicopter lands on Milliken Field to transport a man injured in an industrial accident. The accident coincided with the evacuation of the middle-high school (see story page one) but the two incidents were not related.

The call came in to the Cohasset Police Department at 9:40 a.m. and Police Chief Jim Hussey said from what he understands, a jersey barrier, which is a large concrete barrier used on roads to prevent vehicle crossover, was being moved with a backhoe and somehow released from the chains which had suspended it above the ground, and hit the worker.

"He does not have any life-threatening injuries," Hussey said, but they were severe enough to warrant a trip to the city.

A MedFlight helicopter was requested to transport the patient. In light of a note found next to a bullet outside the middle-high school that morning implying threats, the school department notified the parents of every student the arrival of the helicopter was not related to the school matter. The helicopter landed in Milliken Field, near the high school, to transport the patient at around 10 a.m. renovated into a "village clubhouse" to be used for social events and gatherings.

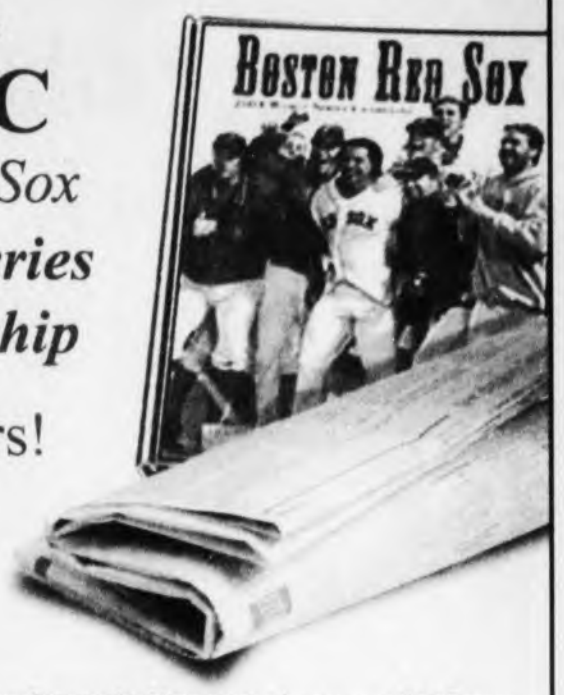
Floor plans for townhouses were drafted to come in four designs. Three feature two bedrooms with two and a half baths, and the fourth has two bedrooms and two full baths. Square footage ranges from 1700-1950 square feet of living space. During a "pre-sale" period, homes would be offered at a discount and only marketed to Cohasset residents.



Members of the RFP committee were also impressed with the team of experts that would be assisting Northland with the development including Grazado Velleco Architects; engineers Coler & Colantonio; and landscape architect Tom Ryan.

Construction would be managed with Northland Residential Construction LLC, which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Northland Residential Corp., and specifically acts to provide construction management and construction related services on each of the company's projects.

In March 2004, at the committee's recommendation, the board of selectmen voted unanimously in favor of allowing Northland to build "The Villages at Deer Hill" on the Cook Estate property, expecting the project could be completed by December 2006.

Members of the RFP committee included, Steve Bobo, 292 Jerusalem Road; Joseph Buckley, 28 Linden Drive; Robert Hess, 11 Old Pasture Road; Ava Heggie, 228 Sohier St.; Richard O'Brien, 78 Old Pasture Road; Roger Pompeo, 130 Forest Ave.; John Steinmetz, 175 Sohier St.; and Martha Horsefield, 225 Jerusalem Road.

Cohasset senior catcher Luis Blanco and his teammates need to win at least six of their last seven (beginning yesterday at Norwell) to make the state tournament.

Backs to the wall for CHS baseball

Team needs wins in a hurry to make the postseason

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

At 3-8, the task for the Cohasset baseball team is clear.

If they are to play in the postseason, the Skippers will have to win at least six of their last seven games.

It sounds like a daunting task, but it is not out of the realm of possibility. Head coach Al Gallotta hopes his team can split its two remaining South Shore League games - yesterday at Norwell (played after the Mariner went to press) and the 18th at Harwich - and then run the table in its five remaining non-league contests.

Those non-leaguers feature a road trip to South Shore Christian (a team Cohasset has already defeated handily this season), and home-road sets with Holbrook and Sacred Heart.

Following yesterday's showdown with the Clippers, Cohasset plays four games in as many days next week: Tuesday at SS Christian, Wednesday at Harwich, Thursday at home with Sacred Heart, and Friday at Holbrook.

"That's going to be difficult," admits Gallotta. "I do think we can manage it pitching-wise."

Those who figure to get starts on the mound during that stretch are Teddie Straughn, Chris Bryan (who started yesterday against Norwell) and Brian Hill. Bryan and Hill combined efforts last Wednesday to help give Cohasset perhaps their best win of the season.

At home against Mashpee, the Skippers got down early by a 4-0 score. Bryan started and scuffled early, allowing two runs each in the second and third innings. He settled down from there, however, and posted zeroes in innings four through nine. The junior finished with a solid line of nine innings, six hits, four runs and nine K's.

If they are to play in the postseason, the Skippers will have to win at least six of their last seven games.

Hill pitched the top of the 10th, allowing a double but working himself out of the jam. Stefan Parnell got the game-winning hit in the bottom of the 10th to win it for Cohasset.

That gave the Skippers some momentum heading into the next day's game with Carver. Cohasset hung close for the first five innings, as Hill kept them close with some solid pitching. The visiting Crusaders broke the game open, however, with a six-run sixth inning, and Cohasset finished with a 12-5 loss.

The Skippers would not play again until this past Tuesday against Hull. The Pirates feature a powerful lineup, one that Gallotta has called the best in the league from top to bottom. And although he took a tough-luck 2-1 loss in eight innings, Straughn was magnificent on the mound for the Skippers.

The senior co-captain went the distance, giving up only four hits, walking one, and racking up 13 strikeouts.

"It was probably the best game I've seen him pitch in the three years I've been coaching him," Gallotta said. "He was totally in control from the beginning of the game."

Softballers in tourney contention after big win over Carver

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

So where does Cohasset stand at this juncture in the land of softball? Let's call it the tipping point.

The team has finished half their season and stands at 4-5 overall (heading into this week's action-packed week that had five games on the schedule). Cohasset will win a tight game, get crushed in the next, and then resurfaces with a big 'W'. The Lady Skippers could end up either on the short end of the bat or in postseason play.

Let's take the May 3 home game against South Shore League leading Abington as one case in point. Head coach Deb Bostwick probably wished the Cohasset PD had stopped the Abington team bus at the town border. No such luck.

Instead, the Green Wave invaded Freedom Field with a firestorm of hits (17). As Cohasset softballers ducked for cover they committed eight errors. The Abington squad played with total confidence and departed with even more confidence.

After the final out, the Skippers walked off the field hats in hand with an 18-0 drubbing. It happens to all of us. Just ask Paul Pierce and Doc Rivers. They could tell you how lousy it feels.

Sophomore lefty Christina Pinkus did the best she could on the mound against a terrific Abington team.

The Skipper offense came alive with three hits - Virginia Spofford with a double, Erin Liddell and Anna Haggerty each with a single. These glimpses of hope appear microscopic compared to the 17 Abington hits, but as a point of reference, in the teams' previous meeting this season, Cohasset eked out only one hit against the Green Wave.

Melissa Crowley-Buck looked at the bright side of the game.

"It's tough to compete with a team with that much experience," she said. "They play at a higher level than we do. We acknowledge this fact. At the same time, we're showing some

Cohasset getting contributions from various sources

The South Shore League girls tennis title was on the line yesterday afternoon when Cohasset hosted Norwell.

The Skippers were 9-2 overall (6-1 in the league) heading into the match, having already clinched a berth in the state tournament.

Cohasset rebounded from a surprising loss to Abington on May 3 with a 4-1 win at Carver two days later. Head coach Gigi Meehan continues to rotate different people in various spots in the lineup, and it worked against the Crusaders.

Elizabeth Stone and Susan Curry played first and second singles, as usual, and both won in straight sets. The freshman duo of Sally Meehan and Meg Anderson teamed up at first doubles and won convincingly, 6-1, 6-0.

Rachel Garber teamed up with Carrie Muir to give Cohasset their fourth point at second doubles, something Meehan was delighted to see.

"It was nice to take four points for a change," she said. "We've had a lot of 3-2 scores lately. I like 3-2 results; I think they make you a tougher team. But it's nice to not have to sweat things out once in a while."

And although she lost her match in third singles, junior Michelle Lemaire impressed her coach, going to three sets against a solid opponent.

"Michelle was feisty out there on the court," Meehan said.

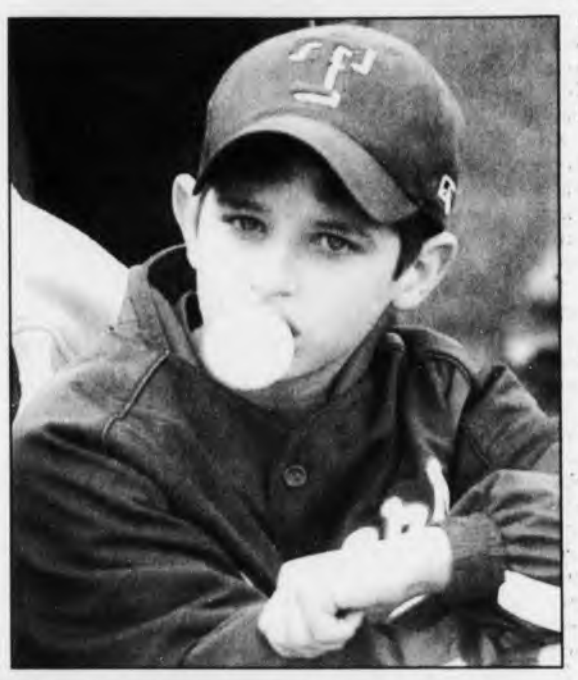
Cohasset's annual Little League Parade, sponsored by the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association, was held Saturday, April 30. It wasn't the greatest of days weather-wise, but that didn't damper the spirits of a number of young baseball and softball players in town.



The annual Little League Parade kicks off as it heads down main street in Cohasset on April 30. The parade ended at Barnes Little League Field on North Main Street with an awards ceremony.

YOUTH LACROSSE REPORT

Cohasset's oldest girls remain unbeaten; Boys split games over Mother's Day weekend

The competition keeps getting tougher and more experienced, but the results don't change for Cohasset's 15-and-Under (grades 7/8) girls youth lacrosse teams.

On Mother's Day, Cohasset White raised its record to 5-0 by dominating Duxbury 4, a team comprised entirely of 8th graders, by a score of 11-4.

Gabriella Flibotte – helping out on the White squad because it was shorthanded – got things off to a quick start in the rain, scoring twice on her first shift. Madeline Leahy upped the lead to 3-0 before Duxbury broke through. Katie Gaumer answered with two scores, and Cohasset squandered several opportunities and allowed Duxbury back into the contest with two goals, so the game went to the half at 5-3.

But Cohasset answered the challenge by scoring the first six goals of the second half. Flibotte finished a Leahy feed to complete her hat trick, and Hannah Burgess sandwiched a pair of goals around a hat trick from Isabelle Franklin, as Cohasset blew the game open.

Kate O'Callaghan had her best game of the year in leading the defense with Lauren Blaze, Lesen Haracz and Paige Smith. Thomson Jaffe made two saves in the net.

The Cohasset Blue 15-U team kept pace with its sister, raising its record to 5-0 by dumping Scituate 12-6. Gabriella Flibotte again opened the game with two scores on her first shift, answering Scituate's game-opening score. Kaley Madge, Katelyn Ryan and Maura Barnes scored in quick succession, before a short Scituate rally. Lindsay Allard worked a beautiful feed to Flibotte, to stretch the lead to 6-4, and Flibotte netted her fourth of the day to close out first-half scoring.

From there, Cohasset cruised, with Caitlin Mahoney scoring twice, Barnes adding a second goal and Flibotte finishing another slick feed from Allard. Flibotte added a sixth goal on the day for good measure.

Grace Clougherty made her first appearance of the season in the goal for Cohasset and stopped five shots. Mimi Mahoney, Natalie Hunt, Liz Tetrault and Megan Richardson anchored a defense that kept Scituate at bay most of the afternoon.

At the 13-U level (grades 5/6), Mother's Day was not quite as successful.

The Cohasset White 13-U team opened the day against Pembroke and might have gotten blown out had it not been for outstanding goaltending from Stephanie Brierly and Molly McElgunn, who combined to make 10 saves on the day.

Lindsay MacNaught and Whitney Jaffe scored Cohasset's two goals in the first half, but the home team trailed by 5 at the halftime break.

Pembroke stretched the lead to 10-2, when the sluggish Cohasset offense suddenly came alive. Jaffe sandwiched two goals around an Anna Michalowski direct-free position, and the count stood at 10-5 with eight minutes remaining. A Jessica Fusco goal made things interesting, before Eliza Kinnealey scored her first of the season, followed almost immediately by a Fusco-to-Paige DeSisto connection for another goal.

After clanging a shot off the post, Cohasset finally lost possession and ran out of gas. Pembroke added a late goal as Cohasset's defense stretched in a desperate attempt to catch up. The final score was Pembroke 11, Cohasset 8.

The Cohasset Blue 13-U team got off to a good start against their Scituate opponent, with Whitney Jaffe and Hope Kissick scoring first. From there, Scituate went on a three-goal run, which was stopped when Lindsay MacNaught drove from behind the net to finish a strong one-on-one effort.

MacNaught's second goal of the game gave Cohasset the lead, but it was short-lived, and the last time the team would be in charge all day. Three quick Scituate scores put Cohasset in a hole, and while Christina Healy closed the gap with a low, hard bounce shot, Scituate was able to sneak one more goal in to close the game out with a 7-5 win.

Molly McElgunn stopped five Scituate shots between the pipes for Cohasset.

The Blue 13-U squad earned some redemption on Monday, May 9, playing its best game of the season against a fundamentally sound Hull team.

Christina Healy, Olivia Murphy and Kaci Kucinski got Cohasset off to a quick start, before Hull broke through. Danielle Healy answered the Hull goal and Murphy and Whitney Jaffe scored to stretch the lead to 6-1 at the half.

The two teams traded goals throughout the second half, with Murphy finishing a hat trick, and Jaffe and Lindsay MacNaught scoring single markers.

Stephanie Brierly and Molly McElgunn each made two saves in a half of work, and the defense of Ellie Tedeschi, Cally Altholtz, Dylanne Axelson, Taylor Kennedy and Eliza Kinnealey made Hull work hard for each of its scoring chances.

The win raised the Blue team's record to 4-2. The Cohasset White 13-U team is 4-1-1 on the season.

Boys mostly washed out on Mother's Day; split vs. Scituate

Cohasset's youth boys players mostly got to spent the weekend with their Moms, as Marshfield wiped out a slate of four games against Cohasset due to poor field conditions.

But at Milliken Field in Cohasset, the 13-U (grades 5/6) Blue team slugged out a hard-fought 12-9 win over a previously undefeated Scituate team.

Cohasset jumped out to a 3-0 lead, but saw Scituate come back to tie it at after the first quarter at 3-3. It was 5-3 at the half, and 9-6 at the end of 3 quarters.

In goal, Chase Murphy and Thomas Flibotte played great in stopping a very big and physical Scituate squad. The goalies keyed several fast breaks by coming out of the cage and avoiding pursuers to turn Scituate scoring attempts into Cohasset opportunities.

Alec Hurd started the scoring, first finishing a feed from Christian Allard, then netting an unassisted goal. Morgan Grasz again played well both ways and had a goal and an assist. Jack Carrier scored in the first half on a nice cross-field pass from Gus Helbock, and Flibotte scored his 10th goal of the season to end the first half.

The second half saw four goals by Allard, and one each from by Charlie Neaves, Sam Richardson and Jake Durkin. Terrance Durkin and Alex Kinnealey, who saw action both at midfield and defense did an outstanding job helping to fill the team's needs at both positions, and Andrew Whitney returned to the field to play exceptionally well at middie.

The 15-U (grades 7/8) Blue team didn't fare quite as well against a quality Scituate squad, falling behind 4-2 by the end of the first half. The Blue players fought hard on an uncharacteristically cold day, but couldn't must any scores in the second half and wound up on the short end of a 6-2 final.

Andrew Smith and Dean Driscoll potted Cohasset's only goals in a day which saw a lot of good looks, but not many good bounces.

The Cohasset White and Silver teams will try to make up the lost games against Marshfield, and the Blue 15-U team has added two games to its schedule for the coming weekend, to give it ample opportunity to bounce back.

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be on going at the Town Hall for South Shore Soccer Camp's week long Soccer Squirts Clinic which begins Monday, Aug. 1, through Friday, Aug. 5.

Soccer ABC's for ages 4 and 5 will meet each day from 8 to 9:30 a.m. and the fee is $85 per participant. The fee includes a camp shirt and appropriated-size soccer ball for each participant, both available the first day of camp.

Complete the application from at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor Town Hall to register. Space is limited, so early registration is advised.

Boot Camp Fitness Training

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callahan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4, on Cohasset Common, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100 checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Callahan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, and push-ups.

Cheerleading clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the 3 day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee for this unique opportunity essential to anyone who plans to join the cheerleading squad, for either Fall or Winter sports, is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

New American Red Cross Learn-to-Swim Program offered at Cohasset Swim Center

This new Swim Program provides instruction to help swimmers of all ages and abilities develop their swimming and water safety skills. It is designed to give students a positive learning experience.

Learn-to-Swim teaches aquatic and safety skills in a logical progression. The objective is to teach people to swim and to be safe in, on and around the water.

The six learn-to-swim levels and the objectives for each level include:

Level 1 - Introduction to Water Skills: helps students feel comfortable in the water and to enjoy the water safely.

Level 2 - Fundamental Aquatic Skills: gives students success with fundamental skills.

Level 3 - Stroke Development: builds on the skills in Level 2 by providing additional guided practice.

Level 4 - Stroke Improvement: develops confidence in the strokes learned and to improve other aquatic skills.

Level 5 - Stroke Refinement: provides further coordination and refinement of strokes.

Level 6 - Swimming and Skill Proficiency: refines the strokes so students swim them with ease, efficiency, power and smoothness over greater distances. Level 6 is designed with "menu" options. Each of these options focus on preparing students to participate in more advance courses, such as Water Safety Instructor and Lifeguard Training.

These options include:

- Lifeguard Readiness
- Fitness Swimming

Learn-to-Swim is the most comprehensive and effective program of its kind available anywhere.

More detailed information can be found in the Cohasset Swim Center brochure along with the registration forms which should be arriving by mail the first week in May. Swim Lessons will be offered in three Two-Week Sessions. Session I: July 11 - July 22, Session II: July 25 - August 5 and Session III: August 8 - August 19.

Cohasset Recreation Department offers U.S.C.G.A. Boating Safety Course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a 2-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. U.S.C.G.A. instructors will teach the 2-session course, which will be held on 2 consecutive Saturdays, May 14, and May 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 781-383-4109, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on first call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Cohasset Sailing Club Registration

Please remember to bring your registration to the Club on Sat 5/21 or Sun 5/22 8 a.m.-1 p.m. to sign up for classes, dock spaces and membership. The goal is to make the registration process more efficient and timely, so come on down to the club, cheer on summer and sign up!

COASTAL STARS

Squirt C-2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 played their final game last week, the Yankee Conference Squirt Championship. Although they lost the game to Weymouth 3-2, it was a season to remember. The Coastal Stars C-2 team was the 2004/2005 Squirt North Division Champions in the Yankee Conference and runner up in the Championship.

The game was mostly dominated by Weymouth. With the score 3-0 and with 2 minutes left in the game, the Coastal Stars showed the fortitude that gave them a Season record of 24-5-2. They scored 2 goals within 20 seconds and played tough after pulling their goalie, Alec Hurd. However, the outcome was a seldom seen loss.

The Squirt C-2 team is to be commended for a phenomenal season, never losing 2 games in a row and never giving up, even when it was easy to do. The coaching by Charlie Mulrey, Mike Timcoe, John Kuppens and Dave Denton was the big reason for the year's success. Thank you coaches for your time, inspiration and a job well done.

As for the team, Mick Barry, hardest shot on the team, keep it going next year. Colin Bell, keep hustling and you will be a star. Chris Bjorkman, take note Pee Wees, you have a great defenseman coming up. Jake Denton, always looking to make a play, keep it up. Coleman Hernon, you will be a great player wherever you land next year in Pee Wees. Alec Hurd, you always came to play, have fun and rally the team with great saves, keep doing it and more Championships will follow. Adam Jackson, always a force, have a great second year in Squirts. Jack Kuppens, Mr. Coast-to-Coast, be well and keep up the great play. Nate Morse, quick skating and stick handling defined you, it will again I'm sure. Nicky Mulrey, biggest heart and fiercest competitor on the ice, take notice league, this firestorm will be a force next year. Brendan Queenan, you never let up and we all took note in the stands. Jake Timcoe, striving to be better all the time made your teammates better players, next year will be no different. Ethan Maher, most improved player on the team, if not for getting your appendix out, the outcome of the Championship could have been different. Tim Cavanaro, keep up your persistence, your mother and father will witness a lot more goals in the future.

As the scribe of these articles this year for the Squirt C-2 team, it was a pleasure and a privilege to cover this team. I felt every win and every loss. I will miss it, just not the 5 am games in Bridgewater. Best of luck to everyone, parents, coaches and players in next year's season.

Bouncing back

real improvement."

"We hammered out some great hits. We just couldn't string them together to produce runs," remarked Bostwick. "That's the difference between an experienced, first place team like Abington and a third-year varsity squad like ourselves."

Lack of experience failed get in the way of the Skippers when they bussed two days later into Carver Crusader territory. Just when you thought they hit the canvas for the long count, the Lady Skippers boomeranged back.

Pinkus started Cohasset off with a bang. She drove in two runs on her triple to right field. Spofford then sacrificed an out to score Pinkus. This play led to the Skippers opening an early 3-0 lead.

The Crusaders struck back in the bottom of the first with two runs of their own. The Skippers retaliated in the top of the second with four. Three of these four runs came from a Pinkus double. Laura Campedelli, Anna Haggerty, and Katie James all contributed to this offensive attack.

Aside from some strategic Carver base running (resulting in two more runs), the Skippers controlled this matchup. The outcome: a 7-5 Cohasset victory.

This time, the defense held its own as well. Pinkus, along with her 5 RBIs, pitched six solid innings. Haggerty, Casey Anderson, James, Spofford, and Liddell held together the infield. C.C. Chapman, Crowley-Buck, and Alida Tanglerini controlled the outfield with intensity absent in the earlier game against Abington.

Haggerty played her first game at the catcher position.

"It's very different from playing in the field," she said. "It will take time to learn, but I like the intensity."

Haggerty will take Anderson's spot behind the plate next year, as Anderson graduates this June.

"I was so proud of my team for finally coming together both offensively and defensively," said Bostwick. "This is a very good sign."

The Skippers scratched out a run on two hits in the top of the fourth, and the game remained 1-1 until the bottom of the eighth. With one out and a runner on first, Hull's nine-hole batter dropped down a bunt to sacrifice the runner to second. The throw to first went into right field, however, and Hull's runner on first never once broke stride and scored the game-winning run.

It was the latest in a number of close losses for Cohasset this season. The team has come up on the short end of two one-run games, one two-run game, and was tied with Norwell going into the seventh two weeks ago (before losing, 16-13).

Just like any other coach or athlete, Gallotta does not like to lose, but has found some silver lining in those losses.

"We have been a lot more competitive this season than we have been in the last two years," said the coach. "I think I can safely say we have arrived at the point where we can compete with any team in the league."

For the Skippers, it now is a matter of parlaying that competitiveness into positive results on the scoreboard.

"I do feel that they believe they can win on any given day," Gallotta said of his players. "Now, the next step is to get a couple breaks and win a couple of these games."

In terms of qualifying for the state tournament, Cohasset found themselves in a similar situation last year. The team was 4-9 heading into its last five games, again all non-leaguers. Cohasset won the first three, but a loss in the second-to-last game of the year against Sacred Heart ended their postseason hopes.

Will this year be different? We'll have the final answer in a couple weeks.

Depth carrying the way for girls tennis

"She really showed me a lot in her first varsity singles match."

The Carver match represents one of Cohasset's major trends this year: different girls contributing in every match. In addition to those already mentioned, the likes of Remy Lee, Emilie Shea, and Elizabeth Landon have gotten their share of court time over the course of the season.

Landon teamed with Garber to win a critical second doubles match two weeks ago against Ursuline. The Dedham-based private school has given the Skippers fits the last two years, handing them their only regular season loss last season and their first loss this year.

In the April 29 rematch at Ursuline, Stone and Curry put two quick points on the board for Cohasset, with Curry winning 7-5, 6-1.

"She played out of her mind in that match," Meehan said of Curry. "That was a really great win for her."

After Sally Meehan lost a tough match at third singles, Cohasset needed one more point from one of their doubles teams. Both Anderson/Shea and Garber/Landon lost their first set, but came in the second to force a third and deciding set.

The match was getting close to being called due to darkness, with Garber and Landon down in that third set, 2-4. Coach Meehan urged her second doubles team to put it away, and they did so in grand fashion, taking 16 of the next 20 points to win the third set, 6-4. Landon was ripping off backhand winners left and right, with Garber mixing aggressive shots and some lobs.

Meehan was happy to get the hard-earned win.

"I think Ursuline is a pretty comparable team to ours," she said. "It was a really nice match. Playing teams like them only makes us better."

After yesterday's match with Norwell, Cohasset travels to take on Falmouth this afternoon at 4:30.

State individuals tournament

The Cohasset girls tennis team will be sending seven athletes to this weekend's state individuals tournament in Hingham.

Stone, Curry and Lee will participate in singles, with the doubles teams of Anderson/Meehan and Garber/Shea.

Stone has advanced to the sectional final of the tournament the last two years, and figures to be one of the favorites to win it this season. Should she and other Skippers win a few matches this weekend, the competition continues next weekend.

10 girls qualified for state track meet

Although they have lost a couple close meets in the last week, the Cohasset girls track team has had 10 athletes so far qualify for the state Class D meet in Weston on May 28.

And that's on a team of just 15 athletes.

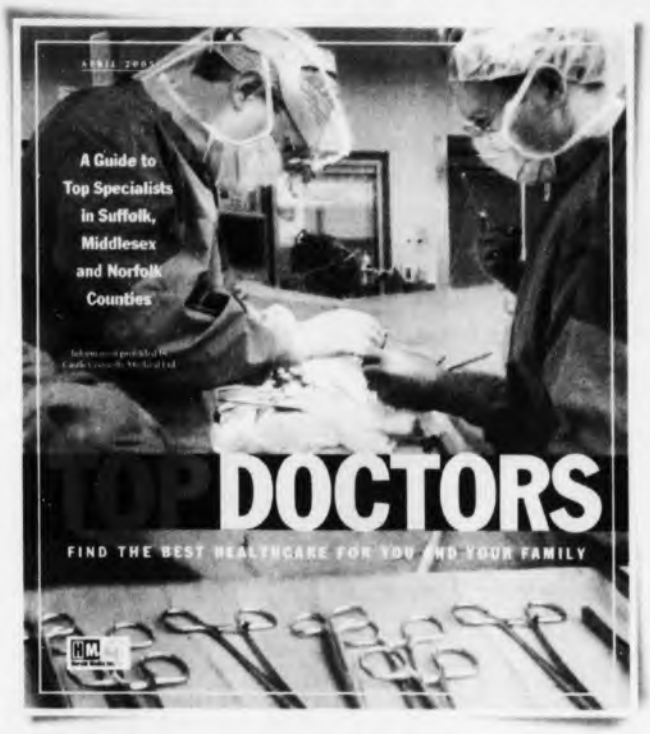
Nicole Whitney and Corinna Durham qualified during the Mashpee meet earlier this week. Whitney won the 200m and qualified with a time of 27.7, while Durham did the same in the 300-hurdles with a 50.4 time.

The 4x400 relay team also qualified, a team that includes Sara Malone, Durham, Lauren Strazzula and Whitney.

Against Abington, Whitney qualified in the 800m with a time of 2:29. Lindsay Kennedy did so in two events: the 100m dash (11.5 seconds) and 200m (27.9).

Other notable performers on the girls team of late have been Alyssa Hinman (two-mile, 14:06), Flossie Clougherty (javelin, 95'), Jen Daley and Mercedes Barnes-Jackson (hurdles), and Aileen Fortunato (shot put).

Although the boys have struggled in their last two team meets, they did get some quality performances. Against Mashpee, Brent Daly won the 200m and finished in the top three in the 100m, triple jump and long jump. Justin Alexander won the shot put against both Mashpee and Abington, with Paul St. Pierre winnign the discus against Mashpee.



Cohasset finished one-two in the discus against Abington, thanks to strong throws by Miguel de Los Santos (113') and Anthony DiPaolo (99-9). Other boys who have turned in solid performances include Adam Haracz (800m, two-mile), Mike Devlin (two-mile), Reed Wendorf-French (300-hurdles winner) and Colin Conway (discus).

The team hosts Carver on Monday, and this weekend is the State Coaches Invitational, with the girls competing in Plymouth and the boys in Lowell.

Latvian organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset is pleased to present organist Ingrid Gutberg in recital on Sunday, May 22, at 3 p.m. Dr. Gutberg has had an extensive teaching career, from the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, to Boston University. She annually tours Europe and the U.S. and is president of the Latvian Guild of Organists and the Latvian Heritage Foundation. She is the organist of the Covenant Congregational Church in Boston. Her recital will feature works by Latvian composers, played on the magnificent 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner organ of St. Stephen's.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset. Ample parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781-383-1083.

Amateur Gardeners meet Tuesday May 17

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, May 17, at St. Anthony's parking lot at 11 a.m. to car pool to a garden pool design center in Norwell. The last meeting of the season will be a trip on June 21, to the Plymouth County House of Correction Center's Plant Sale.

During the summer the center will have occasional meetings at member's gardens.

For more information call Martha Hurtig at 781-383-0530.

Lasagna dinner at GOP gathering

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee will host its spring dinner on: May 25, at 6:30 p.m. at The Second Congregational Church.

Requested contributions $15 includes lasagna dinner. Speakers will be Republicans who hold local political offices. Call Julie Guild at 781-383-6443 or Edythe Ford at 781-383-1648 to make reservations and/or for information.

Visit the Cohasset Republican Town Committee web site at http://www.cohassetrepublicans.com.

Sailing Club registration

Bring your registration to the Cohasset Sailing Club Saturday, May 21, or Sunday, May 22, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. to sign up for classes, dock spaces and membership. The goal is to make the registration process more efficient and timely, so come on down to the club, cheer on summer and sign up.

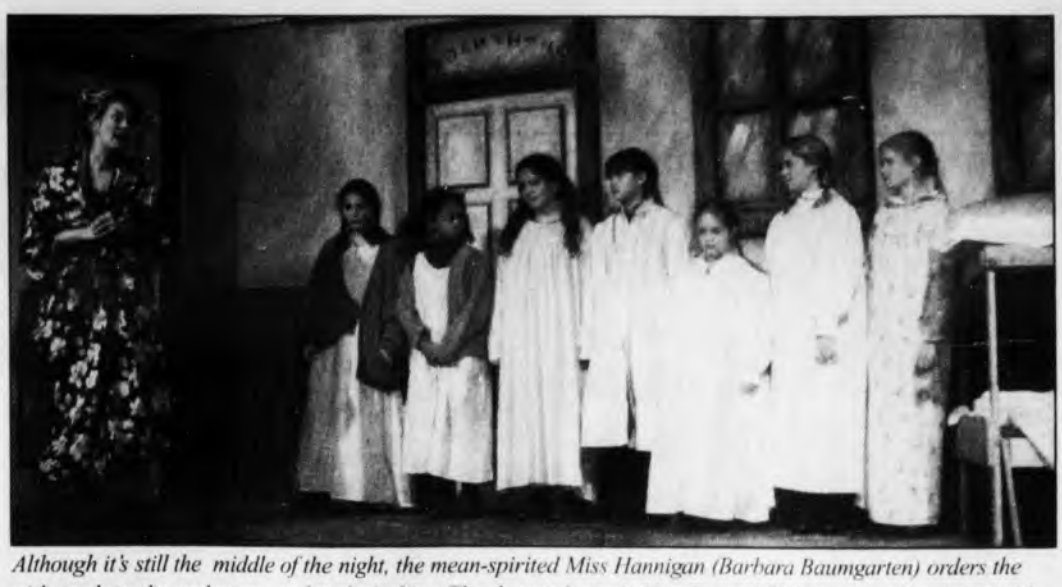
Pet spa open house

Bark Ave Hotel and Pet Spa, a new pet spa offering grooming and boarding, is celebrating its grand opening Sunday, May 15, from noon to 4 p.m. Pet owners can tour the hotel and receive special treats for their beloved pets.

The facility will offer a luxurious condo-like environment, expert grooming, special dietary attention, and an abundance of fun and exercise, along with a highly trained professional staff.

Owner/operator Arthur Logan, a Braintree resident, saw a need for an upscale daycare center and kennel providing all the creature comforts to pets, outside of the home. Bark Ave's mission is to provide high quality in every facet of pet care accommodations on a level people expect for themselves when traveling first class. The idea is to treat pet guests just as well as any luxury hotel treats their prized clientele.

Visitors and their pets are welcome to attend the grand opening.



Thriller on stage

The Cohasset Drama Workshop will present Henry James' psychological thriller, "The Turn of the Screw," on May 20 and 21 at 7 p.m., in the Cohasset High School auditorium. Tickets can be purchased at the door for $5.

For more information call Jenna, 781-378-1969 or email DramaWorkshop@aol.com

Annie (Whitney Jaffe), who finds herself lost and lonely, makes friends with Sandy (Rocky Egan), a stray dog, who continues with Annie on her journey.

Although it's still the middle of the night, the mean-spirited Miss Hannigan (Barbara Baumgarten) orders the girls to clean the orphanage and make it shine. The show is being held at Town Hall this weekend and next with the Friday and Saturday shows starting at 7:30 p.m. and the Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

Annie will steal your heart

CDC show continues at Town Hall

Photos by Ove Pygh Wilche

Annie (Whitney Jaffe) tries to leave but is caught by Miss Hannigan (Barbara Baumgarten), the mean-tempered spinster in charge of the orphanage. For tickets, please go to Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza or the Front Street Book Store in Scituate Harbor. The cost is $12 per ticket and for the Sunday shows, all Annie look-a-likes are encouraged to come dressed for a costume parade and prizes.

Over Miss Hannigan's objections, Grace Farrell (Kelly Magnusson) selects Annie as the girl to go to the Warbucks' home for Christmas.

Annie (Whitney Jaffe) is caught by police officer (Richard Chason) and is brought back to the orphanage.

At the orphanage, Miss Hannigan (Barbara Baumgarten) is furious that Annie has run away.

At left: Annie (Whitney Jaffe) shares her feelings about finding her parents to two other orphans, Molly (Madison Pratt) and Pepper (Grace Henderson) in the Cohasset Dramatic Club production of the popular Broadway musical.

Bundles (Doug Yeager) arrives at the orphanage where Miss Hannigan (Barbara Baumgarten) flirts with him. Meanwhile, Annie plots her escape by hiding under the sheets, so when Bundles leaves with the laundry Annie gets away.

Annie encounters Hooverville, where an assortment of unemployed New Yorkers are victims of the Depression in this musical set in the 1930s.

RECREATION

Summer drama workshop — The Cohasset Dramatic Club will provide Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Theater Program for children ages 6-16. Registration for "Alice in Wonderland" will begin on Monday, June 13, at the Town Hall Auditorium.

This year the cost of the program will be $350, which is all-inclusive T-shirts, a cast party and all other events that pertain to the program. Auditions will be held the week of June 20. Two evening sessions will be held the week of June 27, with the day program beginning the week of July 4. The program will tentatively meet Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The program will wrap up on the weekend of Aug. 5, with four performances.

Checks can be made payable to The Cohasset Dramatic Club. There are many roles for both boys and girls; however, this program must be limited in number, hence, registering Monday, June 13, may be essential. For more information call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Cheerleading clinic — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the three day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Summer registration — The Cohasset Recreation Department will have available at Town Hall, and coming home via school, the Summer Recreation brochure during mid-May.

Essential information regarding both Spring and Summer programs are available currently in the foyer of Town Hall.

Registrations for the 7 week Summer Playground program, Youth Tennis Lessons and Summer Drama Program will be held in Town Hall Auditorium starting at 9 a.m., Monday, June 13.

Registration for those three programs will be held Monday, June 13, Thursday, June 16, from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 3 p.m. as well as Tuesday evening, June 14, from 5 to 7 p.m. Registration for various Summer Sports Camps will begin during late April/early May. However, schedules by week for Baseball, Lacrosse, Basketball, Soccer and Cheerleading Camps are currently available in the Town Hall foyer. Each Sports Camp will have its own, individual brochure of informative packet.

Registration for the Aug. 22, Cheerleading Clinic must be completed by May 27, hence, you should register now for this unique opportunity for Cheerleaders for Fall and Winter Sports at Cohasset High School.

Currently, for Spring, you may register for a variety of after school Recreation Programs for youngsters aged 4 through Grade 5 at the Recreation Office.

Telephone registrations are now being accepted by calling the office at 781-383-4109 for the first session Dog Obedience classes and Safe Boating course for ages 12 through adults.

Registrations for both these programs are limited, hence early registration is advised.

Due to the success of the first session of Boot Camp, a physical training program held on Tuesday/Thursday mornings from 6 to 8 a.m. on the Town Common, a second session will be held starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4.

You may register via phone for this program as well. Other program information will be forth coming as it becomes available.

Artwork sought for Festival on the Common

Work can be submitted May 14–16th.

The South Shore Art Center will present Juried and Members' Art Exhibitions, June 17–19 during the 50th Arts Festival on Cohasset Common. The juried exhibition will be judged by Gene Dorgan, Associate Professor at the Art Institute of Boston at Lesley College, Stacey McCarroll, Director and Curator at the Boston University Art Gallery and Lecturer at Boston University, and Audrey Pepper, owner of Pepper Gallery, Newbury Street, Boston.

Open to all artists, the work must be original, completed within the last three years, and not previously exhibited at the South Shore Art Center or at the Arts Festival. Media categories in the juried exhibition include oil and acrylic, drawing and pastel, watercolor, print-making, mixed media/3D, color photography and black and white photography. A $10 fee is payable upon delivery of the artwork. There is no limit on the number of submissions. Cash and product awards will be given in each media category, ranging from $250-$75.

Work can be submitted May 14–16th. The Members' Exhibition is open to all members of the South Shore Art Center. Membership must be current through June, 2005 and memberships may be obtained or renewed when work is dropped off. Robert Siegelman, of the School of the MFA, Boston will judge the members' exhibition. Work can be submitted May 21–23. Seven awards, ranging in value from $200-$50 will be given. The work will be displayed under the tents at the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival, Cohasset Common, June 17-19. For an exhibition entry form and more information visit www.ssac.org or call 781-383-2787

Harrison high on razzle-dazzle of 'Chicago'

Broadway production plays Wang Theatre next week

The hit 2002 movie version of the Broadway musical "Chicago" did more than just sell a lot of popcorn, it also renewed interest in the stage productions of the Bob Fosse, John Kander and Fred Ebb Tony Award-winner.

"Shortly after the film opened, another national tour was sent out," explains Gregory Harrison who plays slick lawyer Billy Flynn in the "Chicago" road company that stops at Boston's Wang Theatre next week.

Gregory Harrison

"There's a whole new audience for the show thanks to the movie, and at least one third of that audience is under 25. This is definitely a direct result of the middle-American appeal of movies like 'Chicago' and 'Moulin Rouge.'"

Harrison — best-known for his starring roles on television in dramas like "Trapper John, M.D." and "Falcon Crest" and more than 40 movies-of-the-week — says that even without Renee Zellweger, Catherine Zeta Jones and Richard Gere, the Walter Bobbie-directed touring production, with choreography by Ann Reinking, has more razzle-dazzle than its celluloid counterpart. "Theater is just more magical. In this show, there is no fourth wall. The orchestra is on-stage and the audience is part of the show. The stage production is just better, sexier and funnier. And, I liked the movie very much."

Harrison is also fond of his character, the sartorially splendid defense attorney who turns two murderesses, Velma Kelly and Roxie Hart, into media celebrities. "Billy is endearingly manipulative and unapologetic. He's got a dirty job, but he does it well. He's manipulating people, of course, but he is still always nice to them which is something the audience appreciates."

What makes Harrison, 54, grateful is the chance to continue an acting career now in its fourth decade. "I can't imagine leaving show business. It wouldn't make sense for me not to be creative," says the California native and longtime surfer who now lives on the Oregon coast with his wife, actress Randi Oakes, and their four children. "It is hard to be away from my family, but it is just part of the dilemma of my blessing of being an employed actor."

"Chicago" will be at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, May 17-22. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.wangcenter.org.

LISTEN To Life

by John Kiefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

THE ABSENCE OF ONE SENSE SHARPENS THE OTHER

People have often conjectured as to whether blind musicians, such as Ray Charles, have a heightened sense of hearing. This speculation is based on the idea that the absence of the sense of sight serves to sharpen the sense of hearing. To find out the science behind this notion, Canadian researchers compared the hearing perception of people who lost their sight by age 2, individuals who went blind between the ages of 5 and 45, and people with normal vision. They found that people who lost their vision early outperformed those who lost their sight later, even when the speed of tones they listened to was increased by a factor of ten.

It is also important to remember that hearing loss is a physical health problem, not a mental health problem. Most often it is gradual and painless, developing so slowly that is barely noticeable. Are you or someone you love exhibiting the signs of anxiety and isolation that sometimes accompany a hearing impairment? Put your mind at ease and have a comprehensive hearing evaluation by a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, We're located at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We also have an office in Abington. PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. The study mentioned above also showed that people who lose their sight early in life are also adept at distinguishing between tones when they are either too close together in pitch or in succession.

Par for the course

Georgia golf resort lives up to Ritz-Carlton standards

Golfers look over the Great Water's 16 hole as they prepare to putt. Reynolds Plantation is close behind them.

By FRAN GOLDEN

LAKE OCONEE, Ga. æ We had reached the fifth hole of the sun-drenched National course on our first day of golf at Reynolds Plantation, which boasts five top-notch courses, when my playing partner, Jim, informed me that a stress-related knot in his upper back had disappeared.

I was surprised it took so long.

Any tension I'd carried into Georgia lifted the moment I entered this warm and welcoming place æ the elegant Ritz-Carlton Lodge, Reynolds Plantation on the edge of Lake Oconee, about an hour-and-15-minute drive east of Atlanta.

In the early 1900s, the plantation was a hunting and fishing retreat for the Reynolds family, which still owns the property. Inventor Mercer Reynolds Sr. dubbed his lodge "Linger Longer," reflecting the family's desire to linger just a little longer when it was time to leave the tranquil setting.

Tall pines, oaks and flowering dogwoods shelter this secluded peninsula where today the activities are plentiful but unwinding is the only priority. The stately 251-room lodge, with its grand lawn sloping down to the lake, looks and feels a world away (about 890 miles to be exact) from Boston's grande dame of hotels on the bustling corner of Arlington and Newbury streets, or its younger, trendier Ritz-Carlton sister across the Boston Common.

The inimitable Ritz service is the one similarity.

"We're a very different Ritz-Carlton," said Marketing Director Tim Pierson. "People come here to decompress," he said. "It can be golf, the spa, reading a book."

We came here to golf. Day one started early, cool and windy at the Great Waters course, a Jack Nicklaus-designed beauty where nine holes run along Lake Oconee. We were paired up with Jeff and Paul, a couple of West Coasters who explained they planned to play from the tips, or the rear tees, at a lengthy 7,048 yards.

You have to be a good player to handle this course from that distance (that fact the day started windy didn't help) and these guys were putting on a show, with long drives, chips that settled within a foot or two from the hole and putts drained from 25 feet. The beauty, or in some cases the agony, of the course is playing so many holes along the banks of Lake Oconee. That includes the 14th hole, a 152-yard par 3 æ 178 yards from where Jeff and Paul were hitting it æ with water on the right and a tee shot over a cove and onto a green that juts into the lake.

The course moves uphill and inland, then turns lakeward again, offering spectacular views of the waterfront homes that are a hallmark of this growing area. Golf & Travel magazine ranked Great Waters among its top 40 courses for real estate.

In the afternoon we shuttled over to the 27-hole National course, with its three sweetly named nines, Ridge, Bluff and Cove. This was instantly a favorite.

The Tom Fazio-designed National is reminiscent of New England golfing at its best. Picture The Ledges in York, Maine, or Red Tail in Devons, but even better. Elevated tee boxes look out onto rolling emerald fairways that carve through tall pines and oaks, then climb back up to elevated greens.

It was at No. 5 where Jim proclaimed he was relaxed and feeling great, his worries left far behind. He then promptly snap-hooked his drive into the woods.

After dinner one night, Jim and I strolled down to the 18th green to look out at the lake and up at the stars. Were the moon full, we could have done a little night putting.

We played The Oconee on our last day, a wonderful way to wind up. I defy anyone to find me a prettier group of finishing holes than the 16th, 17th and 18th at Oconee, where designer Rees Jones' features include streams, waterfalls and a signature wooden bridge that runs over an inlet connecting the 18th tee box to the fairway. It's a finish to remember.

New England golfers don't often think about Reynolds Plantation when they consider a trip south. They should.

Rates at The Ritz-Carlton Lodge, Reynolds Plantation are seasonal, starting from $180 per night for standard rooms (from $350 during high season, mid-March to mid-November); from $375 for cottages ($850 in high season). For reservations, call 800-241-3333 or go to www.ritzcarlton.com

Coming next week: Caribbean cruising

The grand staircase heads to the grounds and Georgia's restaurant in the Main Lodge.

Silhouetted against the sunrise-lighted Lake Oconee, bass fishermen cast their lines at Reynolds Plantation.

Oconee's signature 12th hole features the Golf Digest dream house on the ridge looking at the fairway.

Decision day looms

Two questions before the voters

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Saturday's ballot features only two questions, both of which if answered in the affirmative will raise taxes more than what is already allowed under Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a municipality can increase its tax levy from year to year.

But whether voters will be in a "yes/yes," "yes/no," "no/yes," or "no/no" mood remains to be seen.

Question One asks voters whether to allow the town to raise an additional $400,000 in a general override, which means the tax increase would become a permanent part of the tax base going forward.

Question Two asks voters whether to allow the town to borrow money by raising roughly $13.2 million through a debt exclusion to subsidize the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue and North Cohasset sewer expansion projects. Debt exclusions increase taxes during the term of the debt.

'If the override fails, it will be up to Town Meeting where the cuts are to be made."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

By state law, the dollar amount is not included in debt exclusion ballot questions. The logic being, while the total cost of the project is known, voters are actually voting on whether they are willing to add to the tax levy the annual cost of the debt service for that particular project, Town Manager Bill Griffin explained.

Polls will be open from 8a .m. to 6 p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, which is next door to Town Hall.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said judging by the number of absentee ballots cast, voter turnout could be low. Absentee

Ugandan missionary preaches in Cohasset

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

The Rev. Israel Ahimbisibwe sits with a feeling of contentment in the presence of his wife and two young sons.

He has been studying in America for nearly eight years but hopes to bring his education from some of the country's top universities back with him to his native Uganda.

The Ahimbisibwe family has been staying in Scituate since last fall and Israel preaches at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset and other Episcopal churches in the area.

Wearing traditional Ugandan dress, Israel's wife Dorcas holds on to her own culture while adapting to life in America with their two sons, Isaac 9, and Emmanuel, 8, who attend Scituate's Inly School.

St. Stephen's Pastor, the Rev. Cliff Cutler, has arranged the Ahimbisibwe's current accommodations and has welcomed him on the pulpit of his church.

"We are very grateful to the Rev. Cutler and the entire community of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church for making us feel so at home," Israel said. Before Israel's family came in November, he lived with nine different families in Cohasset.

"The people opened their homes to me and I was intrigued by the eagerness of the families wanting to host me," he said.

Israel has earned his master's degree in the Old Testament at Harvard University through a scholarship and will be working toward his doctorate at Rice University in Texas. Israel and his family will move to the Houston area the end of June.

The Rev. Israel Ahimbisibwe is staying in Scituate with his family.

Israel worked on a diocesan project last year involving AIDS in Africa and was able to visit and preach at 19 churches, including St. Stephen's where he met Rev. Cutler.

Israel said he found Rev. Cutler to be very "personable" and asked for his services in terms of his religious mission. Rev. Cutler agreed, finding him appropriate housing in Scituate and the promise to help in bringing the rest of his family over to live with him.

Before coming to the South Shore, Israel had accepted a

Cook units still a moving target

Special TM could be in land's future

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It will be at least two weeks before a new Request for Proposals will be finalized to solicit bids on the Cook Estate project. How the next phase of the Cook saga will unfold is anyone's guess, but there is a possibility a Special Town Meeting could be part of the next chapter.

Outstanding issues include the number of units the land can support and the various specifications that would make the project unique to Cohasset.

If the town cannot secure permits for the project by the time the clock runs out on the purchase and sale agreement with the Cook heirs, voters could be asked to approve borrowing $4.5 million for the town to buy the property.

"I'm concerned we're running out of time," said Selectman Chairman Fred Koed. "We can go on the fastest track and still not get our permits and have to purchase the property."

The purchase and sale agreement has a deadline of Sept. 15, with the option of three 30-day extensions. The town would be required to pay $20,000 for each extension, with the money deposited in an escrow account. That money could be recouped at the time of the sale.

The town is currently in the process of putting together a second Request for Proposals on the Cook property to solicit new bidders. Northland Residential, the first company selected to build on the site, had proposed building 95-units, but because soils cannot support that number of units as it had been thought, the project must be scaled back to allow wastewater to be treated on site for fewer units. Therefore, the project must go back out to bid to ensure all developers have a fair shot, pursuant to Massachusetts procurement laws.

"I think it's fair to say 45 is a pretty conservative estimate and 65 is pushing it."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

Once new plans are submitted, the Cook project would be filed under the Senior Multi-family

Fairoaks Lane to keep its buffer

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Fairoaks Lane residents can breathe a sigh of relief as the majority of selectmen voted against allowing development on a three-acre parcel of Cook Estate land on the their side of Sohier Street.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer cast the tie-breaking vote to move the project forward without including either the town-owned land or the three acres between the Mobil Station and Fairoaks as options to be developed. Selectmen Rob Spofford and Michael Sullivan were also in favor of keeping the parcels undeveloped.

"This is not my favorite thing to do, but I don't think it's workable," said Dormitzer, who had been in favor of conducting perc tests on the soils of both properties to explore how much development they could sustain. However, at the end of the day, he said he agreed with Sullivan, who said the controversy building on the Fairoaks parcel would engender isn't worth the potential financial gain.

"We've spent a year trying to get this project to go forward. If we want this project to succeed, we need to minimize controversy," said Sullivan.

The town is in the process of drafting a new Request for Proposals to solicit bidders for the Cook Estate. There are three parcels of land involved in the discussion. The Cooks own two parcels of land: 18.92 acres off Sohier Street across from Fairoaks and three acres on the other side between the Fairoaks and the Mobil station. The town has an 8.7 acre parcel near Stop & Shop that abuts the Cook property.

Selectman Rob Spofford said the board has a moral obligation to the residents of Fairoaks Lane who were told the land would remain as a buffer for their neighborhood and led them to support the Cook project at Town Meeting.

"I think if I was an abutter, I wouldn't be happy," he said, adding Northland Residential, the company chosen in the first round of bidding, has indicated it

"I'm building my dream home. But I'm not a builder and there are so many decisions to make on things I don't understand. Arch top or circle top? Double hung or casement? Fiberglass or wood? Corian or granite? So many questions. So overwhelming.

But now there's a place I can go for help sorting through it all: CCL Homescapes™. It's at Cape Cod Lumber in Abington and it's a spectacular showroom of custom millwork, windows, doors and kitchens. It's set up with products installed in home-like settings so I can see how it will really look — exactly what I need. Breathtaking windows and doors from Andersen®, along with a wide selection of kitchen cabinetry and countertops. The products I want and the experts I need to help me design my dream.

My home. My decisions. My showroom."

Pre-recorded meeting message may be a violation

School counsel said it was OK

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A pre-recorded message sent out by Cohasset Middle High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo over the Connect-ED technology system is stirring up questions of legality. What may have been intended to be an informational message to let parents know about an upcoming meeting may have violated campaign finance law.

The message, sent out Monday (May 16) informed parents of four activities to be highlighted for the week. It told parents of an informational meeting with the Preserve Town Services Committee Tuesday that would discuss the impact on both students and teachers should the override not pass at the ballot box this Saturday, May 21.

In addition, DeLorenzo informed parents of High School Arts Night and the upcoming drama production, and concluded by reminding parents of the time and location of the Special Town Election.

David Farrag, a member of the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers which opposes the $400,000 school override, said because the schools used a technology paid for with taxpayer dollars to inform the public there would be a meeting of a ballot committee registered with the town clerk's office, that is a direct violation of campaign finance laws.

"They can have an informational meeting on their own," said Farrag, adding the school department is within its rights to have its own opinions and share its thoughts at an open meeting, but where the line was crossed was becoming involved with the registered group.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh could not immediately be reached for comment, but School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said before the message was sent out, Walsh spoke with counsel who said if the technology was used as a way only of sending basic information to inform parents, the school would be abiding by the laws.

"There was never an intent to do anything illegal," Slanetz said, adding the superintendent was acting based on the fact that counsel said it was OK.

Slanetz added both Walsh and School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams were present at the Preserve Town Services Committee meeting Monday and the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers May 10 to provide the same information to both groups. "Every effort was made to ensure everyone had the same information," he said.

However, Farrag said Concerned Taxpayers was not given the opportunity to use the technology to inform parents of the date and time of its meeting.

The Connect-ED technology allows the school department to record phone messages and send them to the home of every student. The technology is new this year, and has been very useful in providing information to parents, especially during snow days and the recent incident at the middle-high school were a note and bullet were found, causing all students to be evacuated and sent home for the day.

School threat still under investigation

Officer Ed Bagley talks with Sgt. David Cogill (in the cruiser) in front of the middle-high school after last week's threatening note was discovered on Wednesday (May 11). A police presence continues at the school.

It's business as usual for Cohasset Middle-High School students — almost. While classes are in session and MCAS testing is carrying on, the presence of police on campus is a reminder of the threats launched against the school community just over one week ago.

Wednesday (May 11) just before 6 a.m., a member of the school faculty was opening the building for the day and found a note outside implying threats along with a bullet. Students were evacuated from the building and a thorough investigation was launched.

Police Chief James Hussey said the note and bullet have been sent off for forensic analysis to try to determine who is responsible.

"There has been a print lifted off the letter. The next step is to determine who it belongs to," said Hussey.

Hussey said the department is in the process of trying to match the bullet with firearms registered in the town of Cohasset as well as surrounding towns to see if that will provide any leads.

"Right now, we don't have a suspect," he said, adding any assistance from the public in the investigation will be helpful.

The police department has set up a tip line to help in the investigation and Hussey said so far the department has received a few calls, "But they don't give us any hard evidence." He said many of the callers have provided information based on rumors they have heard, which is good to know, but does not provide the facts.

Students were evacuated for the day May 11, but school was back in session the next day. Hussey said there has been a continual outside police presence at the building both in the morning and at dismissal. In addition, there are officers going into the school on patrol at various times during the day, completing spot checks.

"There has been a print lifted off the letter. The next step is to determine who it belongs to."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Hussey said the department is taking the threats very seriously, and not as a year-end prank. The last day of classes for seniors is Wednesday, May 25.

"At this stage, I don't want to make any assumptions. We're treating this as someone who put our school community in fear," he said, adding there will be a police presence at the school until further notice.

Hussey said as early as Monday parents will be sent home a joint letter from the school and police departments updating them on what has transpired and how the rest of this school year and next year will proceed. He said there will be new programs implemented for staff, students, and police to educate the community on violence prevention.

"Whether this was a hoax or someone planning to do something, an obvious act of violence took place," he said.

Hussey said with education, behaviors which are out of the ordinary can be recognized and an intervention can take place before an act of violence occurs.

Hussey said he and Walsh have also been going over the way the incident was handled last week to reflect on ways the situation could have been handled differently.

"I think we did a great job, but that doesn't mean we can't make improvements," he said.

An anonymous tip line has been established by the Cohasset Police Department and anyone with any information on the incident is urged to call (781) 383-1055 X1047.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Lacrosse camp field request

Selectmen have approved a request from the 21 Lacrosse organization to hold a lacrosse camp at Milliken Field for several days in August. However, with the new program Town Manager Bill Griffin said it makes sense to continually monitor the field for wear and tear.

Selectman Rob Spofford suggested the field maintenance committee get "re-energized" especially in light of the wet weather which has been prevalent this spring, to ensure the fields are not being over-used. Selectman Michael Sullivan said the field policies should be reviewed as well.

Docking charges may be too high

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he thinks $72 charge to hold skiffs and other small boats to the town dock at the harbor are too high and he has asked the Harbor Committee to take another look at the numbers.

"This issue has raised a lot more concern than it would have seemed," he said.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed agreed and said he has heard from many fisherman whose livelihood is being affected by the increase in fees.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he spoke with members of the Harbor Committee and they are not recommending any change in the fee structure. He said members of the committee will be present at the board's May 31 meeting.

Two ballot questions before voters Saturday

ballots are often a barometer of voter interest. By Monday, roughly 30 absentee ballots had arrived at the Town Clerk's office – much lower than usual, Douglas said. There are 5,149 registered voters in Cohasset.

While Cohasset is considered "override-friendly" in that citizens regularly approve overrides at the polls – the override campaigns can be contentious affairs, often pitting some parents against some empty-nesters.

But this year, the override campaign has been relatively quiet on both fronts. Those who stand to benefit from the sewer extensions appear to have no formal, organized campaign to pass Question Two, the debt exclusion, which would help pay for the sewer project by spreading 50 percent of the cost over the entire tax base. If that question fails, the users will pick up 100 percent of the cost.

Proponents urging the passing of Question Two, which stands to benefit the schools, has also been low key, although the Preserve Town Services Committee 2005 – a political action committee – sent a town-wide mailing urging a "yes' vote.

There are no "pro-override" or "anti-override" signs peppering the town and few have sent letters-to-the-editor urging a yes or no vote in recent weeks.

School Committee Jamie Williams hopes voters will vote yes on Question One to support the school system.

"The superintendent and the school committee have already made cuts and appropriations to eliminate a $500,000 deficit in the current budget leaving the schools with a level of service that is less than in previous years," Williams said. "A yes vote will maintain services only at this reduced level.

"As we move forward, we will continue to fight for our children's education with improved efficiencies in operations and increased sources of revenue. Our goal is to balance an excellent education for all our children with the limitation of diminishing resources, uncontrollable and increasing budget demands and increasing enrollment."

Griffin said if the $400,000 override question fails, a special Town Meeting will be needed prior to setting the tax rate and to adjust the budget back into balance.

"The budget was adopted at the April 2 Town Meeting with the override funds added in, with $360,000 placed directly in the school budget and $40,000 being placed in the building maintenance budget for both town and school facilities," he said. 'If the override fails, it will be up to Town Meeting where the cuts are to be made."

Griffin noted the general government side of the budget has already sustained several manpower reductions in the police, fire and DPW departments.

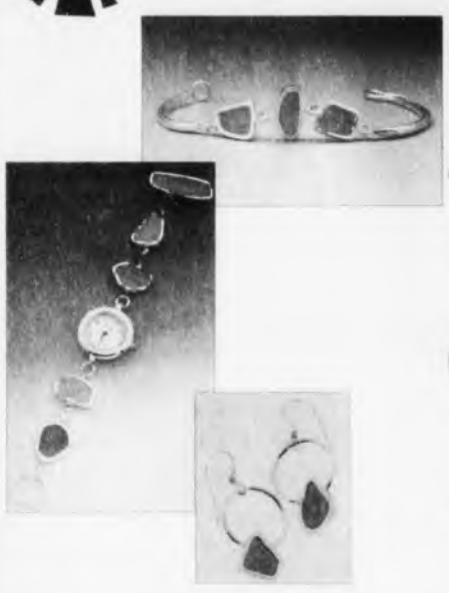
DiNero's Keno license hearing

DiNero's restaurant could come before the board of selectmen again in the hopes of being granted a Keno license.

Selectmen voted in June 2002 to object to DiNero's request for a Keno license, based largely on opposition from abutters and concern the restaurant does not have enough parking to accommodate the added traffic Keno could generate.



The request then went before the Massachusetts State Lottery Commission, which has the authority to issue the license. The lottery commission upheld the selectmen's ruling, and DiNero's did not receive a license. At that time, Gregory Sullivan, attorney for DiNero's, said the game would generate about $2,000 a week for the restaurant.

The restaurant has undergone a significant renovation process which has expanded the parking lot, and in light of the developments, selectmen agreed to hear the restaurant's request again. The restaurant needs to file another application to come before the board.

Cedarmere to break ground in July

New owners visit selectmen

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We just wanted to say hi and let you know we're excited about working with you and with the town to make this project a reality."
— Bill Gause, Leggat McCall Properties

With roughly two years of preparation and planning behind it, Cedarmere is forging ahead to the development stage. Groundbreaking is slated for July.

Representatives from Leggat McCall Properties, which purchased the fully permitted property from Cohasset residents David and Kelli Calhoun and their business partner Tom Ragno for $17 million in April, introduced themselves to selectmen Tuesday.

"We just wanted to say hi and let you know we're excited about working with you and with the town to make this project a reality," said Senior Vice President for Leggat McCall Properties Bill Gause.

The project is fully permitted under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay Residence District bylaw. Gause said there will be no changes made to what has been approved, including filing the affordable units for the project with the Department of Housing and Community Development as a Local Initiative Program project. LIP is the mechanism by which affordable units "count" with the state toward a town's affordable housing stock.

Prior to Leggat McCall's purchasing the property, a LIP application, signed by the board of selectmen, was sent to the DHCD, but came back with some questions. A subsequent application has been filed and Town Manager Bill Griffin said from what he understands, any questions left are minor and should be easily remedied so all the affordable units should count.

While Gause is excited about the development opportunity, its location in Cohasset is special to him on a personal level. Gause's grandfather, Dan Cotton, is a King Street resident, who served on the planning board for many years. In addition, Gause's mother grew up in Cohasset.

"I saw the opportunity come up and I know what a wonderful town it is," said Gause, adding he looks forward to bringing the development to fruition.

Plans for the site include building 105 units on 41-acres off Beechwood Street, of which 27 will be for-sale, one- and two-bedroom affordable condominiums, located in one building with four, for-sale market rate one- and two-bedroom condominiums. The rest of the project will be a combination of for-sale market rate townhouses and condominiums.

Gause said there will be a lot of site work to be done before construction begins, and he estimated the first units would be ready for occupants in the spring of 2006.

The project will be built in phases, beginning with the single and double units, said Gause, adding they will be built in relation to their demand. When all the first phase units are spoken for, construction will begin on the units in the Manor House, which will be centrally located on the site, followed by the affordable units in another building closer to Route 3A.

Boston-based Leggat McCall Properties has been operating since 1965. As a private real estate company, Leggat buys and develops properties in the Boston-to-Washington, D.C. corridor for its own account and on behalf of its partners and clients. The company has partnered with many local organizations to complete some high-profile projects, including renovations to Brandeis University, the restoration of the Trinity Church in Boston, and the expansion of the Boston Children's Museum.

A press release issued by Leggat McCall Tuesday, May 17 states the company currently has more than $600 million of assets under development, including One First Street, a 196-unit condominium development in Cambridge — the largest residential development in the city in five years. Since 1978, Leggat McCall has developed or acquired more than 7 million square feet, or roughly $2 billion of assets.

Selectmen not stuck on combined sticker

Town may return to two next year

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained for every $1 reduction in price for the senior citizen stickers the town loses $1,000 annually, and for every $1 reduction in regular sticker prices the town loses $2,700.

While residents will purchase one sticker for both the beach and Recycling Transfer Facility this summer, two stickers — one for the beach and one for the RTF as has been done in the past — is on the table for next year.

This year's combined stickers to park at Sandy Beach and Government Island and to get into the RTF have already been printed. Therefore, Director of Finance Michael Buckley suggested sticking with the single sticker this season to avoid the additional printing cost of new stickers and address the issue of issuing two stickers next year.

Selectmen agreed and approved maintaining the fee of $30 per sticker and reducing the rate for senior citizens from $15 to $10 per sticker.

Historically, Buckley said the town has tried to pay 50 percent of the RTF expenses through sticker and buck-a-bag revenue and 50 percent from the tax levy. Cohasset has a pay-as-you-throw program at the RTF where residents pay $1 for a 30-gallon bag or 50 cents for a 15-gallon bag to dispose of household trash.

"Until we converted to the pay as you throw, buck a bag program, we had been charging up to $100 for two stickers to the RTF and $7 for each beach sticker. Since then, we have been trying to reduce the rate charged for the stickers and did in fact reduce the rate every year except for 2004.

"The thinking was that the bag revenue should generate the 50 percent target and eventually the sticker fee would be reduced to a nominal sum. Last year, the decision was made to not reduce the fee because of the town's budget situation," Buckley wrote in a memo to Town Manager Bill Griffin.

Buckley explained during the meeting that for every $1 reduction in price for the senior citizen stickers, the town loses $1,000 annually, and for every $1 reduction in regular sticker prices, the town loses $2,700, which must be recovered.

During the discussion, selectmen said they thought it made more sense to have separate stickers as some residents that frequent the RTF may not use the beach, or vice versa.

"I like having two stickers," said Selectman Gary Vanderweil. "I don't think the bags should support the beach," he added. He said he has heard many complaints from residents who say they use one, but not the other, and many of the complaints are from seniors who say they rarely, if ever, use the beach.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he has received complaints too, as fishermen who purchase the stickers to enable them to park their cars on Government Island while they work are then allowed to use the RTF as well with the combined stickers.

"But it's a pain in the neck to have two stickers on your car," said Selectman Michael Sullivan, who was in favor of keeping the one-sticker system.

Selectman Rob Spofford pointed out it is too late in the season to change their minds anyway.

"Let's approve it. People are pining for their stickers," which have already been printed up in combination. The board agreed and Buckley said he will work with Griffin on potentially offering two stickers next year.

SEASIDE CAMP

The Center for Student Coastal Research will hold the Seaside Adventures summer camp again. This two-year old camp has returned for a third year and is now accepting applications. People can either reach the Center at www.ecscr.org or by email at seasideadventures@cscr.org . Another option is to come down to the Sailing Club sign up on May 21-22 from 9 a.m.-noon. Everyone is excited for the camp's third year and everyone expects good things.

RIDING FOR MS RESEARCH

A Cohasset resident is training hard in preparation for a 150-mile bike ride June 25-26 to benefit the Central New England Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. The 21st annual Great Mass Getaway (GMG) runs from Marina Bay on Boston Harbor to Provincetown to provide help for today and hope for tomorrow to people with multiple sclerosis by raising money for education, support, advocacy, and research Cohasset cyclist Nikki Caron of Beechwood Street will ride one of two courses, ranging from 150 to 175 miles, covering the distance in about ten to fifteen hours of riding time.

Each GMG cyclist agrees to raise a minimum of $400 in contributions, and pays a $75 registration fee. With more than 300 enthusiastic volunteers, the Saturday route follows the scenic South Shore coastline, and overnights at the Mass Maritime Academy in Bourne. Sunday's ride explores the unique beauty of Cape Cod en route to Provincetown. Cyclists are rewarded with a performance by comedian Jonathon Katz (who has MS) at the end of day one, and music by Lucky 57, plus food and festivities. After arriving in P'Town, cyclists dance their way back to Marina Bay on a ferry ride across Cape Cod Bay. Individuals and family or corporate teams can register or volunteer by calling the Chapter, 1-800-493-9255.

MEMORIAL DAY BARBECUE

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation is pleased to invite everyone for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks or coffee immediately following the Memorial Day Parade May 30, at Bancroft Hall on Government Island.

LAST CHANCE!

Consider coming to the Cohasset Dramatic Club's performance of "Annie"! The show is being held at Town Hall this weekend: the Friday and Saturday shows starting at 7:30 p.m. and the Sunday matinee at 2 p.m.

For tickets, please go to Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza or the Front Street Book Store in Scituate Harbor. The cost is $12 per ticket and for the Sunday shows, all Annie look-a-likes are encouraged to come dressed for a costume parade and prizes.

HOLLY HILL PLANT SALE

Holly Hill Farm begins its sixth season with its largest plant sale ever. The plant sale will take place rain or shine on Saturday and Sunday, May 21, and May 22, and again on May 28, and May 29, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., at 236 Jerusalem Road.

This year's plant sale selection features the usual medley of seedling vegetables, herbs and flowers plus several new varieties will be available.

FLOWER GIRLS

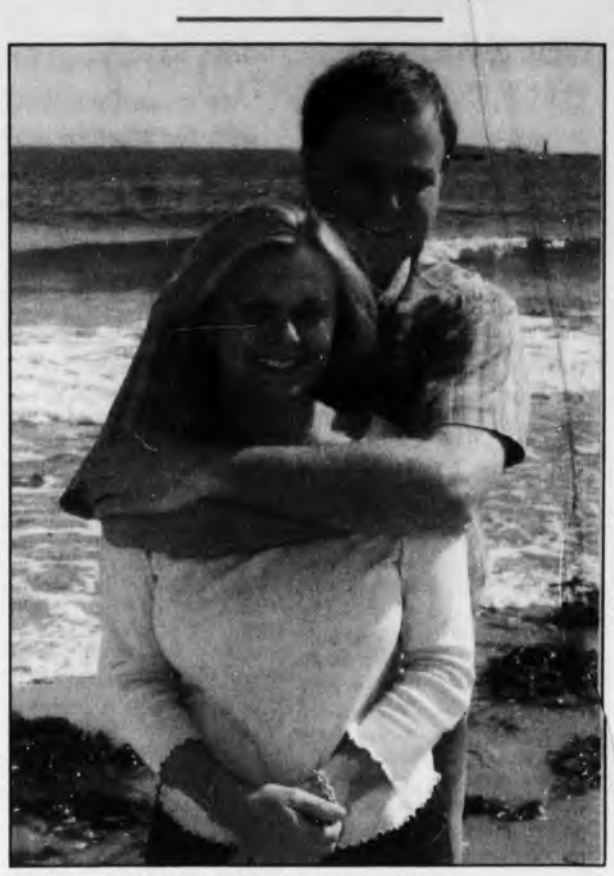

Girls ages 5-12 needed to march in the Cohasset Memorial Day parade. Girls will meet at 11 a.m. and march from the common down to the memorial on the harbor across from American Legion Post. Lunch will be served to marchers after the service. If your daughters, granddaughters or nieces are interested or if anyone has questions please contact Brenda Douglas at (781) 582-9387 or (617) 678-9137.

That is all the news for this week. Send in all your news and information no later than Tuesdays by noon.

Our World museum says Aloha to ukulele lessons

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The sweet sounds of the ukulele have long been associated with the Hawaiian islands and a few chords can conjure up images of grass skirts and coconuts. But for music teacher Jim Armstrong, another picture comes to mind. He knows the small instrument looks perfect in the hands of preschoolers, who see it as a pint-sized guitar great for rocking out.

This June, children ages four through six will have the opportunity to take part in four weeks of small-group ukulele lessons at the Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum. Armstrong and the museum are partnering together for the classes, which will teach children not only how to play the instrument, but how to work together to combine their sounds as a band. At the conclusion of the class, students will hold their own concert, complete with singing into microphones and signing autographs.

"The ukulele is just perfect for little kids," said Armstrong, adding it is a simple instrument to learn because there are only four strings and children are able to play one finger chords. In fact, he said at the end of their first lesson, children will know enough to be able to sing and play a song on their own, which is a real confidence booster.

During the four weeks, Armstrong said the youngsters will learn two traditional American folk songs and two international songs — "Frere Jacques" and of course, the traditional Hawaiian song, "Aloha oe." Because preschool-age children have limited reading abilities, they will be taught to play music that is repetitive and familiar, which won't require much reading of sheet music, he said.

Children who take the course will be asked to purchase a ukulele of their own from Armstrong. The ukuleles come with a nylon ukulele case, strap, tuner, picks, and a three-ring binder that holds all the songs and teaching materials they will need for the class. Armstrong said at the first lesson the instruments will be wrapped in paper and given to the children by their parents. Getting parents involved is "a very important part of the program," he said.

In fact, the idea to bring group lessons to the museum came from a Cohasset parent. Logan Bernstein, who is on the Our World Board of Directors had signed her 5-year-old daughter Delaney up for private ukulele lessons with Armstrong. While Armstrong said Delaney was very excited to see him every week, her mother reported she wasn't as interested in practicing during the week.

Like most children, Delaney said she would be happy to play the ukulele if her friends could play too, which is when the light bulb went off in Armstrong's head. He asked Bernstein if she thought other parents would be interested in signing their children up for group lessons, which would not only expose a larger number of children to music at a young age, but would provide an opportunity for the children to have fun forming friendships in the class together over music.

"Then, the kids could go home and practice in the neighborhood" and share what they have learned, Armstrong said.

Being on the Board of Directors, Bernstein suggested the classes be tied to the museum. She called Program Coordinator Michele Dupuis-Bolduc at the museum to plant the seed, and Dupuis-Bolduc said she thought it was a great idea from the start. The idea was formed in April, and it has taken some coordination to make the program possible. Now the museum looks forward to being able to host the new program next month.

Dupuis-Bolduc said the museum has the perfect space to hold the lessons — the Brooks Thomsen Singer Performing Arts Center. Singer, of Marshfield, was an avid guitar player who passed away in August 2003 at just 16 years old. The room was dedicated in his memory in October 2004. Dupuis-Bolduc said she has spoken with Singer's father about the program who said he "is delighted this is happening."

"It's nice to be doing something like this for the kids, but in his memory as well," she said.

From his own experience, Armstrong knows being exposed to music at a young age can spark a lifelong interest. He said his grandfather was a professional musician and introduced him, as well as his siblings, to music when they were very small.

Armstrong began playing the ukulele when he was 8 years old, and jokes his first introduction to the instrument was when his grandfather "conveniently" left a ukulele and instruction book at his house after lessons and other instruments were deemed "boring" by Armstrong and his siblings.

"We wanted to rock right away," he said, and sight reading while playing a recorder was not what they had in mind. However, the family was given permission to play with the ukulele until their grandfather came back to retrieve it and Armstrong was hooked.

The ukulele provided a wonderful stepping stone for Armstrong, who one year later began playing the guitar. He said making the transition from four to six strings was natural with the ukulele experience under his belt. "It's like going from a tricycle to a bicycle," he said.

Armstrong said he hopes the lessons at the museum will be well attended and that they can continue for eight weeks in the fall once school starts up again. He said his goal with these first four weeks of introductory classes is to spark an interest in music that will hopefully carry on for a lifetime.

"It means a lot to me to be able to pass this on to a bunch of kids," said Armstrong.

For more information, please contact course instructor Jim Armstrong at (781) 775-1039. The best time to call is Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. The charge for the class and instrument is $152.50 and checks can be made payable to Armstrong Events. Checks should only be made out after confirming a time slot with Armstrong in one of the classes.

Beginner ukulele lessons for ages 4-6 at Our World

Who: Jim Armstrong, a well known guitar teacher on the South Shore.

What: Ukulele's are just the right size for preschoolers and are much easier for small hands to play. Children will be able to play a song after only one lesson.

Where: Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St., behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

When: For four weeks, there will be morning and early afternoon sessions on Mondays and Tuesdays starting Monday, June 6 and Tuesday June 7.

How much: $152.50 includes four weekly classes at $25 per class per student, $50 to purchase soprano ukulele case, tuner, strap, picks, and three ring binder containing all songs and teaching materials to be used by students, and $2.50 Massachusetts sales tax on ukulele and materials.

More information: Class instructor Jim Armstrong can be reached at (781) 775-1039. Best times to call are Monday through Thursday 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Earth-friendly exhibit to open

The Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum has purchased the former traveling World Wildlife Fund exhibit "Biodiversity 911: Saving Life on Earth," which will be on display in time for the museum's grand opening celebration this October.

Program Coordinator Michele Dupuis-Bolduc anticipates the exhibit will arrive in pieces at the end of this month, and will gradually be put together for the display, which will be showcased in the upper level of the museum.

The exhibit, which has traveled around the US for the past three years, takes visitors on a journey through forests, coral reefs, soil, and much more. The centerpiece of the exhibit is the Biodiversity Theater which features a film produced by Aardman, the Academy Award-winning creators of the Wallace and Gromit characters as well as the film, "Chicken Run."

There are also interactive areas which provide computer simulations, larger-than-life models, video clips, and hands-on games.

Dupuis-Bolduc said the exhibit is valued at $1.25 million, but the museum was able to purchase it for $40,000.

In October, the Our World Global Discovery Museum opened its doors for business every Wednesday. Since then, operation has expanded to Thursdays, and both days the museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"We've had lots of kids. It's been great," said Dupuis-Bolduc, adding the museum averages 40 children every day it is open. "We're very busy in the morning and the afternoon."

Dupuis-Bolduc said currently, arts and crafts projects are held every week which concentrate on the "culture of the month." This month the featured culture is Mexico and last month was Costa Rica.

For the months of July and August, themes will coincide with the children's programs at the South Shore Music Circus, which will allow families to make a day out of going to the museum and the music circus, located just up the street. A theme has not yet been decided on for June.

For more information on the Our World Children's Discovery Museum, please contact Michele Dupuis-Bolduc at (781) 383-3918, or visit the museum's Web site at www.ourworldcgdm.org. For more information on the "Biodiversity 911" exhibit, please visit its Web site at www.biodiversity911.org

Ross Lieb-Lappen wins leadership award

At Middlebury College's Public Service Leadership Award dinner April 19, two students received the John M. McCardell, Jr. Award for Public Service. A $300 donation will be made by the college on behalf of each award recipient to a nonprofit organization designated by the student.

Lieb-Lappen is also a member of the New England Division Task Force for the "Relay for Life," a group of 30 people that provide resources for the 175 relays taking place in New England.

Cohasset resident and Middlebury College student Ross Lieb-Lappen requested that his $300 be donated to the American Cancer Society "Relay for Life." Ross Lieb-Lappen, and Meg Young, from Colorado Springs, Colo., coordinated the American Cancer Society's "Relay for Life" fundraising event held April 29 and 30 at Middlebury.

Young and Lieb-Lappen co-chaired the first American Cancer Society "Relay for Life" at Middlebury College in 2004 and served again this year as co-chairs for the two-day relay. Young and Lieb-Lappen were responsible for making Middlebury the first and only college campus in Vermont to host the event. Last year, Young and Lieb-Lappen helped organize 46 teams of Middlebury volunteers who raised $83,369. This year, the two have marshaled 71 teams for Middlebury's relay, including more than 680 people, who have raised $95,253 to date toward their goal of $100,000.

Young and Lieb-Lappen developed a committee to plan the event. Lieb-Lappen and Young traveled to Burlington for meetings and training sessions with the Vermont American Cancer Society. They also held monthly committee meetings, organized the work schedules for other committee members, met with college officials to sort out logistics, and, served as liaisons between the college and the American Cancer Society.

Lieb-Lappen is also a member of the New England Division Task Force for the "Relay for Life," a group of 30 people that provide resources for the 175 relays taking place in New England.

Lieb-Lappen's first efforts on behalf of "Relay for Life" began during high school, and Middlebury's relay grew from the expertise he gained during that time. This year at Middlebury, Lieb-Lappen has also initiated the new student organization, Dialogues for Peace, which discusses and responds to issues of global conflict. He is the organization's treasurer. He helped organize two symposia that addressed conflict issues – one, last October, regarding Bosnia, and the other, about Chechnya, took place in March. A Middlebury Mountain Club guide and a MOO leader, Lieb-Lappen also coached basketball this winter for a grades four through six team, practicing three times each week and competing in 12 games. He also volunteered on Middlebury College's public service-oriented alternative spring break trip to El Salvador this year.

Local resident Ross Lieb-Lappen (right) and Meg Young each receive the Middlebury College John M. McCardell, Jr. Award for Public Service.

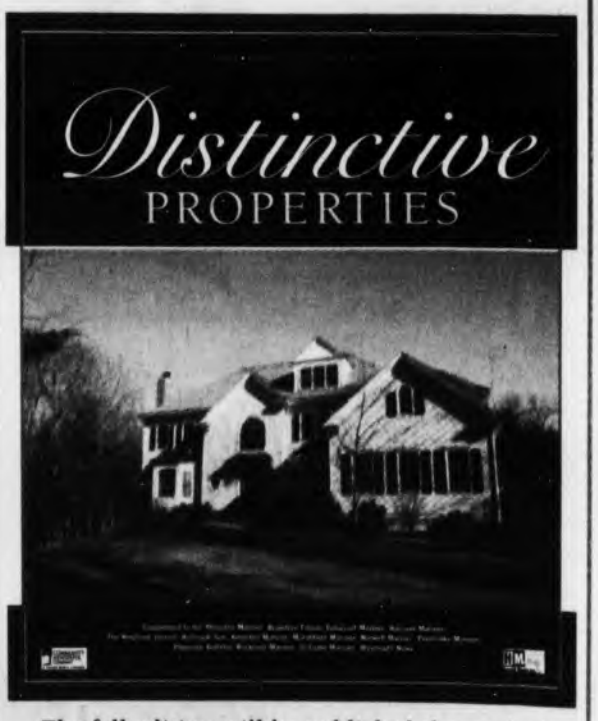
"NOW, SHE LOVES TO LISTEN TO ME"



Frankly, I thought she was really getting tired of me and I was quite concerned at how things were going. She always seemed to "snap" at me. I knew that she missed a few words here and there, but, I didn't know that she couldn't hear me very well, at all. The people at Mass Audiology were able to show us just how little she heard and how much better her hearing could be. It was amazing and we are both so glad that we called. scholarship in 1997 to Princeton University to further his Biblical studies that began as an undergraduate in Africa. But until last year, none of the academic programs he attended allowed Israel to bring his family with him.

"Either I come alone, or I don't come at all," he said about the international student policy at Princeton.

Leaving his country was hard, he said, but the gift he will one day give back to the people of Uganda is worth the many miles in between them right now.

"I will teach," he said about journeying back to become a professor. "I will go back and teach those people who can't make it to the U.S."

And prior to November, when Israel's family came to the US for the first time, being apart from her husband of 10 years was hard for Dorcas to get used to.

"We had never been apart before," she said.

"I will teach. I will go back and teach those people who can't make it to the U.S."

— The Rev. Israel Ahimbisibwe

For his children, not having their father around left many questions and eagerness to hear about his experience in a foreign country.

"They wanted to know everything," Dorcas said about Isaac and Emmanuel.

During his time away, Israel said he spent an average of $72 a week on long distance phone bills to keep in touch with his family.

But getting his family to the U.S. was even more of a burden as well as a long, difficult process, he said.

"Since 9/11, the rules have been so stringent," he said. "They are very suspicious, and the American Embassy has become very critical and want a lot of details."

According to Israel, the application process requires that those coming to the United States have secure funding in both living and medical care, which the Ahimbisibwe family has fortunately been aided in from charitable community members.

Residents of a condominium along the Driftway have offered their residence to Israel and his family and even handed over the keys to their car, while they spend time in their Florida home.

Dorcas' keeps busy taking part in weekly Bible studies at St. Stephen's, and Isaac and Emmanuel are enjoying their classes at the Inly School.

"They listened a lot at first," said Inly School Principal Donna Milani Luther about their mid-school year transition into their new surroundings. By coincidence, the children even got to meet with an exchange teacher from Kenya who was visiting the school and giving the students lessons on cultural studies.

"The cultural exchange is so rich, it's worth it," Milani Luther said the everyday interactions both Isaac and Emmanuel have with the school.

"He's a pleasure to have in the classroom," teacher Margie Morgan said about Isaac as he huddled around a group of other classmates working on an activity. "He's adapting really well."

Teacher Monica Curley said Emmanuel has had similar success.

"It's like he's been here forever," she said. "He's just fitting right in."

But because Israel will be attending Rice University in Houston to get his Ph.D. through a doctoral program in Hebrew Bible studies, the Ahimbisibwe's will be on the move together again at the end of June. Their stay in Texas should span five years after which the family plans to return to Uganda — a country of 24 million.

"The fun part of this is that is has been an enriching experience," said Israel, noting the great difference in cultures. "It has been give and take."

Coming to America, the Ahimbisibwe's knew some English already as well as other languages including Kikiga and Swahili, a common language in Tanzania and Kenya, according to Dorcas. In the 1970s and 1980s Uganda was notorious for its human rights abuses during the military dictatorship of Idi Amin, but has now been under more democratic reform with current president Yoweri Museveni.

While he looks forward to returning home sometime soon, Israel said he knows is neighbors will have many questions for him about America and concerns concerning the war in Iraq.

"I never want to answer those questions," he said.

Still his experience and that of his family has been enriching so far. From trips to Boston's museums to seeing snow – a lot of it – for the first time, they will have much to share with friends and family in Uganda.

"We wanted this to be an orientation, and it has paid off," said Israel.

Israel's wife, Dorcas, will speak at 10 a.m., May 26 at the Paul Pratt Library on the relationship of Christian churches to family life in her hometown, Mbarara.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Craft market idea floated

The Craft Market Committee has withdrawn a request asking Town Manager Bill Griffin for permission to hold a weekly craft market on Cohasset Common from early July through mid-August. The market would be modeled after the Farmer's Market but would be held Saturday mornings from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., with the alternative of Tuesdays from 2:30 p.m. until 6:30 p.m.

Griffin said the group won't be ready for this summer but did ask for feedback to see if the town would be receptive to such a program beginning next year. Selectmen thought it would be a good idea but that it would make sense to hold it Thursdays while the Farmer's Market is going on. However, the Farmer's Market organizers would need to be in the loop before a decision is made, selectmen said.

TM Griffin pitches at opening day

Selectman Rob Spofford said opening day for the Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association's Little League teams was a huge success and "Went off without a hitch." He thanked Glenn Pratt for lending his vintage fire engine for the day as well as Town Manager Bill Griffin for throwing the first pitch, which was a "strike right down the middle."

Griffin played baseball in high school and was recruited to play the sport at Providence College. Griffin also played for two years on the Cape Cod Baseball League, a summer league for college players.

Selectman Michael Sullivan joked with Spofford and asked why he didn't throw out the first pitch. "Were you worried you couldn't throw a strike?"

"I didn't have to, my daughter does," quipped Spofford.

Second Amended Judgment changes

Selectmen will discuss a possible proposed amendment to the Second Amended Judgment with Town Counsel at its June 7 meeting. The Second Amended Judgment has led the town to work on a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area of town. The Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, and the town reached an agreement with the state to supply modern wastewater treatment. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment, and plans to clean up the area have been in the works ever since.

MBTA liaisons receive kudos

With tree clearing taking place in the Greenbush rail bed, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said MBTA special assistants Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan have found themselves very busy lately. Dormitzer said he was informed some power lines were inadvertently cut during clearing which led to power loss at a residence, and Gruber immediately went down to the property and made the calls to remedy the situation.

"I just want to let people know they're doing a great job and people can call them if they need help," said Dormitzer.

Gruber and Brennan will be providing a Greenbush update at the Tuesday May 24 selectmen's meeting, which will be held at Town Hall. The meeting will also be televised.

Reorganization of sewer commission

At its Monday, April 25 meeting the sewer commission reorganized. By unanimous vote, the commissioners chose to continue in the roles they have served in over the past year. Raymond Kasperowicz will remain as chairman, Sean Cunning will continue to serve as vice chairman, and John Beck will remain as clerk.

Overlay District, a permitting process that could take up to nine months. That means even if a bid was awarded this week, the town wouldn't meet the deadlines in the purchase and sale. Therefore, to ensure the town maintains control over the property, but the Cook heirs receive the money for the property which has been earmarked for various charitable organizations at the wishes of Jane Bancroft Cook, the town could opt to purchase the property and buy itself some time.

However, the town would need to borrow the $4.5 million to purchase the property, which would require a Town Meeting vote. Town Manager Bill Griffin said it would take roughly five weeks to prepare for and hold a Special Town Meeting.

But getting the new RFP out in a timely fashion is still a top priority.

"We have one last shot. This is it. The last RFP needs to be specific enough that this project gets done," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

It is still not clear how many housing units an on-site wastewater system at the site could handle.

Northland Residential, the developer selected during the initial bidding process, has said it intends to participate in the new RFP process. Northland said the site can accommodate 65 units.

Town Manager Bill Griffin met with engineers from Coler & Colantonio and John Cavanaro Consulting, who completed original perc tests on the site, as well as Health Agent Joseph Godzik who witnessed the tests. He also met with Daniel Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates.

Griffin said after reviewing the data, engineers said there could be between 45 and 65 units built on the site. "I know that's a pretty wide range, but I think it's fair to say 45 is a pretty conservative estimate and 65 is pushing it," he said, adding it would be his best guess to say between 50 and 60 could be accommodated.

Selectman Rob Spofford said there is another potential bidder who has shown interest in the property who might be able to build all 95 units as had been originally planned, because he owns a parcel of land contiguous to the property that could potentially serve as a leaching field for more units. He suggested that while a minimum number of units be specified in the RFP, capping the development at 65 units, which was suggested by Selectman Gary Vanderweil, might not be in the town's best financial interest.

However, Selectman Michael Sullivan asked whether the town could have problems with the state's procurement laws if one of the bidders has more flexibility due to owning a contiguous parcel of land, which could make the playing field uneven. "If he has other land, is it unfair?" he asked. Griffin will check with town counsel on the matter.

With the number of units the land can support in question, bidders will be asked to give various cost estimates depending on the number of units they think they can build. They could be asked to provide a price for 44 units, 55 units, and 65 units and any other numbers, with design plans for each.

Selectman Chairman Fred Koed pointed out there is no guarantee even 45 units can be built on site.

In addition to the number of units, Dormitzer asked the board to consider ways the project could be more environmentally friendly.

Spofford agreed and said, "We should try to have it green where possible. It'll cost more, but you may get your money back in the long run."

Dormitzer said there are things that can be done within the development that would be easy changes to make and would help with efficiency. Using a significant amount of insulation, having the units either face the south or west to allow for the most sunlight, using energy-efficient appliances, and perhaps solar panels.

Dormitzer said being green could also be done passively, such as using granite or other materials that absorb heat, "And that doesn't cost you a penny."

The board decided specific energy saving measures would be left up to the developer, but points would be awarded for incorporation.

Dormitzer also said he would also like to see visual and audible screening in place to give privacy to those who will live there, as well as social areas and warm outside lighting. "Rather than having it look like Star Wars, like something has landed up there."

The new RFP could be sent out within a month, then the town will accept bids for 30 days. However, in the event there are no suitable bids, the town could opt to purchase the land and send out another RFP at a later date. Even with a suitable bidder, members of the board have said the September deadline is almost impossible to meet, and it might be in the town's best interest to try to schedule a Special Town Meeting over the summer to approve the town's purchasing the land.

Fairoaks Lane to keep its buffer

intends to bid on the project again and could build 65 units without using the town or Fairoaks parcel of land.

However, Selectman Gary Vanderweil said land on the Fairoaks side could accommodate two homes. He said the view of the "scrubby woods" would be improved with some nice looking homes. In addition, the revenue from the homes would help defray the costs of the development on the other side of the street and potentially a greater number of rental units could be offered.

But Dormitzer pointed out Town Meeting approved only the building of senior housing on the Cook property. Changes would require another Town Meeting vote.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said building on the Fairoaks side property could be the only feasible way to make the project happen.

Dormitzer echoed that sentiment during the meeting noting building on the three acres could be the tradeoff the town needs to add more rental housing. With a decreased size of the project and a potential minimum unit number set at 45, the 25 percent affordability threshold required under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District bylaw could translate into only 12 affordable units.

"We've spent a year trying to get this project to go forward. If we want this project to succeed, we need to minimize controversy."

— Selectman Michael Sullivan

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., wasn't happy with Vanderweil's opinion. "I think the board ought to get in step, particularly the new member. This is a redesign of the RFP, not a re-write," she said.

Joe Nedrow of the senior housing committee who also lives on Fairoaks Lane, spoke on behalf of his neighbors. "If this property gets put back into the RFP, the Fairoaks neighborhood will lead a charge to appeal," he said.

When the first RFP went out, the three acres near Fairoaks were designated as open space and were not an option for development. The town's parcel was included in the purchase, but developers would deed the property back to the town to serve as a permanent buffer.

Sullivan made a motion to leave the town and Fairoaks side property out of the transaction in the new RFP and it was approved by a 3-2 vote.

OUR CLIENTS LOOK GOOD IN PUBLIC BECAUSE THEY TRAIN IN PRIVATE.

Joe Palumbo

At 41, I had reached the stage where I was starting to talk myself into accepting the fact that my suits no longer fit, my back was starting to ache from time to time and I just worked too hard to "find" time to exercise.

After just about one year of consistent work, Fitness Together has helped me to achieve a huge turnaround in my personal fitness. I have dropped just about 20 pounds, have developed overall body strength, have way more energy and my back feels great.

Finally the biggest key has been the level of accountability. The one on one nature of the program forces you to meet your goals because you know there is someone there keeping you to task. The regular assessments with updated facts, figures, and charts help you see your progress over time.

Instead of wasting money and time at some huge gym, where I was on my own to figure out what to do, with little real help from staff, I have invested in a place that supports and develops my personal fitness goals.

The staff at Fitness Together motivates me to meet my goals, teaches ways to meet those goals and most importantly holds me accountable for results.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Override friendly

From where we sit, the "O" in Cohasset, could stand for override.

The town has been in an override-mode to balance its budget for years.

It's no secret that Cohasset has high property taxes – but that is due, in large part, to its small commercial tax base. Therefore, the town has to rely on taxing its residents to pay for public services and education.

While other towns around us have rejected overrides this year, override opponents shouldn't be too sure that Cohasset voters will follow suit.

When did Cohasset act like any other town? It's uniqueness isn't limited to its rocky shoreline, theatrical heritage or ocean vistas.

Cohasset is chock full of individualist people who pride themselves on independent thinking and challenging the status quo.

We're not complaining, the quirkiness of this town has provided us with great copy over the years.

So Saturday's vote is anybody's guess. Will voters say "yes/yes," "yes/no," "no/yes," or "no/no"?

If we lived in the UK – where gambling on just about anything is popular -- the local betting stations would probably be taking wagers and doing point spreads on the election.

Cohasset could also be a model for the "mini-override." While asking for $400,000 isn't small change – other towns, like Norwell, for example went for $2.2 million in one fell swoop. Norwell voters turned that number down last weekend.

According to the Municipal Advocate, which cites its source as the state Dept. of Revenue, Division of Local Services, 224 communities have passed at least one override since 1990. Debt exclusions were not part of the tally.

By our count, we have Cohasset passing 11 overrides; but this publication has the town at 10.

But interestingly, while Cohasset is among the towns that have passed the most overrides – its grand total is on par with some communities that have gone for fewer overrides, but asked for more money each time.

We guess the lesson here is there isn't all that much difference between, let's say Dover (9 overrides for $2.3 million); Weston (7 overrides for $3.6 million); Hingham (3 overrides for $2.1 million); Scituate (2 overrides for $2.3 million), and Cohasset (10 overrides for $2.5 million).

It's not often that Cohasset overrides are held at special elections and not at the regular town election. That may be why there seems to be less excitement for this override contest than in prior years.

We're sure those affected by the sewer question will turn out, as well as concerned parents and grandparents worried about the impact on the schools.

If we were betting people, we'd tip the scale toward a "yes/yes."

But our prognostication is just that. The important thing is that informed citizens head to the polls Saturday and let their voices be heard.

Overrides don't have to be a fact of life. Prop. 2-1/2 provides the taxpayers with the ability to make the decision.

The responsibility rests with you the voters, so do the right thing. Think about what's best for your pocketbook and the future of Cohasset. The choice is yours.

Please vote yes on override

TO THE EDITOR:

Nobody likes overrides, but the Town Departments and the Schools have already cut their headcount and discretionary spending to minimize the amount of this one. The cuts in state funding, increases in out of district special education and facilities costs, and growth in school enrollments are all contributing factors.

The Town Manager and Superintendent are working to address these issues, including making efforts to modify the teachers' contract to be in better alignment with Prop 2-1/2. That is why the override has received widespread support and Gary Vanderweil, Donna McGee and Dick Avery, among others, have indicated their intention to vote yes. Please vote on Saturday, and please vote yes.

PSO appreciates telethon support

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset PSO Telethon and auction fundraiser has ended and with much gratitude, I would like to thank everyone who helped to make this event so memorable. We net more than $23,000 for the schoolchildren in Cohasset! This money will be used to help enrich the school curriculum by providing funding for much needed items such as library books, educational materials, art supplies, teacher grants, Connect Ed, assembly programs and guest speakers, etc...

The evening of the telethon had a lot of energy from "opening night jitters" to waiting for that first pledge amount announcement! The performances were truly outstanding. We are all so very proud of each and every performer and the comaraderie they shared with one another behind the stage. It's not easy to be live and televised on stage. I am in awe of their talents and the support the students gave to one another.

As the proverb states, "It take a village to raise a child" and the telethon embraced this notion. The fundraiser was planned and executed by a core group of talented and never tiring mothers. I would personally like to thank Nancy Froio, Michele Skolnick, Lisa Dooley, Sarah Porter, Lucia Flibotte and Suzie Montgomery. Of course, we could not have been so successful without local families and businesses that generously contributed items to the raffles and auction. It is my hope that everyone can thank these families, businesses, and our sponsors with their kind words or patronage. I would like to thank the emcees, Lucia Flibotte and Rich Oftsun. Reading cue cards and making schedule changes on the fly (while on camera) is not an easy feat.

More kudos are in order for the Cohasset High School art department. They created our banner for the stage. Alida, at Cohasset Greenery, donated the beautiful flowers on the stage and piano. Ken Cisneros helped with the technical aspects regarding our pc needs. Our school administrators and Principals were supportive and extremely helpful publicizing the event. The Cohasset Mariner printed our telethon information on a weekly basis.

On the night of the telethon, we had some additional volunteers that made the evening run flawlessly. Derry Schwanter did a wonderful job manning the camera and television production. Eva Habar and Beverly Bielewicz took care of the pledge sheets. Dorothy Greene, Kim Canney, and Maria Kennedy all worked to help keep the talent on schedule.

Thanks to so many of you who generously pledged or bid your dollars to the Cohasset PSO. I am overwhelmed by the generosity in our town. I have enjoyed being a part of this new tradition in Cohasset and hope that all of you look forward to this annual event. If you still need to pick up your raffle or auction items, please contact me at 781-383-6125.

As I mentioned before, I would like to thank each talent show participant and recognize them individually:

Derek (3rd Grade) and Adam Benson (2nd Grade); Alexandros Deligianndis- 3rd Grade; Megan Green- 5th Grade; Julia Thompson 5th Grade; Hollis Hunnewell - 2nd Grade; Cailey Hart - 3rd Grade; Julia Canney - 5th grade; Jeanne Thoma - 8th Grade

Emily Dormitzer & Elizabeth Hagearthy (Both 5th Grade); Erika Reardon & Sarah Coggins (Both 8th Grade); Ana (8th Grade) & Thomas Buckley (7th Grade); Martin Buckley (2nd Grade); Rebecca Dickison (7th Grade); Abby (5th Grade), Sarah (4th Grade) and Audrey (2nd Grade) Brown

Mark Serakis, Austin Meyers, Graham Stevenson, Will Wise and David Hernon (all 7th Grade); Lauren Mack (8th Grade); Carly Salerno (8th Grade); Amanda Thompson (Sophomore); Andy McKenna (7th Grade); Caitlin O'Connell & Bailey Andrews (Both Juniors); Ainslee Guinee (Sophomore) and Andrew Jeerz (Senior); and John Coffey (Sophomore).

Thanks again for a job well done!

Your vote counts!

TO THE EDITOR:

On Saturday, May 21, your yes vote for the override is essential to maintain the quality of education in Cohasset. Without the override, teachers will most certainly be cut. Class sizes will increase to numbers approaching 30 in some grades.

Please remember that not that long ago, an override was passed by only two votes. Your vote counts. Please go to the polls on Saturday and cast your vote as a yes for the override.

Green thumbs up for Dormitzer

TO THE EDITOR:

Ralph Dormitzer went up quite a few notches in my book at Tuesday selectmen's meeting. I'm sure other Fairoaks residents and town conservationists also feel the same way. The vote was tied at two to two. Michael Sullivan and Rob Spofford voted in favor of leaving the Cook land on the Fairoaks side of Sohier Street as conservation space. Gary Vanderweil and Fred Koed voted in favor of perking that land with the intention of possibly building on the space.

It was up to Dormitzer. He was the deciding vote. The meeting-goers held their breath for a moment. Then Dormitzer made his decision after what seemed like an hour. He said he would have to vote with Sullivan. He felt that there was too much opposition and sensitivity to this issue and therefore he did not want it to continue to drag on and impede the future of the Cook Estate project. He voted to preserve the green space along Sohier Street.

It was like Jason Varitek's walk-off home run last week. The Green Team was down and Dormitzer came up to the plate and hit a home run that won the game. He got a lot of help last night from his teammates, especially by Sullivan who made some excellent and convincing points against building. And of course, Spofford had been getting hits right along.

Dormitzer took the side of the people of Cohasset. He upheld, through his vote, the wishes of the voters at town meeting. I really think that he wanted to look into the possibility of building on that site, but he proved that he is a reasonable man and that when the people speak, he should listen.

And the people did speak out on this issue. Joe Nedrow consistently demonstrated his invaluable in-depth knowledge of Cook Estate issues. Many other Fairoaks Lane residents attended the last three selectmen meetings to express their concerns. And there were others as well…some that really were not affected directly but who wanted the town vote to prevail. My cap is off to all of the people who attended these meetings.

Not all of Cohasset will remain beautiful. Other sites will be developed. But this is one piece of land that will remain natural. When you drive up Sohier Street now toward the Music Circus and look left…you will not see houses. You will see trees. And all of the out-of-town people who come to enjoy a show at the big tent or visit our lovely village will drive up that hill and they will say, "What a beautiful town Cohasset is."

Support helped make book sale a best seller!

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of the Friends of the Cohasset Library, I wish to sincerely thank the many people and organizations that helped us achieve a wonderful and successful Annual Book Sale.

First, I want to thank Michelle Bolduc, Director of Our World, Mary Larson, and Debbie Kuppens for giving us huge space to set up our book sale – to piggy-back on their Estate Sale – and to Irene Lord and family and staff who were so gracious for so many days as we set up our sales side-by-side.

Enormous and heartfelt thanks to the Cohasset Library Staff – especially to Sandra Parnell and Sharon Moody for their hours of culling and transporting books from the library to Our World.

Thanks to St. Stephen's Church for their loan of tables/ to Trader Joe's in Hanover for their generous donation of bags/ to Shaw's Cohasset for their donation of bags/ to Curtis Liquors – Cohasset Liquors – and Marsh Liquors in Norwell for their donation of dozens of beer flats to hold the hundreds of books.

And to my fellow board members, Moira Stansell, June Hubbard, Bet Baker, Jamie Williams, Bernadette Faulkner and Carole Anne Dean, and Library Trustee President, Sarah Pease, for staffing the sale……Heartfelt kudos to all!

Town debt burden is too high

COMMENTARY

RAY KASPEROWICZ

The precedent of the 50 percent subsidy of new sewer districts was established in 1997 when a number of vocal residents of North Cohasset fought for what amounted to mitigation costs. They expressed a strong unwillingness to shoulder the full cost of laying sewer pipes in their streets and pipes and pumps on their properties for the sake of getting the Town off the hook in its court administered settlement with the state Department of Environmental Protection. DEP's motivation was the clean-up of Straits Pond. The Town essentially said to North residents, OK, we understand, we'll share costs. We shouldn't make you the temple sacrifice.

I don't recall the resistance at that same time from residents of the new Central District. I suspect many if not most Central residents were happy to be sewered and to pay the price, but they were not going to be fools and turn down any subsidy that North was able to win for them on Town Meeting floor.

Now we come to the recently approved additional districts of Little Harbor, Atlantic Avenue and Deep Run/ Rust Way. The residents of these districts worked hard and long to access our limited sewer capacity. And likewise, the DEP wanted something done to abate the pollution of Little Harbor. The Town had devised an alternative to full sewering. But Little Harbor residents had little interest in Town monitored on-site septic systems. Again quite understandable.

But in my opinion, we have passed into a new stage in grappling with our wastewater. We've passed from dealing with satisfying a state lawsuit to satisfying ourselves. And that requires a different approach to assigning costs.

Following precedent is often employed as a way to avoid critical thinking. I believe the time has come to be realistic rather than submit to lazy thinking and relying on precedent.

College economics told us that the purpose of the pricing mechanism in a capitalist marketplace is the allocation of scarce resources. It works beautifully. We should be employing it. In other words, if you want sewer, you should pay for it. If you don't want it, we'll offer it to someone who does. The residents of our newest districts clearly want it. We don't have to subsidize their wishes, nor should we. Subsidies should only be used to cudgel someone into doing something not fully aligned with their own self-interest.

I could be dissuaded from my little "capitalist theory of sewer pricing" if we had an established plan that took care of the needs of the whole Town within a reasonably short time span. We have not had that plan in the past, we do not have it now and we may not have it in the reasonably near future despite our best wishes and efforts. The Sewer Commission has promised to review the needs of the remaining parts of the Town, but we cannot guarantee that we can solve all problems in the near future. And that dream remains untenable if we become addicted to the 50/50 cost sharing precedent because the Town already has an extraordinary debt burden.

Based on 2003 Department of Revenue, Division of Local Services data, Cohasset's per capita debt burden is about $11,800! That works out to about $32,000 per home. In a sense, we've agreed to allow the Town to impose a second mortgage on us. Per capita debt levels for various towns I've selected are:

Cohasset $11,800; Weston $ 7,900; Westwood $ 4,300 Nantucket $4,100; Duxbury $4,000; Norwell $3,236; Marblehead $3,100; Scituate $2,900; Lincoln $2,700; Hingham $2,600 Wellesley $2,600.

To be fair, we must remember that a big portion of our school building indebtedness will be paid by the state. Also, half of our sewer indebtedness is being paid by our sewer customers through betterment assessments. So some significant portion of that $11,800 is either being paid by the state or by sewer customers. But these other towns probably have similar pay downs coming their way.

There has been a lot of lip service for keeping Cohasset affordable for our seniors. Let's consider those elderly couples, widows and widowers outside our sewer districts. As they move out of their homes to live with family members or move on to assisted living facilities, their home sale proceeds will be diminished by Title 5 upgrade costs. So the only asset left to fund the remaining years of most seniors will have a $20,000 to $100,000 chunk taken out of it. No one will be whipping out a checkbook to help these seniors. Yet these same seniors have been subsidizing sewer systems for other parts of Town for years.

Finally, the Little Harbor District residents will have a bonus that no other municipal sewer customers in Cohasset will ever have again – namely the $6,000 Massachusetts septic-tax credit. It is only available to sewer system hook-ups required by state court order. That's a direct $6,000 tax subsidy by Massachusetts to each Little Harbor homeowner.

I strongly urge you to vote against the 50 percent subsidy this Saturday.

'50-50' is all about equity and fairness

COMMENTARY

RICHARD BROOKS

One of the ballot questions this Saturday deals with the question of whether the future sewer costs for Deep Run, Rust Way and the Little Harbor area should, in keeping with the long Cohasset tradition, be funded 50 percent by the Town and 50 percent by the sewer service recipients via property betterments.

This question involves issues of tradition, fairness, facts not understood yet by most voters and the potential divisiveness of not staying with tradition. We've all had enough divisiveness over the past couple of years and we really should not take that route ever again!

Firstly, let me explain that most of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset Sewer District were voted to be funded via the "50-50" split. Further, this 50-50 split applied to the costs in those districts not only for the sewer lines in the public streets but also the significant costs to hook up each residence via the sewer lines constructed up to each house from the lines in the street. The Sewer Commission has already decided, regrettably, that a "50-50" cost split, if voted, will not apply to the connection work done on private property to connect each house and that cost will be absorbed 100 percent by the homeowners. Thus, the characterization of "50-50" split is a mis-characterization and, if the "50-50" split is voted, as it should be, the actual split will be — 80 percent paid for by the residents receiving the sewer service and only 20 percent paid for by the Town. That alone is reason why we should vote for the so-called "50-50" funding split! It's not a 50-50 split, its an 80-20 split! Beware those who speak incorrectly!

If the voters decide to vote that the recipients should pay for 100 percent of the costs, that will be rubbing salt in the wounds of gross unfairness and I just can't see most Cohasset voters being party to such an egregious, unfair, undemocratic funding scheme!

The fair thing to do is to continue the so-called "50-50" funding split. Note that the residents of Little Harbor, Rust Way and Deep Run have been paying their 50 percent contribution over the years for the sewer recipients in the Central District and the North Cohasset District! It is unthinkable to expect those families to continue to pay that 50 percent of the other sewer recipients but then also pay 100 percent of the cost of their own sewer construction.

Anyone who supports that grossly unfair scenario is supporting divisiveness, probable litigation and, surely, a flood of Citizen Petition Articles to remedy the unfairness at future Town Meetings! Lets get it correct now and avoid those problems. I believe the majority of the sewer commissioners favor that we vote for the " 50-50" split to be consistent and fair.

As a final note, the "unfairness" of the situation for residents who perhaps will never receive sewer service because their location does not pose pollution hazards to ponds and coastal waters and whose soil conditions are excellent for on-site septic systems, is also recognized.

As has been discussed a lot recently, the Town should indeed implement a fund to assist such homes, perhaps 50-50, when those septic systems need upgrade or replacement. These residents are helping to pay for the Central and North Cohasset Sewer Districts construction—yet they have a low probability of ever receiving central sewer service. I expect Selectmen Koed, Vanderweil and Dormitzer, and perhaps others, will address this issue in the near future.

A 'no' vote could bring positive change

COMMENTARY

LEONORA JENKINS

Will it ever end?

I've been waiting for almost 20 years for a school committee to turn the school ship around. However, it appears that it is still securely cemented in place.

Cohasset has had 7 overrides in 7 years. The schools are now talking about a yearly operational (never going away) override as part of regular business with the Superintendent stating that the schools will need at least a 6.3 percent increase per year — over $800,000 for next year and steadily rising. And why shouldn't they? If we don't stop paying they'll keep spending.

Think of all the interesting things which might occur if you vote against the override.

Your no vote might directly impact teachers' negotiations — forcing a smaller settlement, encouraging teachers to accept a higher health insurance co-pay while they receive lower premiums in exchange. Energy bills will be dissected by kwh and cu ft, why we may even finally start turning off the lights at night!

We could kill three birds with one stone, save money, train students in basic office skills and have the students in Jack Buckley's Community Service class actually doing an effective volunteer service by replacing the new clerical position at the Osgood with students from the high school, thus freeing up money to be used in the classrooms.

Our $98K/year technology director, in the brand new state-of-the-art facilities, could spend a few hours surfing the web to direct our other administrators, i.e. curriculum coordinator, department heads, and team leaders to web sites that would provide information for free professional development and suggestions for enhancing math, science technology and engineering in the classrooms.

Our $79K Curriculum Coordinator should be in contact with area universities like Tufts that have a community outreach program in engineering. There are also opportunities to be had by including Cohasset in programs through Discover E but we need the initiative to come from the administration and we have seasoned administrators on our payroll.

We may be able to reevaluate if we need to create new administrative positions in the middle school like we are doing with the new vice-principal. It is great if we have extra money in the coffers to be able to have a perky new administrator fresh out of a master's program to coordinate after-school clubs. But since we don't have the cash, maybe this $70K should go to teaching positions instead and have some reorganization with the 5 full time student services personnel at the middle school. The town has provided this age group already with the Garage to keep them occupied and out of trouble.

The schools are looking for new courses. Maybe we can reinstate the Early Childhood Development program and have the high school students involved with the PreK and the full day K students where they would encounter a unique learning experience by assisting in the classes and possibly save on some aides salaries. This was a very successful program when I first moved to Cohasset.

These are just a few scenarios of the myriad that creative minds can develop when necessity demands.

Plus we can't forget the town appointed School Budget Investigation Committee report presented at the April Town Meeting. Several areas of systemic problems with the school committee were identified that the taxpayers have steadfastly asked to be corrected for years, in particular, poor monitoring, weak communications, an acceptance of overrides as an annual event and insufficient oversight of the budget. It is obvious that our elected officials have let the taxpayers and the students down and maybe a no vote will actually cause us to see some real changes

Bewitched in Salem

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The city of Salem, which calls itself "the Witch City" and has managed to elevate the 17th century hanging of 14 women and five men into a multi-million dollar tourist industry, is about to install another weapon in its promotional arsenal.

The Salem Redevelopment Authority the other day voted to approve the addition of a nine-foot statue of Samantha Stephens, the woman with the twitchy nose in the old TV sit-com "Bewitched," to the scenery in downtown Lappin Park.

The statue is scheduled to be unveiled by the cable channel TV Land on June 5, just in time to catch the debut of a new movie called "Bewitched," starring Nicole Kidman. Boy, is that a lucky coincidence or what?

The statue is scheduled to be unveiled by the cable channel TV Land on June 5, just in time to catch the debut of a new movie called "Bewitched," starring Nicole Kidman.

Of course, the statue of Samantha will look an awful lot like the late Elizabeth Montgomery, who played the witch in "Bewitched," which ran on Channel 5 from 1964 to 1972 and has been in reruns on channels like TV Land ever since.

She will be depicted, I am told, wearing a tall pointed black hat, riding side-saddle on the traditional broomstick inside a crescent moon.

Not everyone in Salem is thrilled about adding a fake TV witch to the roster of fake witches that already draw the marks to Salem, this in spite of the fact that the 1692 trials took place in a section of Old Salem now known as Danvers.

"For a lot of people, it was a nice TV show, but there are a lot of nice TV shows," John Carr, a former member of the Salem Historical Society, told the Boston Herald. "We should be able to say more in the principal intersection of our downtown."

He may be sorry he said that — out loud, anyway.

TV Land is also currently rerunning the sit-com "Cheers," so when can we expect the statue of Sam Malone, the fake Red Sox relief pitcher, or Norm Peterson, the fake (or real) beer-drinker, or Cliff Clavin, everyone's favorite fake mailman?

Wouldn't visitors to Dodge City, Kansas, be thrilled to find Matt Dillon among the pantheon of U. S. marshals like Wyatt Earp and Wild Bill Hickock, who kept the peace in that frontier town. What do you mean, his real name was Jim Arness?

While we're at it, how about a statue for "WKRP in Cincinnati?" Should it be newsman Les Nessman waiting for those turkeys to come down, or Johnny Fever or Venus Flytrap or my nomination, station secretary Jennifer Marlowe (42-27-38)?

A statue of Laverne DeFazio and Shirley Feeney as they manned (or womanned) the assembly line in the Bottle Cap Division of the Shotz Brewery would certainly do a lot for the tourist industry in Milwaukee, if there is any.

I guess it's just a question of fiction, if repeated long enough, becomes fact while fact, like the witch trials in Danvers, slip away into oblivion.

Come to think of it, in a way, the 1692 Witch Trials were fiction, too, weren't they?

Hagerty Committee coming back on line

The Hagerty Committee was never formally disbanded, but was somehow pushed to the wayside last year. The committee was not asked to submit a report for the Annual Report and was not listed in the Town Report. Selectmen had voted to keep the committee in existence as there are still some odds and ends to be taken care of at the Hagerty building on Parker Avenue. The building houses the Center for Student Coastal Research.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said it was his understanding the committee would continue its work until the list of items was complete, and asked whether there were still items that needed to be taken care of.

"Yes there are, and I'd like the help," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

The board agreed the committee should remain in its active status.

HEALTH NOTES

About pocket pets and change

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Perhaps, the two things that change the least are rocks and regulations. Some of the Commonwealth's laws date back to the 1600s; like the recent article about the 1700s law forbidding Indians from Boston.

The problem is since change is often difficult to deal with, people naturally like to think of things as they were when we last thought about them. But in spite of our perceptions, humans are constantly changing by improving physically; in our longevity, the time in which we run a mile and so on.

And most species, left alone, are doing the same thing. If they're disturbed, funny things happen. In a recent article we noted brook trout became smaller in locations where there is a lower limitation catch size.

Recently a law has been passed which will probably allow the trout to again start growing to a normal size. Massachusetts now has both a lower and upper limit on trout; it works on lobsters; why not trout. A lion from 1890 would have to be much more agile to catch a 2002 wildebeest than he would when he lived. Also, bugs, viruses and even bacteria change. And that gets us to the point of our column.

Bacteria as well as viruses change. Salmonellosis is a bacterial disease caused by the bacterium Salmonella. Many different kinds of Salmonella can make people sick. Many kinds of animals can pass salmonellosis to people. Usually, people get salmonellosis by eating contaminated food, such as chicken or eggs. However, animals can carry Salmonella and pass it in their feces (stool). There was a recent newspaper article which told about children getting sick from pocket pets like gerbils, ferrets, hamsters and other small animals. Some of these animals have contacted a strain of Salmonella which has changed to become more resistant to antibiotics as a result of practices at pet shops and clinics dealing with small animals.

People get salmonellosis by eating contaminated food, such as chicken or eggs. However, animals can carry Salmonella and pass it in their feces.

So, people can also get salmonellosis if they do not wash their hands after touching the feces of animals. Reptiles (lizards, snakes, and turtles), baby chicks, and ducklings are especially likely to pass salmonellosis to people. Dogs, cats, birds (including pet birds), horses, and farm animals can also pass Salmonella in their feces.

Some people are more likely than others to get salmonellosis. A person's age and health status may affect the immune system, increasing the chances of getting sick. People who are more likely to get salmonellosis include infants, children younger than 5 years and older or immune deficient adults.

So, the conditions under which you or your family can become ill are changing more rapidly than we expect. Suddenly, it's necessary to be more vigilant and rigorous about washing and cleanup.

- Think about the possible conditions under which bacteria like salmonella exist, including your own pets as well as those in petting zoos, or just in your neighborhood.
- After contact with animals which may carry feces (stool), wash hands with soap and running water.
- Wash hands with soap and running water after touching reptiles or any objects and surfaces that a reptile has also touched.
- It's suggested that you avoid having small children contact reptiles, baby chicks, and ducklings.
- Be extra cautious when visiting farms and contacting farm animals, including animals at petting zoos.

Learn more about salmonellosis at CDC's salmonellosis Web site which includes answers to frequently asked questions, technical information, and additional resources.

But also remember, excessive use of antibacterial soap or antibiotics, or anything else for that matter, can allow things to change in ways we may not expect. The answer is moderation.

Selectman races can be costly contests

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Candidates running for selectman in Cohasset aren't shy about raising money.

According to campaign finance reports on file at the Town Clerk's office, the three selectman candidates in this year's annual Town Election raised a grand total of roughly $20,000 and spent nearly as much.

Incumbent Selectman Fred Koed and Gary Vanderweil, a former sewer commissioner, garnered the most votes in the three-way race for two seats April 9, edging out Debbie Shadd, who served on the advisory committee.

Last year, four candidates for two seats raised nearly $17,000 – but three of the four accounted for nearly all the money. Three-term incumbent Selectman Merle Brown, who reported only $308 in receipts, came in fourth behind Rob Spofford, Ralph Dormitzer and Louis Harvey.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas says she thinks the amount of money being raised for recent selectman's races is more than in the past. She says the trend can be disturbing.

"It's too bad if it discourages people from running," Douglas said about the cost.

Koed was the top vote-getter, although at $5,361, he raised the least amount of money. However, Koed – who reported only $1,075 in receipts as of March 23, brought in an additional $4,286 in the closing weeks. Koed reported $3,756 contributions in excess of $50 and $1,505 in contributions of $50 and under.

"The bottom line is, good or bad, this is the political system and the reality of town politics and democracy."
— Selectman Fred Koed

State law requires candidates to itemize receipts over $50 including the name and address of the contributor; for contributions of $200 or more, the occupation and employer of the contributor must also be listed.

Koed said money is needed in a competitive selectman's race.

"The bottom line is, good or bad, this is the political system and the reality of town politics and democracy," he said. Koed pointed out postage and printing for a town-wide mailing to 2,700 households can run $1,300. Newspaper ads cost from $500 to $1,200 depending on size and placement.

"To do two mailings, a couple of ads, and other miscellaneous expenses could reach $6,000 easily," he said.

Koed's biggest individual contributors were Richard Brooks, 68 Nichols Road ($500); Richard & Ann Swanborg, 48 Nichols Road ($200); Jacqueline Dormitzer, 111Atlantic Ave. ($200); and Louis Harvey, 465 King St. ($200).

Vanderweil, who came in second in the three-way race, reported total receipts of $9,000, of that roughly $7,300 was in contributions of more than $50. Vanderweil's biggest contributors were: Richard Brooks, 68 Nichols Road ($500); Peter & Carol Brown, 38 Atlantic Ave. ($200); Richard L Cate, 40B Nichols Road ($200); Gordon L. Deane, 672 Jerusalem Road ($200); Jacqueline Dormitzer, 111 Atlantic Ave. ($200); David & Mary Eisenhauer, 478 Jerusalem Road ($300); Robert & Letitia Jordan, 47 Lothrup Lane ($200); Stephen & Kazue Langham, 100 Pond St. #82 ($200); John J. O'Donnell Jr., 72 Old Pasture Road, ($250); Eric & Janna Oddlleifson, 25 River Road ($500); Goodwin & Carmen P. Schramm, 28 Atlantic Ave. ($200); Richard & Ann Swanborg, 48 Nichols Road ($200); and Samuel & Linda Wakeman, 225 Atlantic Ave. ($250).

Shadd raised a total of $5,615, including $1,825 contributions in excess of $50 and $3,790 in receipts under $50. Shadd did not report any individual contributions of $200 or more.

All three candidates spent money on newspaper advertising, printing, town-wide mailings, and other election expenses.

The two candidates in the only other race reported they did not receive any contributions or made any expenditures. Pamela Wilson and Leonora Jenkins competed for a one-year seat on the school committee. Wilson narrowly beat Jenkins by 33 votes.

HEALTH CARE AMENDMENT (H 4000)

House 148-11, approved a lengthy health care amendment that includes restoring $86 million to the so-called "free care pool" that reimburses hospitals for some of their costs of providing free health care to uninsured patients. The original proposed House budget had cut $120 million from this pool. Amendment supporters said that the $86 million restoration would help many struggling hospitals and noted that the state simply cannot afford to restore the entire $120 million. They noted that the amendment also funds many other health care initiatives including an innovative pilot program that allows some Medicaid eligible senior citizens to be cared for in the homes of families or friends at half the cost of a nursing home stay. Amendment opponents acknowledged that the lengthy amendment includes funding for good programs but argued that they have not had sufficient time to read all the details of the amendment. They noted that supporters have not provided information on how much money the amendment would add to the state budget's bottom line. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment. A "No" vote is against it).

REPLACE POTENTIAL LOCAL AID INCREASE WITH A STUDY (H 4000)

House 131-27, approved a Democratic-sponsored amendment providing that a study of local aid replace a Republican proposal that would give 50 percent of any fiscal 2006 state "surplus" to cities and towns as local aid. The House budget is built upon projected state revenue of $17.1 billion. The Republican proposal provides that one-half of any amount of actual revenue above $17.1 billion be returned to local communities. Supporters of the local aid study said that everyone would like to increase local aid but argued that it is fiscally irresponsible to commit in advance that one-half of any revenue in excess of $17.1 billion would be used for local aid. They said that the Legislature should decide what to do with additional revenue if and when it surfaces. Opponents of the study said that it is a sneaky tactic by Democrats to defeat a local aid increase without having a roll call vote directly on it. They noted that under House rules, the roll call would now be confusing to the public because it is on the study instead of on the local aid increase itself. They argued that the $17.1 billion estimate is low and said that any surplus should be used to help struggling communities avoid education cuts and police and firefighter layoffs. (The roll call vote is on the amendment to study local aid instead of providing a local aid increase. All Democrats, except six, voted for the study while all Republicans voted against the study. A "Yes" vote is for studying the local aid increase. A "No" vote is against the study and favors the local aid increase).

PREFERRED PARKING (S 1176)- A bill heard by the Municipalities and Regional Government Committee would allow cities and towns to restrict preferred public parking places for use only by zero emissions vehicles or low emissions vehicle.

PEPPER SPRAY (S 1349)- The Public Safety and Homeland Security Committee heard a proposal allowing citizens to purchase Mace and pepper spray without a license and without paying a fee. Supporters of the measure note that Massachusetts is one of the few states that require a Firearms Identification Card to carry these convenient, non-lethal sprays that protect people from violent attackers.

SALES TAX EXEMPTIONS- The Revenue Committee is considering a bill that would impose the state's five percent sales tax on newspapers and magazines (H 2404) and another that would impose the tax on retail store sales of any food product that has "limited nutritional value" (H 2588). The committee is also considering several bills that would exempt items from the state's five percent sales tax. Proposals include exempting photocopies provided by libraries (S1663); over the counter medications and vitamins that are "prescribed" by a physician (H 2265); cell phone usage (H 2456) and products used to quit smoking (H 2526).

AFRICAN-AMERICAN HISTORY (H 1035)- The Education Committee heard testimony on legislation requiring African-American history to be included as part of the history curriculum in all public elementary and secondary schools. The committee gave the proposal a favorable report last year.

AMERICAN FLAG ETIQUETTE (S 368)- The Education Committee accepted testimony on a bill requiring all public elementary and high schools to include a mandatory course on the correct use, display and etiquette relating to the American flag.

STUDENTS MUST PERFORM COMMUNITY SERVICE (H 1185)- The Education Committee heard testimony on legislation requiring high school students to perform ten hours of community service in order to receive a high school diploma.

MAKING MOVIES IN MASSACHUSETTS (H 3823)- The Revenue Committee held a hearing on legislation to provide some tax exemptions and tax credits to movie production companies that film in Massachusetts. The measure would also allow the companies to use state-owned land at no cost. Supporters said that the Bay State is losing million of dollars in business and jobs to states that offer these incentives.

Cut For A Cure raises over $11,600

Her struggle may be over, but her battle continues. The Cut for a Cure, held in support of local Hull woman, Karen Petrillo, who at that time was battling breast cancer, has to date raised over $11,600 dollars to support breast cancer research and education. Karen passed away on March 30 at the age of 46, however friends, family and the community continue to raise funds in her memory.

Funds raised as a result of this one-day event held at the Adrian Morris Salon in Cohasset on March 20 were donated to the Massachusetts Affiliate of the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation. "It is a wonderful thing to see this support and to know that Karen was able to attend the event, blow dry hair and see the many people who turned out" comments Carol McKean, Mass. Affiliate Fundraising Chair. "Even though it was a one-day event, the community has continued to rally around Karen as funds continue to poor into Adrian Morris Salon in her honor."

Owners of the salon have decided to make this an annual fundraiser, which will continue to benefit the Mass. Affiliate of the Susan G. Komen Foundation as well as other outreach programs specifically focused on assisting women with breast cancer. To find out more about Adrian Morris Salon, call 781-383-6663.

Boys tennis has already topped '04 win total

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With Wednesday's win over Harwich, the Cohasset boys tennis team has already improved on their win total from last year.

After finishing last season 11-7, the Skippers were 12-3 heading into yesterday's home match against Sacred Heart, and have four more regular season opportunities to improve on that record: today against Cape Cod Academy, Monday at Scituate, Tuesday at Hingham, and Thursday at Sacred Heart.

Against Sacred Heart, singles players Nils Sceery, Dan Sullivan and Blain Morin earned the points for Cohasset. Sullivan dropped his first set before coming back to take the next two. Sceery and Morin both won in straight sets.

It was the team's second

Girls tennis moves on from Norwell loss, turn eyes to postseason play

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

With the hype and hullabaloo of the Norwell rivalry and the rest of the South Shore League schedule out of the way, the Cohasset girls tennis team is focusing on one thing: success in the state tournament.

After last Thursday's 3-2 loss to the Clippers - which likely gives Norwell the league championship - Cohasset came back to sweep a season series with Falmouth, with both matches going 4-1 in favor of the Skippers.

Down the cape last Friday, sophomore Casey Cavanaro stepped up into third singles and scored an impressive 6-2, 6-0 victory. The doubles teams of Meg Anderson/Sally Meehan and Emilie Shea/Rachel Garber also won in straight sets, with both teams losing only four games in their matches.

Elizabeth Stone did not lose a single game in winning first singles.

The Skippers put together a vastly different lineup in Tuesday's rematch, giving three players who have spent much of their time in doubles a shot at singles. All three earned points for Cohasset.

After winning her first set at first singles 6-2, Meehan came back in the second set from 2-5 to win the next five games and the match. Anderson and Shea, playing second and third singles, respectively, both won 1 and 1.

"Offensively, we need to be more aggressive and consistent to offset some of our defensive errors."
Softball coach Deb Bostwick

The Cohasset softball team dropped faster and harder last week than a group of oak trees in the Greenbush corridor.

With three losses to add to their 4-5 record, the Skippers recognize the need to pull their act together. Quickly.

What does head coach Deb Bostwick make of the situation?

"Offensively, we need to be more aggressive and consistent to offset some of our defensive errors," she said.

The trouble all started May 10 when Hull paid a very unfriendly 10-3 visit to Freedom Field. In many respects, this game played out like the two teams' first match-up in Hull. Four innings of neck-to-neck softball followed by a disastrous fifth for Cohasset.

According to Bostwick, "Hull hit the ball better than we did. Our opponent forced us to make errors. Hull capitalized on them."

One flash of offensive brilliance came from co-captain CeeCee Chapman, who clocked a triple. After the final out, the Pirates sailed away, robbing Cohasset of a much needed win.

Two days later the Skippers slipped deeper into the loss column when they hosted the Norwell Clippers. In the teams' first meeting on April 26, the Skippers beat them in Norwell. This time the Clippers took advantage of our home team's over-confidence, beating Cohasset 6-3.

Co-captain Erin Liddell summed up the situation perfectly.

"We came into this game with way too much assurance," she said. "Our bats froze. We paid the price for our casual attitude."

If any daylight broke through the storm clouds, it could be found among the younger players. Junior Emily Savage pitched an impressive game. Freshman Anna Haggerty performed very well in the catcher position. Haggerty also contributed to the offense, going 2-for-2 at the plate.

Unfortunately, the Skippers still had not seen the worst of it. The girls journeyed down to Nantucket, only to take their third beating of the week, losing 18-3.

Cohasset could not get the fire started, even with some admirable play by Virginia Spofford, Katie James, Alida Tangherlini, and Casey Anderson.

Bostwick managed to find some positives in this defeat.

"I was proud of the girls for keeping their heads in the game and tying it up in the third inning," she said. "Even though our bats weren't swinging, the girls really hung in there."

On a positive note, the Skippers are doing many things right. Bostwick seemed impressed with her team's smart base running skills. She also showed enthusiasm about her pitchers.

"Our opponents are asking which of our pitchers are on the mound. We have more experience under our belts," Bostwick said.

To enter the playoffs, the Skippers need to win six of their next eight games...a tall order given the most recent past. According to Bostwick, the strongest teams remain Abington, Hull and Harwich.

Five of the eight games occurred this week. The opponents include South Shore Christian Academy, Sacred Heart, Holbrook, Mashpee, and Harwich.

"These are all beatable teams," remarked Co-captain Casey Anderson. "I think we're ready for the challenge."

Girls lax on the postseason bubble

Lady Skippers at .500 with five games to play

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls lacrosse is right on the fence in terms of qualifying for the state tournament.

Heading into yesterday's game with Marshfield (a team Cohasset defeated two weeks ago, 11-4), the Skippers were 6-6-1 with five games to play.

The remaining games are today at home against Cape Cod Academy, Saturday at home against Plymouth (9:30 a.m. start), Monday at Plymouth (4:30), and Wednesday at home against Notre Dame.

Cohasset got back to the .500 level last Saturday with a 9-4 win at Nantucket. The Skippers led 4-2 at the half and 5-4 in the second half, before two goals from Lauren Rizzotti and one by Lindsay Durkin sealed the deal for the visitors.

Durkin had a game-high three goals, with Rizzotti, Molly Kirk and Mackenzie Holway scoring two apiece. Kirk's performance was the latest in a string of good games from the senior midfielder.

Rizzotti's goals gave her 99 for her high school career, making it likely that by the time you are reading this, she has eclipsed the 100-goal mark.

The win was a nice way to come back from last Thursday's home loss to Sandwich, a game in which head coach Torin Sweeney his team gave an unusually lackluster effort.

"The first half of that game was the worst we have played all year," he said. "That was the first time this season I thought we were outworked. I can say this confidently, that the kids have never given less effort than the other team, except for that first half against Sandwich."

Sweeney was a lot more happy to talk about the Nantucket victory.

"We played a real good game against a Nantucket team that has gotten much better," he said. "We played really well breaking the transition."

One of the keys there, according to the coach was the play of defender Marissa Evans, another player who has stepped up in recent weeks with some big contributions.

Task is clear for boys lax

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Any Scituate-Cohasset boys lacrosse game is likely to feature its share of trash talking, with this year's two games certainly no exception.

And while the Skippers walked the walk in the teams' first meeting on April 5, the Sailors returned the favor with a huge 11-8 win on Cohasset's home field on Tuesday.

Down 7-6 at the half, Scituate dominated defensively in the second half, holding Cohasset scoreless until there were only two minutes left. The Sailors' defense on this day was a total team effort.

Midfielders Gary Crowley, Sam Brigham and Colby Hawkins manned the perimeter of the Sailors' defensive zone, while defenders Bernie Carroll, Nick Belmont and Ryan Woodford effectively ganged up on any Skippers player that managed to get near the net. Belmont, in particular, made a couple good, physical plays on Cohasset star Jake Previte.

Freshman goalie Jake Gray also came up huge in net, making 15 saves. Although Scituate managed to force Cohasset to shoot from 15 or more yards away in the second half, the Skippers did manage a couple point-blank opportunities, but were turned away by Gray.

The win improved Scituate's record to 8-6 and gives them a four-game winning streak. Scituate co-captains Conor O'Brien (two goals, three assists) and Ben Brigham (game-high four goals, three assists) both said afterward that the game was their team's best performance of the year.

"Everyone played well for us," Brigham said. "Our offense moved the ball well, and our goalie and defense came up huge."

"We're just trying to win out and head into the tournament with some momentum," O'Brien said. "These last few games, we've been settling down and playing the game we're capable of playing."

Cohasset, meanwhile, dropped to 7-7 and need two

Cohasset cheerleading clinic Aug 22-24

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the 3 day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee for this unique opportunity essential to anyone who plans to join the cheerleading squad, for either Fall or Winter sports, is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

New American Red Cross Learn-to-Swim Program offered at Cohasset Swim Center

This new Swim Program provides instruction to help swimmers of all ages and abilities develop their swimming and water safety skills. It is designed to give students a positive learning experience.

Learn-to-Swim teaches aquatic and safety skills in a logical progression. The objective is to teach people to swim and to be safe in, on and around the water.

The six learn-to-swim levels and the objectives for each level include:

Level 1 - Introduction to Water Skills: helps students feel comfortable in the water and to enjoy the water safely.

Level 2 - Fundamental Aquatic Skills: gives students success with fundamental skills.

Level 3 - Stroke Development: builds on the skills in Level 2 by providing additional guided practice.

Level 4 - Stroke Improvement: develops confidence in the strokes learned and to improve other aquatic skills.

Level 5 - Stroke Refinement: provides further coordination and refinement of strokes.

Level 6 - Swimming and Skill Proficiency: refines the strokes so students swim them with ease, efficiency, power and smoothness over greater distances. Level 6 is designed with "menu" options. Each of these options focus on preparing students to participate in more advance courses, such as Water Safety Instructor and match came from the second doubles tandem of Kate McBride and Remy Lee, both of whom showed great court coverage in finishing off their 7-5, 6-3 win.

The girls have since hosted Harwich on Wednesday and traveled to Sacred Heart on Thursday. They finish the regular season next week by hosting Duxbury on Monday and Hingham on Tuesday. If Cohasset can win out and head into the state team tournament with that kind of momentum, it will be a great way for them to bounce back from last Thursday's nail-biting loss.

Norwell 3, Cohasset 2

Somehow, it was fitting that last Thursday's Norwell-Cohasset girls tennis match came down to first singles.

Norwell's Susan Bitetti and Cohasset's Elizabeth Stone engaged in some of the best tennis one can expect to see at this level. Not surprisingly, the final game went like this:

Deuce, ad-in, deuce, ad-out, deuce, ad-out, deuce, ad-in, deuce, ad-out, deuce, ad-in, deuce, ad-in, end of match.

As hard as that may be to follow in print, it was twice as exciting to witness in person, as Bitetti finally put it away on her seventh match point for a 6-1, 7-5 win.

With the large contingent of fans all focusing on the first singles court - including many teammates who could barely stand to watch - Bitetti described the experience of being in that position with the team match on the line.

"In between points, I was aware of the attention," she said minutes after the match. "But during play, you're able to block that stuff out."

The result was nearly the exact opposite of the two girls' first match on April 26, where Stone won 6-0, 7-5.

"I really wanted this chance to play her again," Bitetti said. "After the first match, I felt I could have played better."

Stone, one of two senior captains for Cohasset, put the loss into perspective.

"I don't think it's a bad thing to lose; the pressure [of a long undefeated streak] is off now," she said. "It will also feel that much better to bounce back and win some matches."

There is a very good chance that these two will meet again this weekend in the South sectional final of the individuals tournament in Falmouth. Stone and Bitetti are the section's top two seeds, and dominated their four matches last weekend to advance this far.

Stone has been particularly impressive, dispatching Hingham first singles Meaghan Doyle 6-1, 6-0 in her last match this past weekend.

Cohasset picked up its points in the two doubles matches. Emilie Shea and Meg Anderson won at first doubles, 7-5 and 6-1. Rachel Garber and Elizabeth Landon earned a three-set win at second doubles.

"My doubles teams did a great job today," said Cohasset head coach Gigi Meehan. "They were just very strong and did what they needed to do."

Norwell's other two points came in second and third singles, with Taylor Cleaves and Kathryn Ankner both winning in straight sets. The score in both matches was 6-4, 6-3.

Ankner again made the switch from first doubles, and again played well in doing so.

"Kathryn is just so steady," said head coach Judy Field. "I think she made a big difference for us. She just knew what she had to do to win, and she did it."

State Individuals Tournament

Stone and the doubles team of Anderson and Meehan will represent Cohasset this weekend at Falmouth High School in the MIAA state individuals South sectional.

Only eight singles players and doubles teams remain in the South, and pairings were announced yesterday. The quarterfinals start tomorrow and 10 a.m., with Stone taking on Dartmouth's Beth Merchant, and Anderson/Meehan also paired with a team from Dartmouth.

The sectional quarterfinals and semifinals will be played tomorrow. The finals take place this Sunday at 10 a.m., also at Falmouth.

straight win (they defeated Scituate on Monday) after losing a highly competitive match to Norwell last Thursday.

The Clippers clinched their 12th straight South Shore League title with the 4-1 win, but Cohasset gave Norwell their toughest match of the year, as four of the five matches went to a third set.

Winning for Cohasset was the first doubles team of Chris Pescatore and Chris Donze, defeating a team from Norwell (Brett Cleaves and Gabe Weeks) that had been undefeated.

"They played their best match of the year so far," said Sceery. "That Norwell team was 8-0, and our team played great."

Sceery was in quite a match of his own against Norwell sophomore Ryan Sweeney. The two have squared off several times before, but this was the first match in which Sceery took a set from the Clippers star. Morin at third singles and the second doubles tandem of Ryan Crough and Kyle Dattola-Harris also took their Norwell opponents to a third set.

Sceery, who along with Morin advanced to the second round of the state individuals tournament last weekend before bowing out, attributes much of the team's success so far this season to the players' efforts before the year started. Athletes like Sullivan and Morin honed their skills at the Scituate Racket Club, while many others practiced their fair share at the local YMCA.

"We have a lot more experience this year," said Sceery. "The best part of it is that, except for our senior captain, Brendan Michaud, all of us are coming back."

As for '05, this team figures to make a lot of noise in the upcoming state tournament.

wins in their last four games to finish .500 and make the tournament. The team traveled to Norwell yesterday, host Plymouth tonight at 6 p.m., host Marshfield tomorrow (11 a.m. start), and finish the season at Plymouth (4 p.m.).

Previte (three goals, two assists) says he and his teammates will have to play a lot better than they did on Tuesday if that is going to happen.

"[Scituate] came out more intense than we did in the second half," Previte said. "We just made a lot of bonehead plays and stupid mistakes."

With that said, the Skippers' leading scorer feels the team can get the job done down the stretch.

"I'm pretty confident we can and will win all four remaining games," Previte said. "The bottom line is we just need to hustle and work harder."

Aidan Buick also scored three goals for Cohasset, with Dan Trendowicz and Joe Durkin scoring one apiece. Crandon Leahy and Casey Coleman did their usual solid job defensively, but it wasn't enough to overcome the momentum built by Scituate in the third quarter, when goals from Brigham and O'Brien gave them an 8-7 lead heading into the final frame.

Goals by Gary Crowley, Clayton Dawson, and one in the final minute from Brigham iced the game for the visiting Sailors.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

Boys lacrosse splits games vs. Braintree, Hanover, Barnstable; Youth girls have mixed results in Duxbury

Some of Cohasset's youth boys teams were excited for the rare chance to play a weekday night game under the lights in Braintree, and it showed with two wins and a loss during action on Friday, May 13.

The Cohasset White 11-and-Under team (grades 3 and 4) earned its first win of the year by using a well-coordinated effort to stop Braintree.

The defensive group and midfielders shined throughout the game – with Chris Sylvia playing a particularly strong game – in front of goaltenders Henry Brown and Cole Kissick, whose solid play limited the home team to a single goal.

Jack McElgunn's efforts on ground balls and clearing allowed the offense to get some rhythm, and veterans John Mills and Nick Tangherlini converted on their scoring opportunities. Cohasset's midfield also played hard, with Mark McKenna and Cole Maher making a strong contribution to advancing the ball and Matthew Arnold chipping in with two shots on goal and some strong pressure on ground balls.

The end result was a 3-1 win in which the White team displayed growing confidence and field sense, and improving team and individual skills.

The Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) was next up in Braintree and it wasted no time taking control of the contest with superior stick skills, netting six unanswered goals.

Braintree responded by becoming increasingly physical and by pressuring Cohasset more, but that tactic failed as Cohasset repeatedly moved the ball downfield to gain opportunities with only minimal resistance.

Thomas Flibotte led the scoring with four goals, while Morgan Grasz and Sam Richardson each chipped in with a pair. Chase Baldwin, John McGoldrick, Luke Ernst, Danny Czerkawski, and Sam Leahy picked up single scores, as Cohasset ran away to a 13-3 win. Nine of the goals were assisted, and seven players registered those helpers.

Willie Brown and Jack Nelson – still nursing an injury from the previous weekend – provided strong goaltending to keep the home team at bay.

The 15-U (grades 7/8) Blue team followed the younger boys under the lights at Braintree in the lacrosse version of a Friday night slugfest.

Jack Murphy was a spectacle in goal, stopping at least 20 Braintree shots, including stuffing several shooters who were right on the crease line. Despite his efforts, Braintree jumped to a 3-1 first-quarter lead, and was able to hang to that edge as the game stood 4-2 at the half.

In the second half, the two teams traded goals, with Braintree hanging on for a two-goal win.

The 15-U Blue team tried to recover on May 15 at home in the fog against Hanover, but got off to a slow start that doomed the effort. Hanover used its fast break to jump to a 6-1 first-quarter lead, after which the game was played nearly even.

Cohasset's defense recovered and limited the visitors to just four goals in the last three quarters; unfortunately, the team could muster just two goals of its own in what amounted to a good effort in a tough, 10-3 loss.

Cohasset's youngest boys teams both played against squads from Hanover, with the 11-U Blue team controlling the better part of the game but coming out on the wrong end of the score. As with the older boys, it was a slow start that wound up being the problem.

Sarah Brown scored her first goal of the season, outmaneuvering nearly every defender on the field to break the ice. Christian Davis and Nick Tangherlini played give-and-go to rack up consecutive goals – with each player notching a score and an assist – and then moved the ball for a bang-bang play that ended with Axel Seppala re-directing a pass to the crease for another Cohasset goal.

Chris Silvia notched a couple of goals and made some strong stops on defense, while Ryan Gillis made his presence known as well. John Mills, Mark Brown and Zach Coggins continued to impress, notching multiple scores on end-to-end runs; with the help of Evan Yeager, that group also displayed a defensive prowess beyond their years.

The Cohasset White 11-U team won its second game of the weekend, taking down Hanover's other young team by a final score of 6-5.

Will Golden – seeing his first action of the year in net – and Henry Brown backstopped a defense that routinely turned around Hanover efforts, with Teddy Patsos, Blair McGowan and Jack McElgunn starting the ball upfield for the offense.

On the offensive half of the field, Foster Eymer scored twice, Anthony Nahill added a goal and Max Montgomery picked up an assist, with Colin Bell providing excellent pressure even if he did not break onto the score sheet. Ryan McGovern led the midfielders, controlling many of the day's face-off draws along with Nate Morse. Cole Maher, Colin Whelan, Ryan McKeon, Drew Nahill, Matthew Arnold and Tommie Powers all stood out in a well-earned team victory.

The Cohasset White 13-U team spent May 15 at Barnstable, playing a physical game against a tough Barnstable Black squad. The White team worked the ball well in the first half, scoring on shots by Danny Czerkawksi and Derek Youngman, with Danny Brady and John McGoldrick picking up assists as the Cohasset team ran its transition game well.

Goalie Kyle Healy hung tough under fire by the Barnstable offense in the first half and had strong help from the defense anchored by Dean McNary, Geoff Swain and Pat Kearney. The attack position did its job well with Brennan Bukowski, Pete McKenna and Charlie Coffman all contributing. White went into halftime with spirited play by the middies Kyle Livingstone, Mitch McNary and Willie Brown down 4-2.

The second half saw great action between the two teams with Willie Brown in goal, facing an active Barnstable attack. Cohasset countered with very skilled team play, especially as John Collins deftly maneuvered the ball out of the defensive zone multiple times creating great transition chances for White. Youngman fed Mitch McNary for another score, but Cohasset could not muster enough goals and fell to the home team by a final of 9-3.

Oldest girls drop first game of the season

Cohasset's 15-U girls lacrosse program lost its first regular-season game in three seasons on Sunday, May 15, dropping a last-minute road decision to a Duxbury 3 team that the home team had stacked to act like an "A" team.

Cohasset, which divides its players evenly in accordance with Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League rules, had defeated all of Duxbury's other teams this season prior to matching up with Duxbury 3 at both age levels.

In the 15-U game, the action swung from end-to-end, with Gabriella Flibotte converting an Isabelle Franklin feed for a quick goal, and with Franklin converting a direct-free position to recapture the lead after a Duxbury score. The goal for Franklin was the 50th of her youth lacrosse career, making her just the second player to reach the 50-goal mark.

Lindsay Allard converted a direct-free position, but Cohasset then gave the home team two straight penalty shots, which Duxbury banged home to tie the score at 3. Flibotte scored the game's next two goals, tallies which pushed her career goal total to 150, or 100 more than the second-highest goal scorer (Franklin).

Another goal from Franklin made it look like Cohasset was ready to roll, but some defensive lapses and penalties allowed Duxbury to get back into it with two scores before the half, which ended with Cohasset in front 6-5.

The second half saw the teams trade scores, with Duxbury rotating scores with Flibotte until it was finally able to tie the score at 8. From there, Cohasset missed on its opportunities and Duxbury netted a controversial goal – where the ref acknowledged that a player was illegally in the crease but did not wave off the score – and Cohasset ran out of time as it moved in towards the net as the final whistle blew.

Thomson Jaffe made five saves in the Cohasset net, and Mimi Mahoney led a defense that had moments of brilliance interspersed with costly lapses.

The Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) also faced off against Duxbury's most stacked squad, in this case a team composed entirely of sixth graders, and also came out on the short end of a tight game.

Cohasset fell behind by two early, and then traded goals to the half with Anna Michalowski and Lindsay MacNaught notching the goals. The second half featured many scoring chances for both teams, but only two shots got past the goaltenders – Cohasset scoring on a goal from Michalowski – and the game ended with the home team up 5-3.

Molly McElgunn stood tall in the Cohasset net, stopping six shots, including several taken from right on the doorstep.

The Cohasset White 13-U team squared off against a much different Duxbury 1 team, and while it played a sloppy first half, the game was hardly in doubt.

McElgunn, Paige DeSisto, MacNaught, Michalowski and Kaci Kucinski scored for Cohasset, as the team cruised to a 5-3 halftime lead. McElgunn opened the second-half scoring, before two Duxbury goals made things look tight.

At that point, MacNaught fed Kathleen Kelly for a score, Merrick Sease finished a solo dash, Kucinski scored twice, DeSisto got her second of the day and Aniko Haber scored her first goal of the season to blow things open. A Duxbury score in the game's final seconds made the score 12-6, and Cohasset White raised its record to 5-2 on the year.

The Cohasset White 15-U team included a number of girls who lost in the Blue team's game, and they took out their frustrations early and often on the home team.

Katie Gaumer opened things up, and Hannah Burgess then drove from behind the next for another score to give Cohasset a 2-0 lead. Maura Barnes and Jenny Cahill converted two consecutive direct-free positions, and Lindsay Allard and Gabriella Flibotte scored single markets to make the score 6-0, and Cohasset squandered numerous more chances before the half.

Lindsey Hill, Lauren Blaze, Kate O'Callaghan, Katelyn Ryan and Paige Smith did great defensive work in front of Thomson Jaffe, who made two saves before moving out to play attack after the break.

Isabelle Franklin scored the first two goals of the second half, and Madeline Leahy answered Duxbury's first score. From there, Cohasset again missed a number of scoring runs and surrendered two scores to Duxbury. Hannah Burgess stopped the run by scoring on a direct-free position, and Duxbury nailed a late goal to close the game at 10-4. Gabriella Flibotte made two saves against four goals in the Cohasset net.

The loss by the 15-U Blue team means that Cohasset's record at that age level over the last three seasons is now 32-2-2, with the only other loss coming in a Jamboree game last year.

The girls return to the field on Sunday, May 22 with games against teams from Hingham.

Seaside Adventures sets sail for third year

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is accepting applications for its Seaside Adventures program. This is the third year for the CSCR camp that was developed as an entry program to introduce and familiarize children with the costal and ocean environment. The summer camp program is an outdoor activity camp for students ranging from third to sixth grade.

The camp is age-appropriate, exciting, with hands-on projects introducing essential concepts of oceanography, marine biology, and environmental science. Each day students are asked to think of essential questions related to the program's theme. Students are then given opportunities to reflect upon or discuss their understandings based upon their experiences. In other words, the camp is a forum to learn from experience. Seaside Adventures is based on the belief that important academic understandings can be gained by engaging in "playful" activities. Explorative play gives rise to essential questions - questions that form the basis for constructing knowledge. This constructivist approach to science is at the core of the Seaside Adventures curriculum.

"This summer day camp for young students provides a way for kids to get excited about science and finding new ways to explore the environment."

— Lisa Mullen, science teacher

"Seaside Adventures" combines the fun of being at the beach as well as teaches students about the coastal environment in which they live.

"This summer day camp for young students provides a way for kids to get excited about science and finding new ways to explore the environment", says Cohasset Middle School Science teacher and Seaside Adventures curriculum developer, Lisa Mullen. "It is a valuable way to concurrently learn and have fun and stimulates an early fascination for local ocean environment"

Interested parents can visit the camp's website at www.ccscr.org for additional information on camp activities and to fill out an application. Additionally, staff will be present from 9:00 –12:00 on May 21 and 22 at CSCR for sign-up. CSCR is located at 40 Parker Ave, last building on the left. Access to CSCR is also convenient from Government Island and the sailing club via a boardwalk that spans a vibrant salt marsh.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is a nonprofit organization with a central mission to educate students and young adults in the environmental sciences. CSCR conducts a wide range of educational programs to actively educate and involve student candidates in local environmental projects.

CHAMBER CHATTER

Map and business directory — The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced that a Cohasset map and business directory is in the works. This new marketing tool will provide a comprehensive categorical listing and brief description of retail and service businesses in town. As a benefit of membership, Cohasset Chamber members will be listed free of charge.

It is very important that members update their contact information. Members are advised to check the Chamber website to review business information, or complete the Contact Information Update form mailed with the Chamber renewal notice.

All updated information is due no later than June 1. For a limited time only, the Chamber is extending a special offer of $125 for a directory listing/description to non-member businesses. The $125 fee includes a Chamber membership effective immediately, through July 31, 2006.

Latvian organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset is pleased to present organist Ingrid Gutberg in recital on Sunday, May 22, at 3 p.m. Dr. Gutberg has had an extensive teaching career, from the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, to Boston University. She annually tours Europe and the U.S. and is president of the Latvian Guild of Organists and the Latvian Heritage Foundation. She is the organist of the Covenant Congregational Church in Boston. Her recital will feature works by Latvian composers, played on the magnificent 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner organ of St. Stephen's.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset. Ample parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781-383-1083.

OBITUARY

Elizabeth Doyle

Enjoyed helping children

Elizabeth "Liz" (Mulhern) Doyle, 54, died on April 25, 2005, at her home in Lake Worth, Florida.

Born in New Hyde Park, N.Y., she was the daughter of the late Florence and Edward Mulhern of Cohasset, and subsequently of Helen Mulhern, also of Cohasset.

Mrs. Doyle was employed at the Indian Pines Elementary School, Lake Worth, Fla., for the past 17 years. She will be remembered for her knack of making a book come to life for children, for her ability to boost their self esteem, and for bringing out the best in every child.

She leaves her husband of 33 years, Mark Callahan Doyle, formerly of Pittsfield; her children, Tyler Doyle of Lighthouse Point, Fla., Mike and Amanda Doyle, of Lake Worth, Fla.; two sisters, Mary Jewett of Foxboro, and Pat Butscher of Tallahassee, Fla.; two brothers, William "Bill" Mulhern of Sandwich, and Robert "Bob" Mulhern of Taunton; and extended family, Mike Delaney of Cohasset, Matt Delaney of Pembroke, Christine Suckow of Pembroke, and Connie Walsh of Falmouth.

A Memorial mass is being held on Saturday, June 4.

Donations in her memory may be made to Hospice of Palm Beach County, 5300 East Avenue, West Palm Beach, FL 33407.

RECREATION

Summer brochures available — The Cohasset Recreation Department announces the 2005 summer brochures are now available at the Town Hall and will be coming home soon via Cohasset schools with grades K-5.

All summer programs with additional recreation information are contained with the summer brochures.

Registrations are now being held for all sport-specific summer camps, with info and forms obtainable on the 1st floor foyer table of the Town Hall.

Additionally, registration for the CHS Cheerleading Clinic, held from Aug. 22, to 24, must be completed by May 27.

Also, registrations for Summer Playground, youth tennis, and drama will be held the week of June 13, at the Town Hall auditorium.

Boot camp fitness training — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4, on Cohasset Common, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges and push-ups.

Summer drama workshop — The Cohasset Dramatic Club will provide Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Theater Program for children ages 6-16. Registration for "Alice in Wonderland" will begin on Monday, June 13, at the Town Hall Auditorium.

This year the cost of the program will be $350, which is all-inclusive T-shirts, a cast party and all other events that pertain to the program. Auditions will be held the week of June 20. Two evening sessions will be held the week of June 27, with the day program beginning the week of July 4. The program will tentatively meet Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The program will wrap up on the weekend of Aug. 5, with four performances.

Checks can be made payable to The Cohasset Dramatic Club. There are many roles for both boys and girls; however, this program must be limited in number, hence, registering Monday, June 13, may be essential. For more information call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Cheerleading clinic — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the three day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Dog obedience — The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer throughout the summer, dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School. Classes will be held on Wednesday evenings, on the Town Common.

For both the beginner class and the obedience with distractions classes, dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6 to 7 and 7 to 8 p.m. The other sessions will be held during June, July and August.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five-week, one-hour per-week program.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Dogs need to be 3 months of age and over to quality for training classes and have up to date shots.

Holly Hill walk schedule changes

The guided bird walk at Holly Hill Farm originally scheduled for Saturday, May 7 was postponed due to heavy rains. Then new date is Saturday, May 21 starting at 8:30 a.m. at Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road. The walk is sponsored by the Friends of Holly Hill Farm and will be led by naturalist Sally Avery.

The guided wildflower walk at Holly Hill Farm date and time has also been changed. The walk is now scheduled for Sunday, May 22 at 2 p.m. The walk which is sponsored by the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, will be led by Meg Moore.

Meg Moore's lecture which precedes the walk will take place as originally scheduled on Thursday evening, May 19 at 7 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset.

Celebrating three decades of song and camaraderie

Group plans trip to New Mexico

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The Broad Cove Chorale is celebrating its 30th anniversary with a musical trip to Santa Fe. Chorale members come from Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Weymouth, and Plympton, with a wide audience in Cohasset and Hingham.

"I've conducted lots of different kinds of groups over the past 40 years, and the Chorale has always given me the most pleasure. It's such a wonderfully caring, committed, fun group," said Director Margo Euler. "Making it to this big anniversary is really special."

The group will perform with the Zia Singers, a women's chorus similar to the Chorale.

"Santa Fe was a natural choice because our beloved former accompanist, Lydia Madrick, moved there in 1994 and is now the accompanist of the Zia Singers," said Euler. Madrick and Euler have remained friends over the years. In fact, Euler visited Madrick twice in conjunction with singing in the Berkshire Choral Festival in Santa Fe.

"This will be an exciting place to visit, with its many art galleries, great shopping, interesting Anastasi ruins, and wonderful high-desert scenery," Euler said. "Everyone's life is at such a different place – we have both young mothers and grandmothers in the group -- that we couldn't pull off a trip together before, so this is quite unique."

Current members range in age from mid-thirties to mid-sixties, with a wide range of musical abilities. "The camaraderie the group enjoys is legendary, including frequent lunches together after rehearsals," said Euler. Recent performances include "Songs of the Sea," the music of Gustav Holst, and a wedding concert presented half in a church (as if at a wedding) and half in the social hall with a band as the reception entertainment.

Several Broad Cove Chorale alumnae returned to rehearsals this spring and will join the group making the trip to Santa Fe. They include Kathy Reardon of Hingham and Denise Rachel of Norwell, both members of the Unicorn Singers; Carol Whittaker of Braintree; Lorena Zeller of Hingham; Barbara Mann of Alexandria, Va., who will arrive in Hingham in time to perform with the Chorale on May 25 (see sidebar); Carolyn Curtis of Phoenix, Arizona; and Madrick.

"The camaraderie the group enjoys is legendary, including frequent lunches together after rehearsals."
— Margo Euler, director

The musical part of the anniversary tour will feature a joint concert on June 4 at the Santuario, an adobe mission church. They will also sing Mass at St. Francis Cathedral the next day. Both performances will include four-hand piano accompaniment showcasing the talents of Madrick and the Chorale's current pianist, Lenae Badger of Scituate. An original transcription of some of Brahms' Liebeslieder Waltzes re-voiced for women by Unicorn Singer Richard Jensen of Weymouth will be the grand finale by the two choruses, with the two pianists at the nine-foot Steinway.

On the final evening in Santa Fe, the Chorale will celebrate with a festive banquet, complete with singing. There they will revive their 10th anniversary song, with music and words by Hingham's Judy Hardy, followed by the 20th anniversary song, with words by Ruth Powell, and the 30th anniversary creation by Hingham's Sally Davenport.

"Other musical and humorous numbers are also expected to appear," said Euler, who founded the Chorale in 1975 as a selective chamber chorus for women when she moved from Concord to Hingham. Three years later she gathered a small mixed chorus of South Shore soloists to perform Menotti's "The Unicorn, the Gorgon, and the Manticore," from which the Unicorn Singers emerged. Both groups are highly praised for their eclectic, distinctive music programs and skilled musicianship and have become two of the South Shore's most recognized and respected choruses.

For 25 years the two groups rehearsed and performed at Broad Cove House, The Eulers' former home on Lincoln Street, built by one of Abraham Lincoln's ancestors. Upon taking up residence there, Euler made it her priority to check out the acoustics in the large music room that was added to the house in 1927.

Euler also founded and conducted several children's choirs and has been music director for area theater groups, including Hingham Civic Music Theatre's acclaimed 1987 production of "Evita."

She conducted the Concord Madrigals for 14 years and is an enthusiastic member of the American Choral Directors Association. She also served on the Massachusetts Arts Council and the Hingham Arts Lottery Council and was instrumental in the creation of festivals showcasing four area women's choruses in 1988 at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, and in 1991 at Harvard University.

The 20-plus member Chorale is a close-knit group coming from a variety of backgrounds. "The friendships, fun, giggles, and chatting over lunch with these fabulous ladies has been one of the very best parts of my life, way beyond the joy of making music with like-minded, talented, committed females," Euler said.

Oboist Sally Davenport, who has sung with the Chorale for some 15 years, called the experience "gratifying from an artistic point of view and a lot of fun. I love working on music that's both fun and beautiful as well as the camaraderie. We have a great time doing it."

The music ranges from musicals and parodies to classical numbers. "Margo puts together a wonderful concert. She has such a good eye and ear. We have good programming and a great conductor," Davenport said. "Our accompanist Lenae Badger is not only a wonderful piano player but also a wonderful singer."

The groups perform together in October and February and separately in December and in the spring.

"We pride ourselves on our unique style and the wide variety of music that we perform, ranging from Bach to Brahms and barbershop to Broadway, often from memory and in costume," Euler said. "We don't engage outside soloists, which means we attract excellent musicians who know they will have lots of solo and small ensemble opportunities." Both groups rehearse at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church in South Hingham.

Margo Euler, center, is surrounded by members of the Broad Cove Chorale who are celebrating their 30th anniversary with a trip to Santa Fe.

Besides her role as music director, Euler is manager of the Chorale and Unicorn Singers. "That frees the singers from most of the committee work and leaves them more time for singing," she said.

Besides the four-concert annual schedule, Chorale and Unicorn members sing at weddings, club events, senior centers, and house tours. "They work hard to delight and enrich the lives of both the singers and of the listening public of all ages and tastes on the South Shore and around Boston, " said Euler, who lives in Hingham with her "very understanding and supportive husband," Franz.

When she's not busy with music, she is an avid Scrabble player, reader, photographer, and walker. The Eulers' two grown daughters, Karen and Liesel, are also artistic. Karen currently sings with the Unicorn Singers.

Longtime Chorale member Lynn Anderson was encouraged to join the group by Kathy Reardon a number of years ago when her children were young. "We rehearse nine months of the year, so I spend more time with these women than with some of my friends," Anderson said. "It's a diverse and interesting group with varied interests, ages, voice ranges, and backgrounds. Some are involved with various causes, some have careers, and a few were born in Europe. I feel fortunate to have this opportunity to sing with the group and to have such an experience in a suburb."

Special send-off concerts planned

The Broad Cove Chorale is celebrating the completion of its 30th season with a trip to Santa Fe in June. The group will perform with the Zia Singers, a women's chorus similar to the Chorale.

Hingham and Cohasset seniors are invited to attend a send-off concert Wed., May 25, at 10:15 a.m. at the House of Prayer Lutheran Church, 916 Main St., Hingham. Coffee and refreshments will be served at 9:45 a.m. in the social hall. Reservations should be made by noontime May 23 by calling the Hingham Senior Center, (781) 741-1458.

The Chorale will perform the tour repertory again for the general public on May 25 at 8 p.m. at the same location.

Both concerts are free, but donations toward 30th anniversary trip expenses will be gratefully accepted.

Chorale members and alumnae who are heading for Santa Fe include Hingham residents Lynn Anderson, Sally Davenport, Diane O'Sullivan, Liz Murphy, Pat Holland, Rena Zeller, and Kathy Reardon; Cohasset residents Jo-Ann Heileman, Trish Morse, and Anne Reel; Susan Cameron, Lenae Badger, and Titine Joyce from Scituate; Mernie Clifton and Jean Prior of Weymouth; Norwell residents Marcia Babcock and Denise Rachel; Christa Prescott of Plympton; Braintree resident Carol Whittaker; and Chorale alumnae Barbara Mann of Alexandria, Va., and Carolyn Curtis of Phoenix, Az.

Osgood and Deer Hill schools celebrated "around the world" during Arts Night last week. From ceiling painting in the tradition of Michelangelo to the ancient art of mosaics to line dancing, students spent hours exploring the art of different cultures.

Soccer kid's portfolio up 355% in six months

At 12 years of age, in his soccer shorts, Christian Powers is not your average Wall Street investor. But neither are his hefty profits. Christian began trading stocks just after his twelfth birthday when his parents finally said he was old enough. In his first six months, Christian's portfolio was up 355%.

Software makes child's play of mastering stocks

How does a 12-year-old generate triple-digit gains that would be the envy of almost any investor? Christian's secret is Wizetrade™, a user-friendly software program that tracks the supply and demand of individual stocks and graphically captures the stock's movement. Once Christian sees the historical trend — and the current direction the stock has taken — he forms his trading strategy.

Home schooled by his mom, Treva, an experienced Wizetrader™, Christian was introduced to Wizetrade™ as part of his general education. "It's important for anyone to know good money management" explains Treva.

Spreading the wealth

"We tell our friends that if you're interested in stocks or ever consider buying stocks, get Wizetrade™ first because you need to be able to see what's going on with the stock," says Treva.

Stock runs in the family

Christian's younger sister, Summer, paper trades only, which means she uses Wizetrade™ to assess theoretical trades and then tracks their progress in real time. It's how to become familiar with Wizetrade™ without putting actual funds into the market. "The first paper trade she made is still successful,"says her proud dad, Parris.

Dad's portfolio up 500+ percent

Christian has taken his "Wizetrading" to heart — and to the bank. Christian's mom and dad also use Wizetrade™ and, in fact, introduced him to the software. His mom, Treva, says "My average over the last 26 trades has been 12 to 13 percent gain." Christian's dad, Parris, adds that with Wizetrade™, "Over the last two years, I've probably increased my asset (base) over 500 or 600 percent."

"It saved our retirement account."

For the Powers family, it's not just about making money. It's also about protecting what they've earned. When the U.S. stock market plunged three years ago and investors lost trillions of dollars, Parris says, "Our retirement portfolio was not affected in one little way by the movement that we saw in the market in 2001… That's probably the single most impressive thing about Wizetrade™ — it saved our retirement account."

Wizetrade™ was wise to Enron

Wizetrade™ focuses on the buying and selling activity in individual stocks. "The great thing about Wizetrade™ is that if you follow the Wizetrade™ criteria, you'd never be trapped into a stock like an Enron. The signals would show up very quickly… you'd be out of that stock long before it becomes a liability like Enron has become to so many people in their retirement portfolio," explains Parris.

Following stocks can be child's play. Wizetrade™ shows if the market is bullish or bearish on more than 27,000 stocks and mutual funds — whether your investing strategy is long term, intermediate, or short term.

Life without Wizetrade™ is not an option

Treva says investing without the advantage of Wizetrade™ would be "like a surgeon trying to do surgery without his eyes. When you have Wizetrade™, you can see what's going on and choose when to get in a stock and when to exit the stock. We're just so pleased with it."

Parris adds, "Having traded stocks beforehand, and now trading stocks using Wizetrade™, we would never trade stocks or buy stocks without using Wizetrade™."

Up $18,000 in two months

In May and June of 2002 when many stocks were declining, Wizetrade™ helped the Powers family identify stocks that investors still had strong confidence in. "Just watching those stocks, and entering and exiting according to Wizetrade™ criteria, we made over $18,000 in just those two months," reports Parris.

Still, 12-year-old Christian is the family's budding superstar. "He made $720 a few days ago on one of his trades. He's tickled," says Treva.

Christian doesn't hand out stock tips. His advice to everyone is simply to give Wizetrade™ a try. "Anybody can do it," predicts the successful young Wizetrader™.

The 2 Forces You Must Follow to Win on Wall Street

Anyone can be positioned to beat the market if they harness the power of the two key factors that rule Wall Street with an iron fist.

Wizetrade™ shows the supply and demand pressures on stocks in real time, positioning investors to capitalize on these two key market forces. Knowing which side of the supply/demand "tug of war" to be on has proven to be a significant advantage, and Wizetrade™ lets investors track supply and demand like a bloodhound.

Recognize a dramatic timing opportunity

A change in the balance of supply and demand is a classic timing opportunity. That's why thousands of investors rely on Wizetrade™ to monitor trading activity in real time. Wizetrade™ displays easy-to-follow red and green indicators that alert investors to making decisions regarding stocks experiencing extreme supply and demand pressures.

See if your stocks pass the Wizetrade™ test

Discover how many gainers (and losers) you're holding by attending the free Wizetrade™ workshop. See firsthand how Wizetrade™ works and how easy it is to use Wizetrade™. Within seconds, Wizetrade™ reveals if the forces of supply and demand have tagged a stock as a potential diamond or a hot potato.

- ☑ Witness for yourself which stocks investors are buying and which stocks they're dumping.
- ☑ Discover if you're holding blue chips that have investors singing the blues.
- ☑ See why market newsletters, magazines, and newspapers can't match the real-time market analysis of Wizetrade™.
- ☑ Discover why Wizetrade™ helps take the guesswork out of investing and lets you trade with added confidence if, of course, you believe in the universal law of supply and demand.

TAKE THE FAMOUS WIZETRADE™ CHALLENGE

Name any stock. See if Wizetrade™ gives it a green light, or a red light.

"No stock can fool Wizetrade™. We'll prove it at the free Wizetrade™ portfolio clinic."

George Thompson, Wizetrade™ Creator and Author of Don't Play in the Street

What Investors Are Saying About Wizetrade™

"I know my account would be over six figures if I had had this two years ago. For the first time in my life, I feel like financial independence is in my future."
— Darryl Gordon, Florida

"If Wizetrade™ was no longer available, I would quit playing the market altogether."
— Don Courtney, Florida

"Wizetrade™ saved my portfolio! In this market, my ex-broker had no idea what to do."
— James Jacobson, Illinois

"It is ridiculous to trade this market without Wizetrade™. I will not trade without it."
— Mel Raiman, Georgia

"I took the conservative approach and have been paper trading for three weeks. I did my first trade today… and made $577!"
— Henry Tucker, Texas

Lettermen still in style

Vocal group plays Plymouth Sunday

The one thing that Tony Butala, founding member of "The Lettermen" would have changed in the more than 45-year history of the popular vocal group is a surprising one.

"We chose the wrong name," explained Butala from his home in the California wine country last week. "In the late 1950s, when you started a vocal group and wanted to stand out from the crowd, all you had to do was use a novel name that would give your group its own unique look and image."

At a time when most pop singing groups had school-related names like "The Four Freshmen" and "The Four Preps," Butala's trio was given the moniker "The Lettermen," and the appropriate letter sweaters to wear in concert. Before long the name had become dated. The Lettermen already had a few hits, however, and Columbia Records was reluctant to tamper with success by changing the group's name as was Butala's wish.

The sweaters were moth-balled, but the name remained as the group recorded a long list of hits including "The Way You Look Tonight," "When I Fall In Love," "Goin' Out of My Head/Can't Take My Eyes Off You" and "Hurt So Bad" which earned them a legion of still-loyal fans.

The Lettermen bring their smooth vocal stylings to Plymouth Memorial Hall on Sunday, May 22.

"We have changed over the years, but our tradition of vocal harmony and positive love ballads continues," says Butala. "And our own rule is to never dress below the level of our audience. Our stage wardrobe is comprised of denim jeans for outdoor festivals and fairs, casual clothes for colleges and tuxedoes for hotels with even glitzier garb for casino showrooms. And we even still pull out the sweaters for a medley of our earliest hits."

The contents may vary, but the suitcases are always packed as The Lettermen — now Butala, Donovan Tea and Darren Dowler — average some 100 concert dates each year and are booked through 2007. They also still regularly release new albums.

"We're recording our 75th album, 'The Lettermen on Broadway.' We found a whole new demographic a few years back with 'The Lettermen at the Movies.' People of all ages love Broadway music just as they love the music of the movies. These albums have done very well for us."

As lead singer on all but two of the group's biggest hits — and founder of the Vocal Group Hall of Fame — Butala, 64, knows something about doing well and enduring in an often fickle business.

"I've been performing professionally since I was seven," explains the Pennsylvania native and father of four. "I'm more charged up now than ever before, because I don't need the money. I do it now because no other job comes with such instant gratification. You can make a lot of money in other fields, but you won't get a standing ovation or get asked for an autograph."

The Lettermen play Plymouth Memorial Hall, Court Street, Plymouth, May 22 at 7 p.m. For tickets, call 866-468-7619 or visit www.ticketweb.com <http://www.ticketweb.com> or www.plymouthhall.com. Tickets are also available at all Strawberries locations.

LISTEN To Life

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127
NAVIGATING CANAL INSTRUMENTS
In recent years, there has been considerable interest in canal-style hearing instruments, which are barely visible. There are two types: in-the-canal (ITC) instruments, which fill the outer half of the ear canal; and completely-in-the-canal instruments (CIC), which penetrate deeper into the inner half of the ear canal. Because these small devices place their microphones either within or at the entrance of the ear canal, they are able to take advantage of the natural amplification of the outer ear bowl. In addition, because their receivers are located so near the eardrum, less amplification is needed to produce the required amount of pressure to make hearing possible. As a result, distortion is lower and feedback is less like to occur.
Good hearing is crucial to communication and the enjoyment of life's everyday happenings as well as its special moments. Don't let the absence of the sounds of life become a way of life. Take action now and call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, for individualized attention to your hearing requirements. Better hearing begins at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, 781-337-1144. We offer FREE hearing evaluations and FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased and all in-office repairs are FREE for all makes of hearing aids.
P.S. Canal-style instruments are not sufficiently powerful to be fitted for profound or severe hearing losses.

Millennium bats 1,000 for a relaxing cruise vacation

By MARK CHAPMAN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

ST. THOMAS -- Afternoon serenity on my veranda on the Celebrity Millennium was shattered by a commotion on the dock below. A group including a couple of bikini-clad girls were cackling loudly -- one even rolling on the dock in laughter -- at the antics of a shirtless, middle-aged man of Faustian proportions who was shouting at a security guard.

The man was carrying a plastic cup with a red liquid. It was apparent that it was neither his nor his companions' first beverage of the afternoon.

The group, mercifully, was trying to board the wrong ship. The right ship, for them, apparently was the Carnival Victory, docked a couple hundred yards away.

The right ship for us was Celebrity's Millennium, its 5-year-old flagship.

Since the line's inception, Celebrity has been all about the food, the service, the class. While other lines promise a let-your-hair-down, what's-done-here-stays-here vacation, Celebrity would prefer its guests keep their hair up, at least in its public spaces. And though that might send some party animals scrambling for another cruise line, it makes for a relaxing, less intimidating and more sophisticated getaway for those whose behavior is more restrained.

That's not to say the Millennium is boring. Cosmos, the ship's contemporary-style dance club, jumps every night with theme parties and disco music until the wee small hours. And by day, there are learning opportunities -- computer classes, golf lessons, mixology classes, floral arranging and more -- as well as card games, board games, lots of Bingo, a deck band and plenty of health-and-fitness activities.

And then there's the food.

Celebrity has a long and happy association with master French chef Michel Roux, who creates many of the recipes for the line's 10 ships. Roux's influence is everywhere, from the decadent desserts to the rich wine list to the Olympic Restaurant, Millennium's amazing alternative dining venue. But I must say, having cruised with the line beginning 11 years ago, that dinner in the main dining room, though good, is no longer head-and-shoulders above the competition.

The casual buffet restaurant is also typical of most cruise ships. But then there's the Olympic Restaurant.

The Olympic is Millennium's reservations-only nod to dining as art and entertainment. As a harpist plays softly in the background, white-gloved waiters dote on every table. Each course is choreographed. Caesar salads and dessert flambes are done tableside. There is an extensive wine list. The food, including the filet mignon, is exquisite. The charge for all this wonderfulness is $30 per person. A chef's tasting menu is also available, each dish coming with a recommended wine, for an additional $27.

Be prepared for white-glove treatment and an abundance of ambiance at the Olympic Restaurant, Celebrity Millennium's alternative dining venue.

My intent on this weeklong Caribbean cruise was to relax, and it started with a little thing: At Celebrity's Port Everglades terminal, the porters work on a strict no-tipping policy. Check-in was painless even at the height of the rush.

My cabin was in what Celebrity calls Concierge Class, a relatively new category that includes express luggage delivery, a bottle of sparkling wine in your room upon arrival, fresh fruit and fresh-cut flowers every day, cold hors d'oeuvres each afternoon, duvets and pillow-top mattresses, double-thick Frette bathrobes, early embarkation and debarkation, dining and seating preference and some other minor goodies, such as a choice of pillow type. For this you pay about $50 to $120 per person more than a deluxe veranda cabin. (You also get slightly more room.)

One of my favorite things about Celebrity is the lack of public address announcements. There are a few throughout the day, but they are kept to a minimum. It is such a pleasure to not have to listen to frequent exhortations to head for the art auction or the next bingo game. This allows for such pursuits as sleeping, enjoying the many recordings available in Millennium's music library or reading a book on the veranda or in any of the many warm, inviting public areas, such as Cova Cafe, a coffee and espresso bar, which is something my wife and I both did whenever the mood struck us. You gotta love life at sea.

At night, dinner was followed by the show in the main theater. The Millennium offers four fully staged shows on the seven-day Caribbean cruise, more than most lines. This should be a good thing, but entertainment long has been Celebrity's Achilles' heel, and on Millennium it is still hit and miss.

The most disappointing show was the "Spectacle of Broadway," narrated on video by Joel Grey. The diminutive actor "stands" center stage and talks about Broadway to introduce the evening, and the the cast presented halfhearted renditions of poorly conceived medleys from such shows as "West Side Story." (They even sanitized the lyrics of the cynical "America.")

At the end of the show, just before the "Chorus Line" finale, Grey is presented once again and ends his monologue by introducing the song "from the longest-running musical in Broadway history." Um, can someone say, "Needs an update?" "Chorus Line" was passed by "Cats," "Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables" years ago.

The strangest show is "Classique -- A Musical Odyssey," which easily could be retitled "A Musical Oddity." This show closely resembles a fever dream.

"Fantasea," on the other hand, is one of the week's highlights, a Cirque du Soleil-like show with aerial acts and high-energy dancers (on some Celebrity ships there is actually real Cirque entertainment thanks to a new alliance with the famous troupe). And "I Love the Nightlife" is a pop music tour de force that brings out the best in the young cast.

But my heart really belongs to Michael's Pub, the New York-style piano bar that featured the marvelous Pamala Stanley, a disco star in the '80s who had major Billboard dance chart hits. Now she's playing piano and singing jazz, show tunes, standards and pop hits with the best of them.

That is the epitome of the kind of experience vacationers can expect from Millennium and from Celebrity -- laid back, sophisticated and completely memorable.

Jump ship for shopping, dining and touring adventures

By MARK CHAPMAN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Some people take a cruise mostly to enjoy the ship. Some of those people never set foot on shore. On a ship like Millennium, it is quite possible to have a thoroughly enjoyable time without prowling the islands.

Other folks choose their cruises based on the itinerary. Our Millennium route from Fort Lauderdale included San Juan, Puerto Rico; St. Thomas, the U.S. Virgin Islands; and Nassau, Bahamas, all popular cruise ship destinations, as well as the less visited Dominican Republic.

The San Juan stop is all day, allowing plenty of time to check out Old San Juan's wonderful old Spanish architecture. It's a walkable city if you are able to handle some pretty steep hills. If not, take a coach tour. There are beautiful buildings with open courtyards, scenic city squares and excellent restaurants, all condensed into less than one square mile. You also can check out El Morro Castle, a protective fort that was built from 1539 to 1787.

Active sorts can catch a tour bus to El Yunque rain forest, go horseback riding or take a tour of the Bacardi Rum distillery (yes, there are free samples).

The ship also docks in St. Thomas for a full day. Passengers have lots of time for jewelry and electronics bargain-hunting in Charlotte Amalie or a trip across the island to the gorgeous Magen's Bay beach. For us, fighting the crowds in the shops -- there can be as many as seven ships in port at once -- holds no allure, but we headed to a hidden little restaurant named Cuzzin's. Any taxi driver can take you there from the dock for about $3.

Nassau is another port that is crowded with shoppers. We headed to Atlantis Resort on Paradise Island. The restaurant and bar in the open-air pavilion near the predator tank has the best mudslides I've ever had.

The most interesting of the ports, however, was Casa de Campo in the Dominican Republic, a sprawling, 7,000-acre resort that Golf Magazine has called "the finest golf resort in the world."

In addition to golf, the attractions here are horseback riding and skeet shooting, taking a catamaran ride or hitting the beach. Or you can tour Altos de Chavon. Three miles east of Casa de Campo, Altos de Chavon is a replica of a medieval Spanish village built by an Italian cinematographer and now site of an artists colony. The buildings are made of stone, the streets cobblestone, and the views breathtaking. The artists colony is affiliated with Parsons School of Design in New York City.

The port call runs from 1 to 11 p.m., so you can shoot some skeet or take a horseback ride, take in Altos de Chavon and go to the village's Latin musical extravaganza, "Kandela," at 8:15 p.m.

Former ACO gets job back

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Fired" is no longer an adjective that goes before Paul Murphy's name.

The Cohasset animal control officer has been reinstated to the part-time position. Monday was his first day back on the job.

Murphy sued the town and former town manager Mark Haddad for unfair termination. His reinstatement was part of the settlement reached with the town, according to Leonard H. Kesten of Brody, Hardoon, Perkins and Kesten, which is retained by the town's insurance company to defend claims.

Other terms of the settlement, such as back pay, have not been made public.

Haddad fired Murphy on Oct. 20, 2003, the same day he placed Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean on paid administrative leave. Unlike the officers, who returned to work the end of June 2004, Murphy was not protected by a union or Civil Service.

Haddad resigned last May and Robert Jackson retired as police chief in June.

The 'nays' have it on override votes

40 percent went to polls

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset now finds itself lining up with its counterparts like Scituate and Norwell in voting down a Prop. 2-1/2 override this year.

Voters who turned out for Saturday's special election were in a "no-no" mood.

They said no to both a $400,000 general override for the operating budget and a $13.2 million debt exclusion to subsidize 50 percent of the cost of sewer expansions of both the Central and North Cohasset sewer districts.

The sewer projects will go ahead but will be paid for 100 percent by the users.

But the town will have to call a special Town Meeting before the tax rate is set in the fall to balance the fiscal 2006 budget.

The April 2 annual Town Meeting adopted a budget assuming the override would pass. Of the $400,000 figure — $360,000 was slated for the schools and $40,000 for building maintenance.

But whether the schools will shoulder the entire $400,000 cuts remains to be seen.

"The issue of what departments and services should bear the burden of budget reductions will be discussed and I am sure debated over the next few months," Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

Saturday's turnout of 1,976 — or roughly 40 percent of the town's 5,149 registered voters — was surprisingly high, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. Douglas had predicted about half that, judging from the low number of absentee ballots cast, which is usually a good barometer of voter interest.

There didn't seem to be a large anti- or pro-override effort, unlike in prior years. On election day, one vehicle along Highland Avenue was covered with "vote no" signs from past override

Full-day gets OK

Half-day will also continue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Final enrollment figures have been tallied and it looks as if the Osgood School will provide full-day kindergarten for 80 students beginning this September. With 12 students interested in a half-day program so far, the numbers are large enough that the half-day program can run on its own, much to the delight of parents.

During a recent informational meeting for parents of soon-to-be kindergartners, the idea of combining full-and half-day kindergarten students in the same classroom was floated. At that time final enrollment numbers were not known, but it looked as if there might not be enough half-day students to necessitate an entire class. Some parents said they felt pressured to enroll their children in the full-day program when they were told half-day students would be included in the same class with full-day students, and parents could dismiss their half-day students early.

However, the deadline to sign up for kindergarten was May 18, and now that the final enrollment numbers are in, Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan said the 12 half-day students who have committed to the program are enough to sustain one half-day classroom. In addition, there is always the possibility parents will change their minds and want to move from full-day to half-day, or that new families will move to town.

"We had a projected (total) enrollment of 92, but it looks like

Memorial Day is a time for the town to pay its respects to veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom. For friends and family of Cohasset resident Craig Michael Simeone, Memorial Day will likely bring mixed emotions, as it marks with pride the way he selflessly served his country during the Vietnam War, but is also the anniversary of his date of sacrifice.

Born March 7, 1948, Simeone was born and raised in Cohasset. He lived at 34 Bancroft Road and was a member of the Cohasset High School graduating class of 1966. He was well-liked by his classmates and his best friend, former state Sen. Bill Golden, said he remembers everyone wanting to be friends with Simeone, who had a great sense of adventure and was always full of excitement.

Simeone's zest for life sparked an interest for car racing and his aunt Anna Abruzzese remembers how he used to race his Barracuda (a 60s model sports car) in New Hampshire on the weekends.

Perhaps it was his infectious nature that led fellow classmate and neighbor Maureen Brennock to ask Simeone to be her date for the senior prom. The two walked to school together every day, and when Brennock posed the question, Simeone of course said yes.

But it wasn't just Simeone's enthusiasm that drew friends to him, Golden said it was the way he would always go out of his way to ensure everyone felt included.

DA rules Sewer commission violated Open Meeting Law

Did not post for selectman's meeting

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The verdict is in and the District Attorney's office has ruled the sewer commission violated the Open Meeting Law by not separately posting for an April 4 selectmen's meeting at which all commissioners were present. However, the board of selectmen, which was also mentioned in the complaint for not properly posting the meeting on its end, has been cleared of any violation.

"It is clear from the comments that each member of the sewer commission was speaking as an individual member of the sewer commission and not as a private individual."

— Norfolk County DA's office

Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, filed the complaint with the District Attorney's office on April 13. She believed selectmen violated the Open Meeting Law for failing to post their meeting in a timely manner. The meeting was posted Friday, April 1. While that technically met the 48-hour notification required by theOpen Meeting Law, Town Hall closes at 1 p.m. on Friday, which may have been too soon for residents to be properly informed before the Monday night meeting.

"I believe the intent was to avoid notifying those who might voice an opposition," she wrote.

Quigley also pointed out selectmen's meetings are normally held on a Tuesday and the Monday meeting would not have been expected, and traditionally, there are no meetings held between Town Meeting and Election Day, as was the case that week.

In addition, the meeting dealt with the Cook Estate, which is a highly controversial topic, and the sewer commissioners were present and answered questions pertaining to sewer issues. Quigley's complaint states, "To circumvent the Open Meeting Law, these commissioners sat in the public seating area and spoke as 'private citizens.' However, they replied to questions posed by the selectmen only in regard to sewer issues."

Town Counsel Adam Simms asserted in a letter sent to the DA's office that Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz and members John Beck and Sean Cunning did not attend in their official capacity due to the fact that they sat in the public area of the meeting room and each stated repeatedly that they were there to express their own positions, and not the position of the board. He added there were also no votes taken at the meeting, and therefore the members should be seen as individuals who attended the meeting as residents.

However, the DA's office listened to an audio tape of the meeting and has ruled against Town Counsel's opinion. Its response said because all three commissioners were present, and all three participated in the discussion and answered questions posed by the selectmen and residents, there was "clearly an exchange of views as each member heard what the other had to say regarding their positions on various sewer matters and could base future answers on others' responses."

"It is clear from the comments that each member of the sewer commission was speaking as an individual member of the sewer commission and not as a private individual. Each member was asked his opinion about matters within the province of the sewer commission and each member offered his opinion on matters within the province of the sewer commission," the ruling states.

To remedy the situation, the sewer commission must agree to comply with the DA's finding in the future. Second, because the sewer commission did in fact have a meeting the night of April 4, "This office believes it is appropriate for the sewer commission to comply with the Open Meeting Law by creating minutes of that meeting in compliance with the Open Meeting Law, so that citizens may access a record of the sewer commission's activities at the meeting. Such minutes must be made available for public inspection, and a copy should be forwarded to this office."

At the beginning of the April 4 meeting, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer questioned its legality stating he was not thoroughly convinced it had been posted properly and could proceed. Some members of the board said either way, the meeting could proceed without breaking the Open Meeting Law, as long as no votes were taken and it remained informational. After hearing the comments on the audio tape, the DA's office voiced a note of caution.

"It has long been the position of this office that a meeting of a governmental body occurs if any public business over which the governmental body has jurisdiction is discussed or considered. Thus, 'informational meetings' require that the governmental body comply with the Open Meeting Law, including the 48-hour posting requirement."

Dispatcher harassment case could go to trial

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An employee with attendance problems? Or a victim of sexual harassment?

It may take a jury to decide.

Former civilian dispatcher Barbara DeWolfe, who claims she was fired after requesting a stress leave due to harassment allegedly inflicted on her by a sergeant who regularly shared her shift, has not reached a settlement with the town.

"She is pressing forward on this and we have every confidence at trial the town of Cohasset will be fully vindicated."

— Attorney Leonard Kesten

According to Attorney Leonard H. Kesten of Brody, Hardoon, Perkins and Kesten, which is retained by the town's insurance company to defend claims, the case is proceeding to trial.

Kesten said the town had a "perfectly legitimate attendance issue" with DeWolfe.

Former Town Manager Mark Haddad fired DeWolfe — who had worked as a dispatcher for 18 months and had received two prior, written reprimands about attendance problems — on Oct. 29, 2003 after she called then chief Robert Jackson to say she would be absent from her assigned shift due to child-care problems. She did not report for that shift.

The town filed an unemployment claim to that effect, but the state Department of Employment and Training ruled that was not a valid reason and awarded her benefits, according to DeWolfe's lawyer Jim Ciapciak of Ciapciak & Associates.

He said the termination letter was delivered to her home before she was even scheduled for her shift that day. DeWolfe believed her termination was in retaliation for making complaints with respect to the harassment.

DeWolfe has claimed some officers watched adult-oriented cable channels at the police station and that Sgt. David Pomarico touched her in an inappropriate and unwelcome manner, by pulling her hair and bringing his face close to hers. She claimed she did not feel safe in such an environment and was oftentimes alone with Pomarico.

Pomarico retired last June and could not be reached for comment.

Kesten said DeWolfe's charges came as a shock to the police department which had not had any complaints about sexual harassment. He explained with only one dispatcher on a shift, when someone doesn't show up at 4 p.m. "it's a real problem."

"She is pressing forward on this and we have every confidence at trial the town of Cohasset will be fully vindicated," Kesten said. "There was nothing untoward going on in the police department other than some officers watching movies on HBO in the conference room." At the time the department subscribed to a cable-TV package, including HBO.

He said the sergeant's involvement with DeWolfe was "not in any way sexual." He said the only thing Pomarico watched on TV was golf and black & white Westerns.

Kesten said DeWolfe was not present when Pomarico shared vacation photos with another male at the station that included a "joke photo" of him in the buff. The other male was laughing, Kesten said.

He said it was a shame that a police officer's career would be tarnished by allegations of sexual harassment. "It's important to have this trial, so the citizens of Cohasset can see that he did nothing like that."

Ciapciak, DeWolfe's attorney, is also looking forward to a trial. He said the officers were watching more than just HBO. The truth should come out when the officers are under oath giving their sworn testimony during depositions and trial, he said.

Kesten said DeWolfe's firing is unrelated to other police matters involving Sgt. William Quigley, Officer James McLean and Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, who are all back on the job, after being suspended or, in Murphy's case, terminated by Haddad in October 2003.

The claim by another former dispatcher, Adrienne Davenport, is being handled by the Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association, dubbed the MIIA, an insurance pool that represents municipalities. Michael Cusack, vice president of claims, confirmed there is a claim but declined to comment further.

Davenport, who resigned on June 5, 2002 after about eight months as a full-time dispatcher, claims several police officers and Haddad created a hostile work environment by making false allegations that she was having an affair with a co-worker.

Griffin seeks expertise for new antenna system

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has been approached by two different companies which would like to set up distributed antenna systems, or DAS, in town. The systems would be erected in lieu of cell phone towers and would improve cell phone reception, particularly in the downtown area where it is currently lacking.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he thinks looking into implementing the technology is a great idea.

"So many people rely on cell phones" that it makes sense from a basic safety standpoint to try to improve cell phone reception in town, he said. He suggested along with studying about the technology, the town look into potential adverse impacts the system could bring.

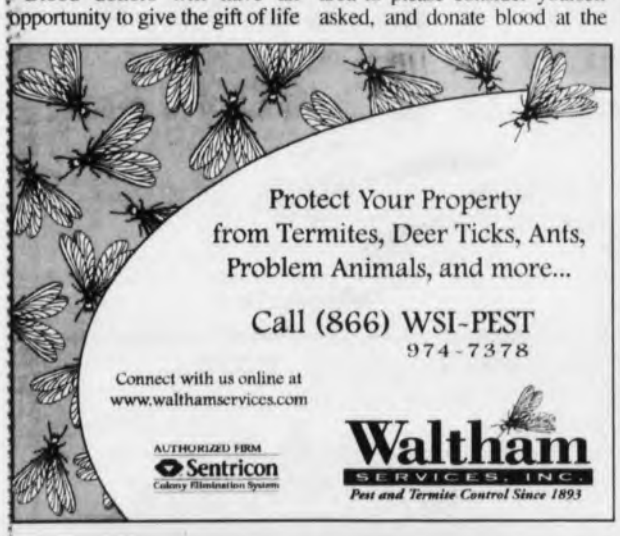
Griffin said he has also received a proposal from a third company which would like to install a flag pole reception system, which could service different kinds of cell phones. Selectman Gary Vanderweil said it might make sense for the town to look at both the DAS and flagpole technologies and potentially implement both to insure a wide variety of cell phone plans have enhanced reception.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he has some experience working with the technologies and would be happy to do some due diligence on the matter. Griffin said he would also encourage anyone with expertise in this area to contact him in the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105.

Cohasset community blood drive June 1 at St. Anthony's parish center

The American Red Cross reminds local residents that blood donations are still needed to meet the needs of patients in hospitals throughout New England.

"Blood donors should know that they are always needed," said Donna Morrissey. "During times of great shortage, the need for blood may get more public attention; but the need for donations is constant. No matter what time of year, no matter what may be happening in the world, approximately 1500 units of blood are needed in New England every single day. The time it takes a caring volunteer to donate blood is a gift beyond measure."



Blood donors will have an opportunity to give the gift of life at the Cohasset Community Blood Drive Wednesday, June 1 at the St. Anthony Parish Center at the corner of South Main and Summer St. from 1 to 7 p.m. All blood types are needed. Babysitting is also provided from 3 to 5 p.m. Ample parking is available.

To give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Donors are safe to give blood, every eight weeks.

"Most people when asked, will say they have never given blood because no one has ever asked them," Morrissey noted. "Because there is no substitute for a volunteer blood donor, I am asking everyone in the Cohasset area to please consider yourself asked, and donate blood at the upcoming blood drive."

The Red Cross always gets a good turnout when it visits Cohasset. Residents are asked to respond if possible when a volunteer from a church, civic, corporate or social organization calls. New donors are needed.

To register and make an appointment to donate, or if you have any questions call Kevin or Ann O'Connor 781-383-1290 or call the Red Cross directly at 1-800-GIVE-LIFE. www.newenglandblood.org.

Parents flock to full-day kindergarten program

we will exceed that," said Sheehan, adding she has already been contacted by two families who are not yet registered but are in the process of buying homes in town, and will be registering their children once they officially move in. She said it is typical to have four or five move-ins throughout the summer months.

But the Cohasset schools are trying to keep class sizes low, which led the school committee to vote in favor of capping all four full-day kindergarten classes . That means any new families that move to town will automatically be placed in a half-day class.

"I would not go higher than 20" students in a class, said school committee member Adrienne MacCarthy and the school committee agreed. The parents of the 80 students, who enrolled in the full-day program, put down a $100 deposit and will be assured a place in one of the four, full-day classes. A wait list will be started for additional students, who would like to enroll in the full-day class.

The parents of the 80 students, who have enrolled in the full-day program, put down a $100 deposit and will be assured a place in one of the four, full-day classes.

MacCarthy said she thinks some parents put down the $100 to make sure their child has a place in the full-day class. However, she said she wouldn't be surprised if parents change their minds once they are assured the half-day class will operate as its own entity. If that happens, slots in the full-day classes will open up and changes can be made, as long as there are no more than 20 children in a class.

As a way to help boost educational opportunities for Cohasset's youngest students as well as the bottom line of the budget, the school department has chosen to offer a tuition-based full-day kindergarten program for the first time this fall.

Parents will pay $1,800 "tuition" to participate in the full-day program for the year. With 80 students signed up, the program could yield $144,000. There is no charge for the half-day program.

Fifty-five percent of Massachusetts school districts offer full-day kindergarten. However, space and fiscal resources have been the top two barriers to implementing programs. With the movement of the third grade up to the Deer Hill school, Osgood has space to accommodate full-day kindergarten.

For more information on full-day kindergarten please visit the Department of Education's Web site at www.doe.mass.edu or contact Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan at (781) 383-6117.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Lights on at schools

School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams said she has been attending various meetings around town and has heard some negative comments from residents who say the lights are on at the schools long after the buildings should be closed for the day.

"I am not satisfied with the feedback I'm getting on the lights," she said. "If they're on for no purpose, it's a waste of money."

Although the lights must be on for safety reasons in some parts of the school, and while custodians are cleaning at night, Williams asked Town Facilities Manager Brian Adams if he could look into ways lighting could be limited, therefore cutting back on electricity and eliminating some of the glow for nearby neighbors. Adams said he would look into the matter and would be back with suggestions at the June 13 School Committee meeting.

High school writers published in magazine

Cohasset High School English teacher Christine Berman's students have been published in "Teen Ink," a print magazine written entirely by teens. Any student can submit creative writing, art, and photographs at no charge, and those published will be read by teens in other schools nationwide. Students published in the May issue include Cecelia Chapin and Molly Kirk. Throughout the course of the school year, more than 20 students were published in the magazine.

Breathalyzers to help keep kids safe during prom season

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Following the dance, students will arrive via trolley for the post-prom party, which "locks in" students at the high school for a night full of planned activities intended to keep them safe.

Students will be dressed to the nines Friday (tonight) when they are showcased on Cohasset Common during the pre-prom gala. In the local red-carpet event, students will pose for the cameras of friends and family before heading off in trolleys to the Venezia restaurant to dance the night away.

But this year, before beginning their night of fun, students in the Class of 2005 will be asked to take a breathalyzer test, which is a practice that has become increasingly common in other area high schools. Towns such as Hingham, Marshfield, Scituate and Norwell have begun administering breathalyzers to students entering school-related functions to determine whether they are under the influence of alcohol.

"We have already adopted a policy," said Cohasset Middle High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo, and use of breathalyzers has already begun at school functions. He said both he and Assistant Principal Michael Gill administered the test at the junior/senior semi-formal and students and parents alike were happy the measures had been taken.

DeLorenzo said by administering the breathalyzers, it takes the pressure off students to drink. There are no worries about getting caught and being kicked off a sports team or watching a friend get caught. Parents can also feel relieved knowing their children will be having a great time and that they will be safe.

"This year was the best time we've ever had," said DeLorenzo of the semi-formal, adding when it was time to go home, the student's didn't want to leave. He said he expects the same will be true at the prom, as it always is.

"We're going to have a great time and great food," he said, adding the Venezia Restaurant in Dorchester has a beautiful view of the Boston skyline, which weather permitting, students will be able to enjoy from an outside balcony.

Following the dance, students will arrive via trolley for the post-prom party, which "locks in" students at the high school for a night full of planned activities intended to keep them safe. The details of the party are kept secret to surprise those who attend. This year's party will run from midnight to 5 a.m.

The issue of implementing breathalyzers at school functions surfaced due in part to the events at last year's post prom party where seniors found a way to sneak alcohol into the school beforehand. During the day, while the school was kept open to allow underclassmen to view the decorations for the party, some students apparently hid alcohol in lockers and in the plants, and some had alcohol taped to their legs when the came to the party, according to reports. This year, students are being required to sign a contract which specifically says they pledge to remain drug and alcohol free throughout the entire evening, and new precautions such as the breathalyzer are being implemented.

"Everyone's backpack is going to be searched," said Lynn Durkin, one of the parents organizing the post-prom party. She added chaperones are being thoroughly informed of their responsibilities and that even without the breathalyzers, 99 percent of the opportunities students would have had to drink during the event have been eliminated.

In addition, Durkin said there will be two police officers and two firefighters hired for the evening as well as one custodian. There will also be 15 chaperones on duty.

Post prom and/or post graduation night-long events have grown in popularity in many towns over the past decade as a way to prevent the drinking that is often seen as a rite of passage for teenagers. The post-prom party is being privately funded and organized by parents, and is not a school-sponsored function. The event has been approved by the school committee.

Police Chief James Hussey said he is glad to hear the schools will be using breathalyzers, but said he would have been against any member of the police department overseeing the tests because they are being given in an administrative fashion. He said in cases where there are potential criminal actions taking place, such as a teenage driver being pulled over for suspected drunken driving, then it is the job of an officer to take the necessary precautions and administer a breathalyzer. However, he said he does not feel it is the role of an officer to administer the test as a precautionary measure.

"When they (breathalyzers) are not being used for a criminal matter, it should come from the school administration," he said.

Hussey added if students are found to be drinking and a police officer is needed, the department will be ready and willing to help.

Village project takes costly turn

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the funding agency has been very patient, but the town has a responsibility to make this project happen once and for all.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who has been working to finalize the Village Revitalization Project, said he has spoken with Craig Miller of the Waterfield Design Group — the company designing new streetscapes downtown — and although it had been assumed drawing up the final bid documents would cost the town $7,600, Miller gave an estimate of more than double that cost.

"I had a long and not so wonderful talk with Craig and he gave me a breakdown of the tasks, the people, and the hours," said Dormitzer, and the town was given a new price of $18,500 to get the plans to the point where the town can send them out to prospective bidders on the project.

Dormitzer said Miller estimates it will take 200 hours worth of work to get the plans finalized, but Dormitzer doesn't believe it will take that long. He said he would like to see the project move forward, with the caveat that those working on the plans will be paid on an hourly basis, and the town should thoroughly review time sheets. Workers should finalize as much as possible with the understanding the town will not exceed the $18,500 figure.

"I wish we had another solution," Dormitzer said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan asked what has changed so dramatically that the figure to rewrite the bids has more than doubled.

"Not much," said Dormitzer, adding he thought putting the documents into a new form wouldn't be a problem considering the company has the technology to go back in and recalculate the drawings with relative ease.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said this is the town's last shot at completing the project and "We need to take that shot." He added the PWED grant (Public Works Economic Development) for the project, was slated to expire May 30, and it looks promising for the town that it will be able to secure another extension. Griffin said the funding agency has been very patient, but the town has a responsibility to make this project happen once and for all.

The $1.8 million Village Revitalization project is being paid for through grants, not local property taxes. Streetscape improvements have been sidetracked over the years due to disagreement over how much and exactly what should be done to revitalize the village area. The project was put out to bid last winter, but only one company responded and the bid was too high.

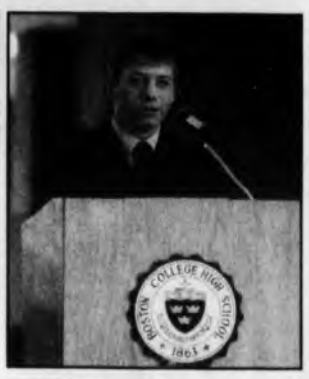
STILL NO SUN



Well, the Cohasset Dramatic Club has finished its spring performances of "Annie" and the sun still has not come out tomorrow! I am still amazed that according to the weather people, we are still below the normal amount of rain for May. It just doesn't seem possible. Let's hope for some sun this weekend as we remember and honor all of our veterans and current military men and women who fight and have fought for our country. Enjoy this Memorial Day weekend and stay safe!

RAFFLE WINNER

Young Ben Pratt of Ripley Road is the winner of last weekend's Cohasset Sailing Club Registration Raffle. This included a life jacket, sweatshirt, hat, water bottle, sailing gloves, sunscreen, windbreaker, vest, cooler, and many other items necessary for comfort and fun on the water. Ben will be returning to the CSC this summer for his second year, in the Mate class, where he will have lots of opportunity to make use of his winnings. The CSC held a two-day registration down at the Club (rather that doing it by mail). Despite the wet, cold weather, it was wonderful to see so many eager sailors!

GOT A DIRTY CAR?

Anyone who is looking to have a nice clean car can be on the lookout for fifth-grade students who will be selling car-wash coupons in their neighborhoods. The car wash will be held on Saturday, June 4 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Deer Hill School. The cost of each car wash is $5. This is the fifth grade's final fundraiser for their trip in the fall to Camp Bournedale. The students will receive the full $5 towards their cost for this trip. Thank you in advance to all who help support them in this endeavor.

B.C. High graduate, Andrew J. Flynn.

AWARD WINNER

Andrew J. Flynn of Cohasset, a 2005 graduate of Boston College High School, on Monday night, May 16, received the school's most prestigious award, "The Jesuit Secondary Education Association Award." The award was presented to Andrew by Mr. William J. Kemeza, president of BC High, at Senior Class Night, an evening set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors. The award is presented annually to that member of the graduating class who best exemplifies the ideals for graduates of Jesuit High Schools: a person who is open to growth, intellectually competent, religious, loving, and committed to doing justice.

In addition to receiving the coveted JSEA Award, Andrew received eight other awards. He won an excellence award in world religions and in French V College Level; he won an award for finishing his four years among the top 10 in his class; he won a Lawrence E. O'Rourke award in English. He was named a Commended Scholar in the National Merit Scholarship Program, he won a National Honor Society award, a Student Council award, and he was selected by the faculty to deliver the Student Address at Commencement.

An amazing list of accomplishments Andrew, congratulations.

TURNING 50

A surprise 50th birthday party was held for Linda Conte-Riccio at the American Legion on Summer Street on Saturday, May 21.The party was hosted by her husband Al, mother Barbara Conte, brother Jack, and sister-In law Joni and was also attended by her father Carmelo Conte and 75 guests. Her niece Jenna and nephew Jack also happily decorated.

SILVER MEDAL

Congratulations to Elyse Portanova who picked up a silver medal in the job interview contest at the State Skill USA VICA competition held in Marlboro. Elyse attends the South Shore Regional Vocational-Technical High School in Hanover. The three-day event allowed for students to compete in nine separate technical competitions. Super job!

SEMESTER IN PRAGUE

Scott Faber, a sophomore at Connecticut College and son of Lesley and Stephen Faber, studied abroad in Prague for the spring 2005 semester. This experience is one that many students take advantage of to benefit from the wealth of study-away options that are offered each year by the college. What an opportunity Scott.

PHOTOS, STORIES SOUGHT

A special request is being sent out to the town asking for pictures and stories, both past and present of experiences that were had during Cohasset Little League. Derry Schwantner is handling this and will be putting together a documentary on the history, facts, photos and stories. Please contact Derry at derry@comcast.net with any questions or items that you may have for this endeavor.

BC HIGH GRADS

The following students from Cohasset graduated from Boston College High School on Saturday, May 21: Christopher P. Barber, Andrew J. Flynn and Patrick T. Kelly. Congratulations gentlemen.

Mark Lewis is a Xavieran HS graduate.

XAVERIAN GRADUATE

On May 13, Cohasset resident Mark Lewis, the son of Kevin and Peggy Lewis, graduated from Xaverian Brothers High School in Westwood. Mark earned academic honors all four years, was a member of the football team and participated in Peer Ministry and Xaverian Leadership Institute. He will attend the University of Connecticut.

DEAN'S LIST

Leslie Thornton and Rachel McElroy, both juniors in the School of International Science at American University, were named to the fall 2004 dean's List. Great work ladies.

CLASS OFFICER

Another young lady, Nancy Winters, a junior English major at Saint Michael's College, will be her class secretary for the 2005-2006 academic year. Nancy won this election to the post during recent voting. Congratulations.

NEW LAWYER

Jason S. McCaffrey, son of Ann and Anson Whealler, was awarded the Juris Doctor degree by the Syracuse University College of Law on Sunday, May 22. A magna cum laude graduate and member of the Law Review, Jason is studying for the bar exam this summer and will begin his legal career with a firm in Washington, D.C., this September.

GIRL SCOUT SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Girl Scouts will hold new scout registration Monday, June 13 at Town Hall from 9 a.m. to noon and 1-3 p.m. Registration is open to all Cohasset girls entering Kindergarten through 12th grade this fall. Parents interested in serving as troop leaders are also encouraged to signup at registration. Registration is $10. After the 13th registration forms will be available through the Cohasset Recreation Department. Girls already involved with scouting will be contacted about registration for next school year by their troop leaders and do not need to register at Town Hall.

PROVIDENCE GRAD

Ronan Buick, a resident of Cohasset, received a bachelor of science in computer science on Sunday, May 15 from Providence College. Congratulations Ronan.

SALEM STATE

Kathleen E. Donovan graduated from Salem State College in May. Congratulations to you as well.

RELAY FOR LIFE

The Relay For Life is a major fund raiser for the American Cancer Society and will be held at Cohasset High School Athletic Field on June 17 & 18. Harry St. Onge is the chairman this year and the all-night walk will have over 50 teams walking to honor cancer survivors, and in memory of those who have passed away. Several area restaurants are participating and will serve their specialties on the evening of the 17th. There'll be a disc jockey and bands. It's as much a fun night as a fund raiser. Luminaria bags, a special bag that you are able to receive with your donation are a wonderful way to honor someone who has passed away from cancer or are battling this dreaded disease. During the Luminaria ceremony, the bags are placed around the track with a candle and are lit as darkness approaches. If you would like to purchase a bag, you may call Jacqui Goyette Vitello at 781-383-2668 or mail a check made out to the American Cancer Society to Jacqui Goyette Vitello - 275 Cedar Street - Cohasset, MA 02025. The Luminaria ceremony is on Friday night, June 17th. If you are interested in learning more about the event or would like to volunteer in any aspect, you may call Jacqui as well.

CMI FUN NIGHT

Help launch the Cohasset Maritime Institute's 10th season at a Texas Hold 'em "Stroke of Luck Party" on Friday, June 24, 7:30 p.m. at the River Club, Border St. Scituate. Tickets are $25 per person. For those wanting to try their luck at the cards there is a additional tournament entry fee of $25 per player. Rowing into this spring, CMI is embarking on a major capital campaign to fund the construction and purchase of three oceangoing Gigs – four-man slide seat boats. The three new boats will replace leased boats which have been anchors of both the youth and adult CMI programs. Reservations can be made by calling Lisa Hewitt Dick at 781-383-0204, or Susan Galligan at 781-383-0765.

That is it for this week. All items need to be to me no later than Tuesdays at noon or they will appear in the following weeks column.

TREE FALLS

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

This majestic copper beech tree at 67 North Main Street succumbed to the high winds which raged through town during Tuesday night's nor'easter. The tree is almost 250 years old, making it older than the town by 25 years, and had grown to a height of approximately 80 feet with a circumference of between 3 and 4 feet.

North Main Street resident Jean Manganaro suffered a double loss Tuesday when her 250-year-old copper beech tree split in half due to high winds, crushing her car. The tree is thought to have been planted as a specimen tree when the house was built in 1713.

Set behind over 160 feet of massive stone walls. As seen on 2004 Cohasset house tour. This admired 4 bedroom custom home is within walking distance of Cohasset Village and Gulf River Conservation areas. A 2 year long renovation has recently been completed resulting in an elegantly appointed luxury home. Sophisticated open floor plan with custom built in cabintery. Designer kitchen with new appliances and center island leads to a family room with an entertainment wall. Additional dining room, living room, 2 bedrooms, custom full bath and bonus second caterer's kitchen make up the first floor. The second floor consists of an oversized master suite, marble bath, guest bedroom, and light filled office. The lower level features a mud room, 2-car garage and new family room with built in cabinets. Oversized one acre lot with award-winning landscaping, patios, decks and formal gardens. Owner/broker would consider trade.

Summer schedule

A tentative schedule for board of selectmen's summer meetings has been set. Meetings will be held every other week and their dates are May 31, June 7 & 21, July 12 & 26, and August 9 & 23. Meetings will begin at 7 p.m. rather than 7:30 p.m. beginning May 31. The board may schedule additional meetings if necessary.

Fire alarm during selectmen's meeting

Residents watching Tuesday's selectmen's meeting may have been confused when the meeting was abruptly adjourned and the cameras were shut off. Although the audio may not have picked it up, the building's fire alarm was blazing in the background, which led everyone at Town Hall to evacuate. There was no fire and the incident was ruled a false alarm, which could have been caused by a disturbance with the wiring in the old part of the building that Town Hall employees say often acts up in the wind or rain and has even been tripped by a mouse in the past. The meeting was put on hold for roughly 15 minutes while members of the Cohasset Fire Department investigated but resumed once the board was given the go-ahead.

Local effort helps inner-city children go to summer camp

Group works with Boys & Girls Clubs

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While children in Cohasset are busy attending swimming lessons and heading off to Sandy Beach this summer, many of their peers who live in the inner-city will not be as fortunate. In neighborhoods filled with violence, there aren't always opportunities to take part in safe and fun activities, but Cohasset families have banded together to help make that happen.

In conjunction with the Boys and Girls Clubs of Boston, Cohasset residents Lisa Westcott, Emily Brown, Kristen Astley, and Susan Carrabes formed the Cohasset committee to promote awareness and raise money for the BGCB's Roxbury Club Summer Camp. The money raised pays the tuition for children to attend the camp during the summer months.

On May 19, Westcott and her husband Michael opened their home on River Road to roughly 50 other Cohasset residents for a fund-raiser, during which information was provided on the camp and stories were shared about how beneficial it is for children living in Roxbury. Linda Whitlock, President and CEO of BGCB, along with staff from the Roxbury Club, including Executive Director Andrea Swain, spoke during the event about the urgent need for safe and affordable places for the city's youth to spend the increasingly violent summer months.

"This is one of those things where you look around and think of your own kids," said Westcott, adding in Cohasset, children can hop on their bikes and ride to a friend's house and "you really don't have to think about it." However, for children in Roxbury just 18 miles away, "The situation is very different."

While children in Cohasset are often enrolled in many different summer programs, Westcott said the price of the camp in Roxbury is sometimes more than families can afford.

"For some families it comes down to, we can eat or go to camp," she said.

During the school year, the Roxbury Club has an after-school program which costs families $25 total to enroll. However, where the summer camp program is an all-day program, families are charged $490 for seven weeks, $280 for four weeks, and $140 for two weeks.

Westcott said many families have parents that work full time, and during the summer, the Roxbury camp provides an alternative to staying home alone when it might not be safe to play outside, or getting into trouble. She said the Boys and Girls Clubs have long been seen as a "safe haven" for children, and when outbursts of violence erupted in the city last year, Boston Mayor Tom Menino asked the clubs to stay open for extended hours to give children and teens a place to go. Westcott said many employees gave up their vacations to ensure that happened.

"It's a total safe zone and nobody ever jeopardizes that," she said of the clubs.

Westcott and Brown currently serve on the BGCB's Board of Overseers and all committee members are active in special events and other activities that benefit BGCB's programming. Westcott said the residents who attended the fund-raiser had responded to a mailing the committee sent last year, and had stated they were interested in becoming a part of the effort. Last year, she said the committee raised nearly $11,000 for the summer camp program, and the fund-raiser is just one of many efforts the Cohasset Committee will be undertaking this year.

Spokesman for the BGCB Renee Besser said for more than 95 years, the Roxbury Boys & Girls Club has provided programming to young people with the help of dedicated youth development professionals who inspire, encourage, and challenge members. As part of BGCB's commitment to the community and its Club members, the Roxbury Club will soon undergo a full renovation and addition of a Teen Center that will serve hundreds of at-risk teens in the neighborhoods of Roxbury, Mattapan, and Dorchester.

Since its founding in 1893, BGCB has provided high-impact, affordable programs and services that enable at-risk youth from disadvantaged circumstances to mature into productive, caring and responsible adults. Today, BGCB serves nearly 12,000 young people, ages six to 18, in five Clubs (in Charlestown, Chelsea, Dorchester, Roxbury and South Boston) and through programs with the Boston Public Schools and the Boston Police Department. BGCB is an affiliate of Boys & Girls Clubs of America and The United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

To make a donation, please contact Emily Brown at (781) 383-6468 or send checks made payable to the Roxbury Boys and Girls Club, to Brown at 30 Black Horse Lane. More information can also be found on the organization's Web site at www.bgcb.com.

The 'nays' have it on override votes

campaigns and another car sported a makeshift "vote yes" poster drawn on a piece of gray cardboard.

Leonora "Lee" Jenkins, president of Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers, which opposed the override, said the schools did not make a convincing case.

"They just put in a brand-new administrative position while they're talking about laying off teachers," she said about the new middle school principal post. "That's unconscionable."

Jenkins also pointed out the findings and recommendations of the Cohasset School Budget Investigation Committee presented at Town Meeting may have had an impact. The findings included enumerating systemic budgetary problems such as poor monitoring, weak communication, and insufficient oversight.

"Those findings, the approval of two warrant articles at Town Meeting requiring monthly reports on all budgets and accounts and by not approving the override — residents have demonstrated, without a shadow of a doubt, they require their elected officials have their highly paid management personnel practice fiscal responsibility," Jenkins said. "This is the time for us all to come together to ensure that our educational dollars are being properly spent in the classroom in order to continue with our goal of excellence in education."

Sarah Porter, who is president of the PSO and a member of the Preserve Town Services Committee that sent a town-wide mailing urging a "yes" vote on the override, said she does not think the defeat reflects an anti-school vote.

"There are people in this town who are truly burdened by their taxes and those people turned out to vote," she said. "There are also people new to the schools who perhaps are not aware of how hard we have to fight for the schools their children now attend and who did not turn out to vote."

Porter takes issue with people who think the school department budget is wasteful.

"As president of the PSO, I attend every school committee meeting and followed the budget process closely, and claims of large-scale waste in the magnitude of $400,000 simply cannot be supported.

"The school budget process is public," Porter said. "I urge the public to attend school committee meetings and educate themselves so that we may finally lay these claims to rest and move forward with the public responsibility of educating our children."

School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams said she feels rising taxes and the town's debt ratio led to the override's defeat.

She explained in total $420,000 in cuts were made to the proposed fiscal 2006 school budget that was presented and approved at Town Meeting which was still $400,000 less than the schools needed.

"To our disappointment, the override was not passed, leaving us with difficult and challenging decisions to make," Williams said.

She said the next step is for the school committee to talk to other town officials and at special Town Meeting to determine how much of the $400,000 must be absorbed by the schools.

Griffin, the town manager, explained the budget gap figure could change. He said both the House and Senate have approved a local aid budget that would increase funding to Cohasset by about $75,000 over the governor's proposal.

"If that funding level is approved, we should then have a funding gap of $325,000," he said.

He also said before returning to a special Town Meeting, final new growth figures for fiscal 2006 and local receipt totals for fiscal 2005 could also close some of the gap, but he does not expect those numbers will come in significantly over what was projected when the budget was approved.

"The only way to avoid a special Town Meeting is to have these other sources of funds make up the entire revenue gap, and that is very, very unlikely," Griffin said.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee has proposed an additional $55 million in education aid, but it is unclear if that would be ultimately approved and whether a town like Cohasset would receive any of the funding, Griffin said.

He explained that other towns approve budgets without assuming passage of an override. In other words, they pass the budget and then amend it to include the items to be added or restored subject to a successful override.

"If the override fails, the amendment is set aside; you have a balanced budget and there is no need to return to special Town Meeting," Griffin said. He noted when he came to Cohasset, he was told it has been the practice to vote a budget at the annual Town Meeting that assumes passage of the override. In the event the override fails, voters go back to a special Town Meeting to adjust the budget as necessary.

Regarding the $13.2 million debt exclusion, Richard Brooks of Nichols Road, a vocal proponent of the town subsidizing 50 percent of the projects, said he was not surprised by the outcome.

He said increases in property tax bills and soaring water rates were too much for most residents who were determined "to vote no on anything in sight."

Brooks also said the residents, who will get the new sewer, didn't conduct an adequate voter-education campaign on the fairness of the 50-50 shared cost.

He said he expects the 50-50 issue will be revisited at some future forum. Brooks also supports a cost-sharing plan for those homeowners, who won't be tied into the sewer, but who have to repair or replace their septic systems.

Flash back: The last time Cohasset held a special election for a Prop. 2-1/2 override was in 1999. Voters that year by a 60-to-40 percent margin turned down a $766,000 override at the regular Town Election to balance the budget passed at the annual Town Meeting. Selectmen subsequently decided to bring back a menu of override options to the voters to see if they would support a lower figure.

Charles Ford, left, and Don Ranney, right, fill out their ballots in Saturday's special election held at the Second Congregational Church next door to Town Hall. Town Hall, the usual polling site, was not available because the auditorium had already been booked.

A two-part special Town Meeting was scheduled so that voters could discuss the budget and then adjourn to a second session a week later to vote a budget according to which override, if any, was approved at the special election that Saturday. At the special election – held between the special Town Meeting sessions — voters narrowly approved the lowest of the three options, which was $380,000. That question passed by only 49 votes.

OPINION

A 'no-no'

Cohasset voters have spoken in a resounding fashion that they have no appetite for an override this year. The amount of the override and margin of votes, in our view, would make another attempt at a lower figure fruitless.

So what's next?

A special Town Meeting will be required to balance the budget that was approved at the annual Town Meeting with the assumption the override would pass.

In the intervening weeks, town officials will have to hammer out how they want the $400,000 cuts to be apportioned and make that recommendation to voters at the special Town Meeting.

It's not clear, at this stage, if the schools will shoulder the entire $400,000 reduction.

According to Town Manager Bill Griffin, increased state aid could lower the amount the budget needs to be reduced. That would certainly be welcome news.

We don't think Saturday's vote was "anti-school." In fact, we believe Cohasset residents care a great deal about their schools. One only has to look at the new, and refurbished and expanded school buildings, to realize that. Voters have also stepped up to the plate year after year to approve overrides, which in large part went to the schools.

This time, however, they said they'd had enough.

As the old adage says, when one door closes – another one opens. The events of the weekend provide an opportunity for renewed creativity, energy and openness, and for everyone to work together to find ways to live within the limits of Prop. 2-1/2.

Nothing should be "off" the table. And the town and schools should not be pitted against one another.

We're all in this together and we'll be looking toward our elected and appointed representatives to provide the leadership to move us forward.

Rain, rain

Enough already!

We're going to indulge ourselves in some serious complaining.

We don't live in New England to experience what life is like in rainy Seattle.

Nor we do live here to have winters that rival International Falls, Minn.

We're tired of being cold and the damp is getting into our bones.

In short, our weather has been miserable lately.

Nothing ails us that a few weeks of 75-degree, non-humid, with-plenty-of-sunshine days wouldn't cure.

In other words, we could use a good-sized dose of San Diego.

We realize there's not much we can do about the weather, which has a definite mind of its own.

But somehow – after the coldest spring and snowiest winter in recent memory – moaning about the situation seems to help…a little, anyway.

So pardon us and we'll excuse you when we hear complaints about the hand Mother Nature has dealt us. Go ahead and vent! Let it all out.

There are bigger problems in the world, we know. And it's important that we all keep our sense of humor during this meteorological rough patch.

The silver lining in this storm cloud is that we'll really appreciate the good weather when it arrives!

As the anonymous nursery rhyme says:

"Rain, rain go away,
Come again another day."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Offended by comments about assistant principal

TO THE EDITOR:

While I disagree with many things Leonora Jenkins wrote in her commentary printed in the May 20th Mariner, I am offended by her comment regarding our new Middle School Assistant Principal, Elizabeth Sternala. Ms. Jenkins referred to Ms. Sternala as "a perky new administrator fresh out of a master's program to coordinate after-school clubs." This comment reveals an utter lack of respect for Ms. Sternala as a professional and a complete lack of knowledge of the requirements of the middle school assistant principal position.

A search committee made up of the Superintendent, two principals, the middle school guidance counselor, two middle school teachers and two parents reviewed the qualifications of 34 applicants for the position of middle school assistant principal. After several interviews and site visits, it was clear that Elizabeth Sternala was our chosen candidate. She is a graduate of Colgate University where she majored in psychology and minored in education. She taught science at the Pollard Middle School in Needham and did her administrative internship at the Pierce School in Milton. That masters program to which Ms. Jenkins refers happens to be a Masters in Education from Harvard University. The position that Ms. Sternala is taking on, far from being "a coordinat[or] of after-school programs," entails curriculum review and development, teacher evaluation, scheduling, and discipline, just to name a few areas for which Ms. Sternala will be responsible.

I am disheartened that in this day and age any professional woman would be referred to in such a disparaging manner, but especially a professional woman wholly unknown to this town and possessing such stellar qualifications for the position she will hold here. I am even more disheartened that the Mariner would choose to foster the atmosphere of disrespect that permeates this town by printing Ms. Jenkins' commentary as written.

School budget must stay within 2-1/2

TO THE EDITOR;

The voters of Cohasset have said "ENOUGH"! The schools now have to be responsible and open with their budget process. They also must cut their extremely rich budget. For a school system with only 1,500+/- students we don't need four principals, three should be able to handle the responsibilities. We certainly do not need any assistant principals. We do not need extra teachers funded by private donations to be paid for by the taxpayers either for salaries or benefits. We do not need a full time curriculum coordinator either. For 1,500 +/- students a part-time coordinator for eight hours per week should be sufficient. The above budget adjustments will easily save $400,000 from the school over-budget.

The school committee must inform the superintendent of schools that she must stay within Proposition 2-1/2. If she cannot she should be replaced for incompetence. The Cohasset school system has been overspending for years and without the results that that spending should have achieved. The gene pool in Cohasset is very strong.

For the schools to even suggest that the rest of the Town budget pick up any of the $400,000 is ridiculous. However, all Town department heads should be put on notice that there will be no spending over budget unless it is a proven emergency. If a Town department head overspends his/her budget they should be replaced. It is time that the taxpayers hold elected officials accountable for overspending.

We should remember that the schools paid the former superintendent a "golden" bonus when he departed our school system. Where did that money come from? It was not budgeted because we have had deficits for the past number of years. Those members of the school committee who approved those payments should be held accountable.

We should all remember that there are only approximately 2,900 tax payers in Town to support our Town operations. All those who spend our money must be held accountable.

Museum is grateful for Estate Sale support

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of Directors for Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum, I wish to sincerely thank everyone who attended our Estate Sale which was held at the Museum on Saturday, May 14.

A very special thank you to Irene Lord of Lord & Ladies and her staff Pam Henry, Maureen Thayer and Caroline Lord for making this sale such a tremendous success. We could not have accomplished our fundraising goals without their expertise, dedication and hours of laughter.

Many thanks also to Gina Leahy, Leisa Legge and Cindy Kuppens for volunteering the day of the sale and to Deb Kuppens for organizing this event which raised $9,816.25!

Thank you to everyone who dug deep into their closets and attics for all the wonderful "treasurers" which were donated for the sale.

We are extremely excited that the Museum's first exhibit, Bio-Diversity 911 is slated to open this September 2005 and the funds generated from the Estate Sale will go towards the installation of this exhibit. Please stop by and check out the Museum's space and find out more about our upcoming events.

Seatbelt campaign is under way

SAFETY COUNTS

POLICE CHIEF JAMES HUSSEY

The Cohasset Police Department supports "Click It or Ticket" campaign.

The Cohasset Police Department has joined more than 280 Massachusetts local police departments and the State Police in support of the May 2005 Mobilization of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau's (GHSB) "Click It or Ticket" Campaign through June 5. The GHSB is a program of the Executive Office of Public Safety.

Those using Massachusetts roadways during this May Click It or Ticket Mobilization should drive sober and well-rested, obey posted speed limits, and be properly buckled up. We are serious about saving lives by vigorously enforcing all traffic laws, in particular those involving safety belts and child safety seats, during this mobilization and all year-round.

The GHSB's Click It or Ticket Campaign, made possible by a federal highway safety grant, involves the close coordination of extra state and local traffic enforcement, public information, and community education. For more campaign information, including a growing photo library of safety belt educational efforts by local police, go to www.mass.gov/ghsb.

Since its inception in November 2002, the Click It or Ticket Campaign has had a positive impact on highway safety in Massachusetts. Safety belt use in the state increased by 12 percent between 2002 and 2004 to 63 percent, the highest rate ever recorded. However, the Massachusetts safety belt use rate compares unfavorably to the national use rate at 80 percent as of 2004.

Safety Counts is an occasional column by Cohasset Police Chief James Hussey.

Shedding light on clearing process

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As you read this the clearing should have started along the railroad right of way. It is the MBTA's intention to clear from the Scituate line, moving toward Hingham. However, recently the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection notified the MBTA that the wetlands in the vicinity of Lincoln Lane are the habitat of a rare turtle. No construction activities can take place in these wetlands until after July 1. Otherwise, the endangered turtles will be jeopardized. So, the clearing will start at Beechwood Street and move toward Scituate up to the turtle habitat. And from Beechwood, clearing will move toward the Hingham line.

One of the things you may notice is that in some places the width of the clearing is much wider than at other places. In general, the reason for this is to enhance safety at the railroad crossings. Since the trains will not sound their horns when approaching crossings for the entire Greenbush line, visibility down the track from each street crossing becomes extremely important. Thus, in the areas adjacent to crossings, the trees and undergrowth will be cleared quite a bit wider than in the areas where there is no crossing.

In simple terms, the MBTA's design standards call for a cleared swath 70-feet wide at each crossing, tapering down to 30-feet wide 1,000 feet away from the crossing in either direction. The MBTA will try to adhere to this clearing standard whenever possible, without specifically taking more land. So, even though the clearing away from the grade crossings will be about 30-feet wide (15 feet either side of the center of the tracks), there will be areas at the crossings where it can be as wide as 70 feet (35 feet either side of the train tracks).

In simple terms, the MBTA's design standards call for a cleared swath 70-feet wide at each crossing, tapering down to 30-feet wide 1,000 feet away from the crossing in either direction.

If you live near the rail bed you will also notice that the clearing process is a very noisy process. The good news is that this is a very temporary situation that will soon be finished. In fact, they move so fast that by the time you read this, they could be past the Town Parking Lot with the clearing. Several abutters to the right of way have questioned the tree markings associated with the clearing activity. We continue to work with the MBTA on these issues. If you have any questions on this topic, please let us know.

We have also just received information that the MBTA will be starting work on the new bridge that will connect Rocky Lane to North Main Street. (The present entry way to Rocky Lane will ultimately be closed at the train tracks.) When the clearing machinery gets to the wooded area, four houses South of the present Rocky Lane roadway, it will take a left turn and go through to North Main Street. Don't be alarmed, the MBTA is not off course. This is to clear the area where the bridge is to be constructed. Present plans call for excavation to begin for bridge construction around the week of June 13th. The footings will be constructed about two weeks later with bridge abutments being constructed toward the end of July.

As we discussed in our Mariner article two weeks ago, clearing is a very dangerous process. Please warn all children to stay away from the equipment and to stay off of the entire railroad right of way.

Question 1: General Operating Override Pursuant to G.L. Chapter 59, section 21c

Shall the Town of Cohasset be allowed to assess an additional $400,000 in real and personal property taxes for the purpose of meeting the operational expenses of he Town Government and School System for the fiscal year beginning July 1, Two Thous-and Five?

Question 2: Debt Exclusion Override Pursuant to G.L. Chapter 59, section 21C (k)

Shall the Town of Cohasset be allowed to exempt from the provisions of proposition two and one-half, so called, one-half of the amounts required to pay the principal of and interest on the bonds to be issued in order to fund the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue Sewer Expansion Project and the North Cohasset Sewer District Expansion Project authorized at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting?

Bush-bashing by the Sith

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A short time ago, in a galaxy not that far, far away, the creator, producer, director and just-about-everything-elser of the latest blockbuster film, one that had not yet been shown to the public, was asked how he managed to sneak such a Bush-bashing picture past the watchdogs of Homeland Security.

Now there's something for conspiracy fans to chew on once they come down from that grassy knoll in Dallas.

That was among the first questions asked of George Lucas after his "Star Wars, Episode III: The Revenge of the Sith," premiered at the Cannes Film Festival. Cannes, of course, is in France, where half the folks still think it was the CIA that crashed those planes into the World Trade Towers.

"Star Wars," for those of us benighted few who have not seen any one of that never-ending series and stripped of Jar Jar Binks, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Bail Organa, is the story of how a senator named Palpatine turned a republic into a galactic empire with an emperor named Palpatine.

"It seems to happen every time," said Lucas. "There are threats and a democratic body, the senate, is not able to function properly."

Shades of Michael Moore! George Bush? Palpatine? Now there's something for conspiracy fans to chew on once they come down from that grassy knoll in Dallas. Don't tell them it was only a figment of George's (Lucas, not Bush) fertile imagination.

Bush-bashing or not, "Star Wars III" finally open last week to the public, 300 of whom had been lined up outside the Arclight Cinemas in Los Angeles for six weeks waiting to be admitted, and including Adrienne Maul-Sari of Jopaltowne, Md., who had changed her name to Maul because Darth Maul was her favorite character.

"Star Wars III," the third and last of a six part series, did $50,013,859 in the first 24 hours at the box office on 9,400 screens in 3,700 U. S. theaters and Canadian theatres and did $108.5 million over the weekend. I haven't looked it up yet but that should equal the gross national product of a Third World country.

And now "Star Wars III" is free to make some real money across the counters of toy stores, novelty and gift shops, even grocery stores where they're hustling Kellogg's Star War Pop Tarts at $2.99 a whack. Since "Star Wars IV" first appeared in 1977, George's company has raked in $9 billion (with a B) in merchandise sales alone.

You can get a Star War Chess Set for $29.99, a Darth Vader Voice Changer for $39.99 and an Anakin Episode III Lightsaber Reproduction for only $369, even a book entitled "Christian Wisdom of the Jedi Masters" for $16.95. If you don't know what a lightsaber or a jedi is, then go to your room. It'll be in the next Webster's.

Now that we have gotten Star Wars I, II, III, IV, V and VI out of our system, maybe we can come to final terms with Rocky, who must be up to "Rocky XVI" by now. That's the one where 85-year-old Rocky Balboa takes on the Al-Qaeda heavyweight champion and saves Western Civilization as we know it.

Let's see them call that Bush-bashing!

HEALTH NOTES

Swimming should be germ-free fun

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Now that the spring weather is phasing out, we can think about swimming. One of the most popular activities in the country, it's a fun, active, and healthy way to spend leisure time.

Every year, millions of people visit "recreational water" sites, such as swimming pools, water parks, hot tubs, lakes, rivers, or the ocean. Over the past century, the use of modern disinfecting systems in pools and environmental improvements in our lakes, rivers, and oceans has improved the quality of recreational water.

But despite this, there has been an increase over the past decade in the number of outbreaks of illness associated with swimming. Here are a few dos and don'ts for those going to local pools and water parks.

Tips about swimming in pools from the Center for Disease Control

- Don't swim in a pool when you have diarrhea. This is especially important for kids in diapers. You can spread germs in the water and make other people sick.
- Don't swallow the pool water. In fact, avoid getting water in your mouth.
- Practice good hygiene. Take a shower before swimming and wash your hands after using the toilet or changing diapers. Germs on your body end up in the water.
- Take kids on bathroom breaks or check diapers often. Waiting to hear "I have to go" may mean it's too late.
- Change diapers in a bathroom and not at poolside. Germs can spread to surfaces and objects in and around the pool and spread illness.

There has been an increase over the past decade in the number of outbreaks of illness associated with swimming.

Although it's true that germs are killed by chlorine, chlorine doesn't work right away. It takes time to kill germs and some germs like Cryptosporidium are chlorine resistant and can live in pools for days. This is why even the best-maintained pools can spread illness. Therefore, healthy swimming behaviors will protect you and your kids and help stop germs from getting in the pool in the first place.

EPA hints on beach-going

There are several things that you can do to improve the quality of water at the beach. For example, you can become involved as a responsible citizen to reduce pollutants that can wash into the water. Even if you don't live at or near the beach, you can still protect the water quality by learning how pollution in your local stream or watershed affects water quality at downstream beaches.

Learn - Since many factors affect the water quality at the beach, it is important for you to know about the environmental conditions that affect water quality. The EPA has a brochure entitled "Before You Go to the Beach..." http://www.epa.gov/waterscience/beaches/30cwabeach.pdf

This brochure tells you what you need to know about beach water pollution, the health risks associated with swimming in polluted water, and who to contact if you think the water at the beach is contaminated.

Get Involved in Beach Protection and Clean Up Programs — There are many ways to get involved in protecting the nation's beaches from water pollution. Getting involved in a local clean up effort or other beach protection program is a great way to assist federal, state, and local officials in protecting your health while swimming at the beach.

Protect Coastal Waters from Nonpoint Source Pollution — When rain falls or snow melts, the seemingly negligible amounts of chemicals and other pollutants around your home and lawn get picked up and carried through storm drains to the local waterway.

Contact the Board of Health for a list of specific "dos" and "don'ts" that will help you reduce nonpoint source pollution and become part of the solution to keeping beach water clean.

Participate in the Cohasset Citizen's Voluntary Monitoring Program — At the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, people are learning about water quality issues and helping protect the nation's water resources by becoming volunteer water quality monitors. Volunteers analyze water samples for dissolved oxygen, nutrients, pH and temperature; evaluate the health of stream habitats and aquatic biological communities; inventory streambank conditions and land uses that may affect water quality; catalog and collect beach debris; and restore degraded habitats.

CHAMBER CHATTER

Map and business directory — The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced that a Cohasset map and business directory is in the works. This new marketing tool will provide a comprehensive categorical listing and brief description of retail and service businesses in town. As a benefit of membership, Cohasset Chamber members will be listed free of charge.

It is very important that members update their contact information. Members are advised to check the Chamber website to review business information, or complete the Contact Information Update form mailed with the Chamber renewal notice.

All updated information is due no later than June 1. For a limited time only, the Chamber is extending a special offer of $125 for a directory listing/description to non-member businesses. The $125 fee includes Chamber membership effective immediately, through July 31, 2006.

Former animal control officer gets his job back

Murphy, 66, who declined to comment this week, said in a February 2004 interview he "wanted his job and reputation back." He filed a lawsuit last May.

Haddad said he fired Murphy due to numerous complaints. But Murphy, who was presented with a terse one-paragraph termination letter and was escorted off town property in a police car without the ability to get his personal belongings, said he was never told of any complaints about his work or given any progressive discipline.

According to Murphy's complaint, Murphy claimed he was dismissed for expressing his opinion while off-duty to an assistant owner of a local business that Jackson was not meeting expectations.

Until his termination, Murphy had served as animal control officer in Cohasset for five years and had been reappointed each of those years. He also serves as the animal control officer in Norwell.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he reinstated Murphy. "It was part of his settlement with the town," Griffin said.

Griffin said the position is currently budgeted for 25 hours per week but will be reduced to 20 as of July 1, as one of the budget cuts the town has made for fiscal 2006. Murphy's hourly rate for fiscal 2006 is $13.24.

"It was part of his settlement with the town."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

The animal control officer is an annual appointment on May 1; Al Currie's term expired at the end of April. Currie, whom Haddad hired to replace Murphy, is also the animal control officer in Hingham.

"Chief (James) Hussey informed Currie that due to Murphy's return, his appointment would not be renewed," Griffin said.

Hussey said Currie's not being reappointed had nothing to do with his performance.

"It is my understanding when he took the position he understood the potential for this happening down the road," Hussey said.

Hussey, who said he sat down with Murphy a couple of weeks ago, said Murphy has a great deal of knowledge in the area of animal control.

"He has already hit the ground running and will help ensure we provide the necessary service to the town," Hussey said. "I look forward to working with him and think he will do a great job."

Murphy's reinstatement closes another chapter in the ongoing "police saga" that involved the Sgt. Quigley and Officer McLean. The officers, who were accused of misconduct, denied all allegations of wrongdoing.

The officers claim the town's disciplinary action was in retaliation for their actions relative to the former police chief Jackson's family, although Haddad denied that had anything to do with the disciplinary action.

The two were subjected to a public hearing process, during which the town presented its case against the officers over three days. The hearings were cancelled to enter into a 45-day "cooling-off period" before the town finished and officers could present their side.

Quigley filed a civil suit against Haddad and Jackson personally and the town for interfering with Quigley's employment as a police officer and invading his privacy. The town hired a private detective to look into Quigley's background. The town and Quigley reached a settlement last fall, the details of which were not made public.

Legion charges not prosecuted

Court rules on procedural issue

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The arrest of three young men after an alleged fight outside the American Legion Hall on Summer Street 18 months ago set in motion a series of events that literally turned the town upside down.

The incident initially captured interest because it involved the arrest of then police chief Robert Jackson's son, Keith Jackson, and propelled then Town Manager Mark Haddad to suspend the arresting officer.

The news grabbed headlines.

But behind the scenes, the arrests involved a court procedural issue that has wended its way all the way to the state Supreme Judicial Court, which has just ruled that at that time a clerk magistrate or court could not interfere with an arrest by not filing the charges.

To understand the issue, the clock needs to be turned back to October 2003, when a drama unfolded at Quincy District Court involving the arrest of Keith Jackson, Jerry Cogill and Adam Thibault, who were all charged with malicious destruction of property valued over $250 (damage to the handicap railing at the Legion); affray [fighting] and disorderly conduct.

Then police prosecutor Rick Grassie, acting on a letter on Legion letterhead provided by Jackson's attorney Ron Rice stating the railing was already damaged, did not file the complaints.

First Assistant District Attorney Dennis Mahoney stepped in when none of the charges were filed.

Mahoney, who subsequently removed Grassie as prosecutor, maintained Grassie lacked the authority not to go forward with the charges and that was supported by Judge Mark Coven, who found probable cause to arraign the three on the charge of malicious destruction.

"Neither the clerk-magistrate nor the judge had authority to make a determination of probable cause at this stage of the proceeding."
— May 10th Court ruling

But Coven did not to proceed with the misdemeanor charges of disorderly conduct and affray; Mahoney appealed that decision.

Superior Court Judge Robert J. Cordy later upheld Coven's decision not to go forward with the misdemeanor charges. But in a 6-0 ruling on May 10, the Supreme Judicial Court reversed that ruling and directed the district court to issue the complaints.

The ruling states it agrees with the District Attorney that "when an individual has been arrested, it is the duty of the clerk magistrate to issue the complaint. When he fails to do so, the court must order the complaints to issue without any further consideration of probable cause."

According to Jackson's attorney Ron Rice, the rules changed last fall allowing clerk magistrates not to issue charges if there is no probable cause, but they were not in effect during the time period in question.

In a related matter, the charges of affray and disorderly conduct facing the three men, who are all in the 20s, will not be filed on the recommendation of Mahoney.

According to court papers, Mahoney said the DA's office does not intend to prosecute. Mahoney stated the men have no prior court convictions and they have stayed out of trouble during 18 months since the Legion incident. Mahoney also stated if the charges had been brought forward after the incident, a typical disposition would have been either a dismissal with costs or pretrial probation for a time period that would certainly have expired by now.

The Supreme Judicial Court's ruling states, "In the unusual posture of this case, the issuance of the complaints was presented to the judge. He, therefore, stood in the shoes of the clerk-magistrate and had no greater authority in the circumstances.

"Neither the clerk-magistrate nor the judge had authority to make a determination of probable cause at this stage of the proceeding."

The ruling further states the arrest being an accomplished fact, does not require the clerk to approve the validity of the arrest or assess the potential strength of the prosecution.

The judges stated their ruling expresses no opinion on whether there was probable cause but merely agrees that the proceedings on those complaints should have continued on their normal course.

Sgt. William Quigley, the arresting officer, was placed on paid administrative leave roughly 10 days after the Legion incident on Oct. 20, 2003. He was reinstated at the end of last June.

Attorney Rice said the District Attorney ultimately did not prosecute the three men on charge of malicious destruction of property because it could not be proved damage to the railing was more than $250.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on four roll calls and local senators' votes on two roll calls from the week of May 16-20.

REPEAL BOSTON'S INDIAN BAN (H 3849)

House 153-0, Senate 36-0, approved and sent to Gov. Romney a bill repealing a 1675 law that prohibits Indians from coming into the city of Boston. The law, approved during King Philip's War when Boston settlers were at war with Indian tribes, has remained on the books in Massachusetts. Supporters said that it is time to remove this archaic, bigoted blemish from the law and noted that activists have been working for almost ten year to repeal it. They noted that Boston is in the running to host a convention for a national group of minority journalists but may lose out if this law is not repealed. (A "Yes" vote is for repealing the law).

Senator Hedlund: Y
Representative Bradley: Y

STEM CELL RESEARCH

The next three roll call votes are on amendments proposed by Gov. Romney to a bill, approved by the House and Senate, promoting stem cell research in Massachusetts and allowing therapeutic cloning- a process under which scientists remove stem cells from cloned embryos and use the cells for research. Supporters of the bill say that it could yield treatments or cures for many conditions including spinal cord injuries, diabetes, Lou Gehrig's Disease and Parkinson's Disease. Opponents say that they support allowing research using adult stem cells or leftover embryos from fertility clinics but vehemently oppose any kind of cloning including therapeutic cloning because it requires the destruction of a human embryo. The House and Senate rejected Romney's amendments and sent the bill back to him. The Legislature likely has the two-thirds vote necessary to override an expected veto by the governor.

BAN THERAPEUTIC CLONING (S 2039)

House 42-112, Senate 4-34, rejected Romney's amendment to ban therapeutic cloning. Supporters of the ban said that therapeutic cloning goes too far into uncharted territory and is currently not performed in any other state. They argued that this procedure is essentially human cloning and said that it is immoral to create a life and then destroy it in order to try to save lives. Opponents of the ban said that therapeutic cloning is not human reproductive cloning because these are unfertilized eggs that will never be implanted. They argued that it is a key part of the legislation and could yield research results and procedures that change and save millions of lives. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment banning therapeutic cloning. A "No" vote is against Romney's ban and favors therapeutic cloning).

Senator Hedlund: Y
Representative Bradley: N

DEFINITION OF WHEN HUMAN LIFE BEGINS (S 2039)

House 46-109 and Senate on a voice vote, rejected Romney's amendment to re-establish that life begins at the moment of fertilization. This definition currently is the law in Massachusetts but the bill approved by the Legislature changes the definition and establishes that life begins at the moment of implantation of the embryo in the uterus. In his veto message, Romney said that the objectives of the stem cell research bill can be accomplished without changing the state's moral definition of when life begins. He noted that "the selection of implantation as the start of life ignores the very real possibility of scientific advancements allowing embryos to grow for days, weeks, or even months before implantation, if implantation indeed remains necessary at all." Opponents of the Romney's amendment said that it is important to change the definition because researchers need to harvest embryos up to day 14. They argued that the governor is attempting to complicate the issue and weaken or defeat the entire bill. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment to re-establish that life begins at the moment of fertilization. A "No" vote is against Romney's amendment and favors establishing that life begins at the moment of implantation of the embryo in the uterus).

Senator Hedlund: N
Representative Bradley: N

COMPENSATION FOR EGG DONATION (S 2039)

House 42-112 and Senate on a voice vote, rejected Romney's amendment limiting compensation to women who donate their eggs for research to reimbursement of out-of-pocket expenses actually paid by the donor. The bill, without the amendment, is less explicit and limits compensation to reimbursement for reasonable associated costs. Supporters of Romney's amendment said that it is important to eliminate any financial incentive that would exploit low-income women and encourage them to go through a risky donation procedure in order to earn money. They noted that Romney's amendment would limit reimbursement to things like transportation and medical services. They argued that without the amendment, the bill is too vague and would allow for compensation for the donor's time, discomfort and inconvenience. Opponents of Romney's amendment said that the bill already clearly prohibits women from selling their eggs. They argued that the governor's amendment goes too far and may in fact discourage women from donating eggs. (A "Yes" vote is for Romney's amendment limiting reimbursement to actual out-of-pocket expenses. A "No" vote is against Romney's amendment).

Senator Hedlund: N
Representative Bradley: N

Stay away from the right-of-way

Safety is a top concern

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Tree clearing has begun in the railroad right-of-way, which will one day see trains from the Greenbush line whizzing by. While for the moment Cohasset residents might think the cleared rail bed is an ideal place to walk or go exploring, town liaisons to the MBTA, Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, said residents should be warned, they should not enter the right-of-way for any reason.

During this time of construction, Gruber said the landscape will change from day to day and there are many different types of equipment that can be very dangerous. While he said he knows the rail bed used to be utilized by a number of residents, it is no longer a safe place.

"Where you walked yesterday could be a trench tomorrow," he said, and the potential exists for someone to get really hurt.

Gruber said during clearing, the machines which take down the trees are so powerful no one is allowed within 150 feet of the apparatus. He said MBTA workers had to call the police during clearing last week because an on-looker was too close and they couldn't get the person to move back.

"They had to shut down operation for a while," said Gruber, adding the MBTA does not take safety matters lightly. He said people have to understand that the MBTA is trying to do what can be a dangerous job, and while it might be exciting to watch, residents must respect the setbacks and be a distance of at least 150 feet away.

"Where you walked yesterday could be a trench tomorrow."
— Tom Gruber, Greenbush liaison

Gruber said he has been along the right-of-way with representatives from the MBTA. "It's like walking on newly plowed farm land," he said.

He said someone, especially a young child, could potentially sink down into the earth and get themselves stuck.

"Kids are a bit more adventurous," he said, adding they would be more likely to venture off into what could be a potentially dangerous situation, and they must be told of the potential hazards that exist in the right-of-way.

"Parents, don't let your kids cross," Gruber said, adding he could not stress enough how important it is to educate children the right-of-way is not safe. While parents may have allowed their children to use the rail bed as a shortcut in the past, they must make sure their children know from now on, they should never be entering the right-of-way.

"The right-of-way no longer belongs to the town," said Gruber, it belongs to the MBTA, which also means residents can be arrested for trespassing.

The MBTA is going to be providing educational materials when the train comes to town and will be working with the local safety officer to bring programs into the classroom on train safety. However, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the earlier children learn they should not be near the right-of-way, the better, so they will be aware of its dangers and will know to keep off the tracks when the train comes.

Gruber and Brennan said they will be in touch with the schools to see if it would be possible to print up a notice to be sent home to parents regarding right-of-way safety or have safety reminders announced over the PA system.

For more information on the Greenbush project, please contact either Tom Gruber, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs via e-mail at cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org or Mark Brennan, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering at cgbengineering@townofcohasset.org. Liaisons are hard at work on Greenbush rail issues

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It is plain for all to see the Greenbush line is coming, which means the phone in MBTA liaisons Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan's office has been ringing off the hook. The men say while there are still some concerns to be addressed, progress is continually being made.

The most recent activity with the Greenbush project is the clearing which is taking place in the right-of-way. Gruber said residents should be aware clearing is going to be temporarily on hold near Lincoln Lane until July 1 due to some "wetland critters" which are environmentally protected.

Issues with 39 Beechwood St., a former Victorian home which has been remodeled into condominiums and whose driveway is located parallel to the Greenbush tracks, are in the process of being worked out. The Beechwood Street crossing is very close to the driveway at the residence and designs for that area would have made it difficult for fire trucks coming down Beechwood Street from South Main Street to access the property without swinging the truck into the opposite lane of traffic.

"We went up to the Stop and Shop Plaza and had the ladder truck (the largest truck the department has) make a tight 360 degree turn," said Gruber, and the outer and inner radius measurements were taken and applied to the drawings for the Beechwood Street driveway. Gruber said changes have been made to the drawings, including removing some cobblestones at the base of the driveway which the MBTA had added, and the problematic situation of making a right hand turn into the property should be solved if the MBTA agrees to the changes.

Gruber said there are other issues 39 Beechwood St. residents would like to see cleared up and he was scheduled to have a meeting with them and the MBTA this week to help come to a mutually agreeable resolution.

Mark Brennan has been looking at the engineering documents for the Greenbush Line and said there are still some changes to be made to plans. He said the crossing at Pleasant Street will be heavily discussed for at least the next six months as will the parking situation in the town parking lot. The possibility of blasting ledge behind the Teen Garage could be discussed as a way to create the spaces the town needs.

Gruber said the issue of keeping part of the recently excavated railroad turntable permanently exposed is also on the table, and will be discussed as a Section 106 matter. Under Section 106, which is a federal law designed to protect a town's historical assets, all mitigation decisions are made by the Massachusetts Historical Commission, not the MBTA.

The two men will also be working to see if it is feasible to have sidewalks installed that will make pedestrian access to the Route 3A train station a reality. Brennan said he has been working with Steve Bobo of the board of health who is very enthusiastic about the possibility of having pedestrian access.

"People from Hingham have walking access to our station," added Gruber, saying it would be nice if Cohasset residents had the same option.

While the MBTA has a maintenance road running parallel to the tracks, Gruber said the organization will not entertain the possibility of allowing it to also serve as a path for biking and jogging. Brennan said he has been told there are a number of safety concerns, as well as the fact that the area will be dark and isolated at night.

For more information on the Greenbush project, please contact either Tom Gruber, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Affairs via e-mail at cgbaffairs@townofcohasset.org or Mark Brennan, Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering at cgbengineering@townofcohasset.org. Cohasset No. 1 singles player Elizabeth Stone returns a serve with a forehand during a match played against Hingham this season. Stone will play Norwell's Susan Bitetti in the finals of the South Individual tournament this Saturday at Old Rochester High. The match is slated to begin at 11 a.m.

Stone nets spot in final

Cohasset senior will face rival Bitetti for South Individual title Saturday

By Julie Ann Nevero
JNEVERO@CNC.COM

The rubber match it is.

Cohasset senior Elizabeth Stone will take on South Shore League rival Susan Bitetti of Norwell in the finals of the South Individual tennis tournament Saturday at Old Rochester High. Both No. 1 players for their squads, the two have met twice already this season and each come away with a win.

Stone — the top seed in the tourney — advanced to the final by defeating opponents from Dartmouth and Bishop Feehan, both via straight sets. She had little trouble with Beth Merchant in the quarterfinals, giving up only one game in a 6-1, 6-0 final. She fell three games behind Darcy Demers in the semis before going onto win the next six for a 6-3 first set win. Stone dominated the second 6-2, qualifying her for the finals.

No. 2 seed Bitetti beat Durfee's Megan Cote (6-2, 6-1) in the quarters before ousting Rochester's Cayla Clancy in the semis, 6-2, 6-2.

Stone defeated Bitetti in their first meeting of the spring, 6-0, 7-5, before Bitetti rebounded with a similar victory the second time around, winning 6-1, 7-5.

The match between Bitetti and Stone is scheduled for 11 a.m.

Cohasset also had a doubles team perform well in the South tourney as the all-freshmen duo of Meg Anderson and Sally Meehan reached the semifinals. The girls, said to be best friends since grade school, battled tough for a quarterfinal victory over Dartmouth's doubles team, outlasting the duo in a three-setter (6-3, 5-7, 6-4).

Anderson and Meehan then bumped into the squad from perennial tennis powerhouse Barnstable in the semis and quickly fell behind 0-5 in the first set against senior Heather Lacey and junior Lauren Donnelly. The girls nabbed a game in the first set before falling 6-1 and made a match of it in the second grabbing four games. But in the end, the elders prevailed 6-4.

Baseballers win trio of games, two with late rallies

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

Cohasset baseball coach Al Gallotta may ask for a couple of roles of Rolaids in his coaching budget for next season.

The Skippers down the home stretch of the season are playing nail biting games which have made the veteran coach a little nervous.

"It has been a little nerve wracking especially for me on the sideline lately," said Gallotta. "The Holbrook game was major relief to come out hitting the way that we did."

The Skippers who were concluding a four game in four day stretch which included the first three games going to the final out welcomed the blowout. Cohasset had defeated South Shore Christian, 6-5 and Sacred Heart, 6-2 with late game rallies, but lost to Harwich, 4-2 in a game that ended their tournament hopes.

Cohasset took advantage of a weakened Holbrook pitching staff and pounded out 15 runs over the first three innings and had seven extra base hits.

"It has been a little nerve wracking especially for me on the sideline lately. The Holbrook game was major relief to come out hitting the way that we did."
Cohasset coach Al Gallotta

"Their (Holbrook's) pitching was down, because it was their fourth game of the week and they had some pitchers hurt," said Gallotta. "That is not an easy situation at a small school like that, but give our hitters credit. They could have had the approach of their eyes bulging out and trying to crush the ball and ended up popping the ball up. Our kids hit the ball. We haven't produced that many extra base hits in a game all season."

Second baseman Tim Pilczak led the offensive explosion with three extra base hits in the first three innings. Pilczak had a double, a triple and a homer with six RBI.

Catcher Luis Blanco and designated Jim DeGiacomo each had two RBI and first baseman Brian Straughn had three hits in the game. Freshman Brian Hill picked up the win as he fought his way through a couple of tough innings.

"Brian pitched three innings on Tuesday and with this being the fourth game in four day we had to come back with him," said Gallotta. "By the third inning he was operating on fumes."

The Holbrook win for Cohasset too in that allowed the Skippers to possibly reach a goal in the final week of the season.

"I told the seniors that we want to set the bar high and win eight games," said Gallotta. "It gives the underclassmen something to surpass. If we win our last two games against Holbrook and Sacred Heart we will get eight wins. We have to duplicate the efforts we had against the teams we will have a shot."

Cohasset has won seven games in each of the first two years with Gallotta coaching and with a strong junior varsity team that has lost one game the future is bright.

"I am fortunate to have junior varsity coach like Bob Rogers,"

Senior a talent on many fronts

There are the athletes, the musicians, the actors and the students. Along comes Cohasset senior Cecelia Chapman and she rolls them all into one person.

"Well-rounded" merely begins to describe CeeCee. Whether it's on the field, on the stage, in the classroom, or in the band room, C.C. has become an all-around leader.

First stop: Freedom Field. If you've caught a glimpse of the Cohasset Varsity Softball squad this year, you've likely witnessed CeeCee diving in the outfield or clocking triples at the plate. Or you may have seen her blocking shots in her goalie position on the soccer team.

What does her softball coach think of her? In a recent Mariner interview Deborah Bostwick described Chapman as "a player every coach loves. She gives 110%. CeeCee

Softball bats mighty

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

What if your entire sport's season depended on the weather? That's about the size of it for the Cohasset Varsity Softball team.

After a multiple game slump, the Skippers have roared back swinging. Now the only thing left to do is buckle down, stay focused, and pray for sun!

The wet blanket on the Skipper's season came off last Tuesday in their first of three wins in the week. And let's just say this: the girls made their trip to the South Shore Christian Academy very worthwhile.

The Cohasset bats lit up the field like a Christmas tree. Anna Haggerty: 2 for 5. Katie James: 3 for 4. Virginia Spofford: 3 for 5. And to top it all off, a home run by Christina Pinkus. This, combined with some tremendous pitching by Emily Savage and Katie James, earned the Skippers 20-2 blowout victory.

Game 2 at home proved disappointing against a very talented Harwich team. But not entirely. Though a 5-3 loss wasn't what Cohasset had in mind, one loss in four games isn't too shabby.

And how about those Cohasset bats? The girls must have eaten a box of Wheaties for breakfast again. Haggerty, James, Spofford, Pinkus, Casey Anderson, and Melissa Crowley-Buck all made some much-needed offensive contributions.

And with nine strikeouts from Pinkus, you wonder why Cohasset couldn't pump out a home win. The problem surfaced in the Skipper defense. Nine errors not only cancelled out the stellar Pinkus pitching. It cost Cohasset the game.

"You just can't win games with nine errors," said Coach Deb Bostwick. "After this letdown, I gave the girls a little pep talk. I told them that we have plenty of potential to win some games. It's up to them!"

Apparently, every single player took that idea to heart. The girls switched on the autopilot for the rest of the week, bagging two wins in their next two games.

The Skippers traveled to Kingston on Thursday, May 19 grabbing their sixth win of the year, this time over Sacred Heart. Between an enthusiastic pitching performance from Pinkus and a string of solid hits, Cohasset drove away with a commanding 4-1 victory.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

Youth girls sweep Hingham, 9-8 thriller caps May 22 action

The Cohasset youth lacrosse girls program played host to four teams from Hingham on May 22, and the day ended with the most exciting, back-and-forth game of the year and a sweep for the home team.

The Cohasset Blue 15-and-Under team (grades 7/8) faced off against Hingham's top squad – its Red team – in a see-saw battle. After Hingham's Kelsey Johnson banged home a rebound, Lindsay Allard fed Isabelle Franklin to knot the score. Franklin added her second score midway through the half. The rest of the period saw Cohasset squander its scoring opportunities and Hingham cash its chances, as the game went to the half with the visitors on top, 4-2.

Cohasset came out flying to begin the second half, with Kayla Farren dishing the ball to Franklin, who completed her hat trick on the half's first shift. Gabriella Flibotte scored the next two goals in quick succession – the second off a feed from Caitlin Mahoney – and Cohasset had its first lead of the day. Hingham immediately had a quality scoring chance, but Thomson Jaffe stuffed a direct-free position shot from Ellie Clayton, Hingham's other star player, and Jaffe's outlet led to a fast break opportunity that ended with a Hingham penalty call. From there, Maura Barnes converted the direct shot, and it looked like Cohasset might be able to break away.

But Hingham roared back, with Clayton and Johnson capitalizing on Cohasset errors to score three quick goals and give the visitors a fresh lead at 7-6.

At that point, Cohasset could have folded, but Jaffe stuffed Johnson, and her outlet led to another fast break and the entire game changed. Kaley Madge blew home a direct-free position, Lindsey Allard gave Cohasset the lead and Mahoney made a great feed to Madge to put Cohasset up by two. Hingham scored with seconds remaining in the game, but never had another chance, as the Cohasset girls celebrated a 9-8 win that raised their record on the season to 6-1.

Jaffe finished with 8 saves in net, and was helped by a terrific defensive effort from Natalie Hunt, Liz Tetrault, Amanada Masotta, Lindsay Hill, Mimi Mahoney and Megan Richardson.

Cohasset's 15-U White team – playing shorthanded so that several players doubled up on the afternoon – had a much easier go of it, cruising to an 8-1 win over Hingham White and maintaining a perfect 7-0 record on the season.

It did not look so easy at the start. Gabriella Flibotte converted a Maura Barnes feed, but Hingham answered by netting a direct-free position. Katie Gaumer put Cohasset on top again, and when Lesen Haracz blew past Hingham's defense to score her first goal of the year on a long pass from Flibotte, the momentum swung to Cohasset and stayed there. Maura Barnes turned a Kaley Madge pass into a 4-1 Cohasset lead at the half.

Isabelle Franklin, Flibotte, Caitlin Mahoney and Gaumer scored in the second half, with Barnes picking up her second assist of the day. Throughout the game, Katy Baker's hustle and aggressiveness disrupted Hingham's transition game, helping to protect goalie Thomson Jaffe, who made four saves in the win.

Cohasset's younger teams also controlled Hingham, with the White 13-and-Under squad (grades 5 and 6) raising its record to 6-2 and dominating Hingham's White team.

Anna Michalowski scored the only goal of the first half, and Paige DeSisto banged home a goal early in the second half, before Hingham broke through and made it look like it would close the gap. But Sage Stebbins' hard bouncer put the home team back in command, and Merrick Sease fed DeSisto for her second goal of the day. Sarah Evans goal closed out the scoring in a 5-1 Cohasset win.

Ellie Tedeschi made four saves in the net, but several of them stopped point-blank shots that could have turned the tide Hingham's way. Eliza Kinnealey and Dylanne Axelson led a team defensive effort that also saw Zoe Whilton and Charlotte O'Callaghan make long runs to start Cohasset breakaways.

The Cohasset Blue 13-U team – again so shorthanded that many players doubled up – never let Hingham Red into the game, rolling to a 5-0 halftime lead on the backs of five different goal-scorers: Eliza Kinnealey, Anna Michalowski, Sara Evans, Claire Oswald and Paige DeSisto.

Cohasset relaxed a bit and moved some players around in the second half, and while Hingham was able to capitalize, it never could get the game close. Michalowski and Evans answered Hingham's first goal of the game, and Oswald fed Kinnealey to close out the home team's scoring. Hingham netted two late goals, but the game was not as close as the 8-4 final score suggested.

Stephanie Brierly made five saves in the Cohasset net, most of them early in the game to stop Hingham's best hopes to make the game close. The win raised Cohasset Blue's record to 5-2-1 on the year.

Cohasset's girls teams have Memorial Day off, but will be back on the field against teams from Norwell and Scituate on Sunday, June 5.

Boys have an exciting string of games: 15-U White wins three of four

The Cohasset White 15-and-Under team (grades 7 and 8) finished a busy two-week stretch in which it played four games, going 3-1 and displaying more maturity and growth as players than the team showed earlier in the year.

Against Norwell on May 11, Cohasset jumped to a 2-0 lead at the half on the strength of a Gordon Smith goal – assisted by Andrew Bell – and an Owen Landon-to-Ian Quinlan hookup. Cohasset doubled its lead midway through the third period, thanks to John Kearney's unassisted score and an Andrew DiPaolo-to-Thomas Buckley connection.

From there, Norwell awoke to score three straight goals and things stayed tight until Geoff Evans scored on a feed from Andrew Smith and Buckley scored again, this time with an assist from Thomas Lemaire. Norwell scored again late, but never got closer than the game's 6-4 final score.

Three days later, the White 15-U team squared off against a bigger, more physical Scituate squad. Cohasset was playing catch-up almost all day, and hitting the goalpost on four separate occasions didn't help. Will Wise and Ian Quinlan were able to dent the net, with assists from John Kearney and Graham Stevenson, and goaltender Wes Ulmer kept things close, but Cohasset ended the game with an 8-2 deficit.

On May 15, Cohasset White played its third game of the week, in a game that saw scoring for both teams held to a minimum. Andersen Lynner led the defensive effort, with key support coming from his brother Will and from Chris Brown and Keegan Flynn. John Kearney's hat trick, combined with Gordon Smith's goal, gave Cohasset just enough offense for a 4-3 win. Ian Quinlan and Will Evans picked up assists in the game.

On May 22, the White team hosted Whitman-Hanson, and delivered some of its best team play of the year. All phases of the game were solid and the team played with a spirited confidence. Cohasset led 2-1 at the half, with John Kearney feeding Ian Quinlan to break the seal on the game, and Thomas Lemaire giving Cohasset the halftime edge. Cohasset owned the second half, scoring four unanswered goals to cruise to a 6-1 lead: Lemaire assisted on Quinlan's second score, Gordon Smith scored unassisted and Will Wise delivered two goals, with assists to Kearney and Austin Meyers.

The 15-U Blue team, meanwhile, went to the Cape to play a talented Sandwich squad, and while the weather cooperated, "other conditions" did not, as the game was called off after the first half of play due to a series of "disagreements" between the official and the Sandwich coach.

In spite of the shortened game, the trip may have still been worth it, as Cohasset thoroughly dominated the contest with quick transitions, precise offensive play, and a stifling defensive effort. Jack Murphy made 6 saves in the Cohasset net, while Ian Porter led the offensive effort with two goals and an assist. Andrew Smith and Mark Seraikas also scored goals, and Andrew DiPaolo contributed an assist.

At the younger age levels, the 11-and-Under boys teams (grades 3 and 4) squared off against Whitman-Hanson both at home and on the road on May 22, and the action was fast and furious.

The Blue 11-U squad had a back-and-forth road game that featured outstanding goaltending from Brendan Queenan and Connor Green, who stopped many shots from close range. Anchoring the defense was Mark Brown, Derek Benson, Evan Yeager, and Robbie Hillman, who had their hands full all day, but managed to consistently match up and stop the home team from forging any type of sustained attack, with Brown and Yeager taking the ball end-to-end on several occasions. The rest of the transition game was managed by Christian Davis, Sarah Brown, John Mills, Nick Tangherlini, and the O'Brien Brothers (Tommy and Conor), who combined to win many of the game's face-offs, while dominating the ground balls and playing strong at both ends of the field. Zach Coggins, Mats Nelson, and Hunter Forrer each had goals on the attack, end with great back up from Axel Seppala and Chandler Skolnick.

The 11-U White team, meanwhile was displaying grit, heart and hustle in matching up against a much, bigger, quicker and more fundamentally sound Whitman-Hanson team.

Blair McGowan was a leader at both ends of the field for Cohasset, and his positive spirit proved contagious. Goalies Will Golden and Henry Brown did yeoman's work in net to hold Whitman to 9 despite the visitors' consistent pressure.

Tommy Powers, Foster Eymer, Jack McElgunn and Max Montgomery stood out in the defensive end of the field. Montgomery contributed an assist at the offensive end of the field, feeding Ryan McGovern for a goal, and Eymer rang the bell with a fast break goal. Matt Arnold turned a loose ball in a crowd on the crease into Cohasset's third goal for the day, but that was all the scoring the home team could muster.

Brothers Anthony and Drew Nahill were in the game with numerous scoops and plays across the midfield, Mark McKenna and Colin Bell were aggressive at attack, and Ryan McKeon and Jack Conte stood out for overall contributions.

At the 13-and Under level (grades 5 and 6), the boys had another home-and-home with Whitman-Hanson, with the third team at the age level squaring off against Barnstable.

The 13-U Blue team rebounded from its only loss with a total team effort at Whitman-Hanson. Morgan Grasz hit the scoreboard first, set up by Terence Durkin, who quickly followed with a goal of his own on a feed from Thomas Flibotte. Chris "Sherm" Murphy turned a rare first-half appearance outside of the goal into his own scoring opportunity, blasting home an unassisted goal to close out the first half at 3-0.

Whitman-Hanson, frustrated early by Blue's defensive triumvirate of Alex Kinnealey, Nate Brown, and Jack Nelson, and the seemingly impenetrable force field of Jake Durkin in the net, finally was able to break through in the second stanza, but every goal was answered by Cohasset. Flibotte, Terence Durkin and Grasz all scored again, with Charlie Neaves picking up an assist on Grasz' goal, and Sam Richardson closed out the day's scoring by netting a feed from Terence Durkin.

Special mention in Cohasset's 7-4 win goes out to Coleman Hernon and Gus Helbock, who both played at the top of their games at middie and defense (Hernon), and midfield and attack (Helbock).

The Cohasset White U-13 team played an exciting afternoon game against Whitman-Hansen's Red team. Derek Youngman scored a first-half hat trick and Pat Kearney had one goal, with a very active Kyle Livingstone picking up an assist as Cohasset ran a strong fast-break and transition game.

The defense of Geoff Swain, Dean McNary and Pat Kearney played a strong game assisting Kyle Healy in making some great saves in the first half. At midfield, the line of John McGoldrick, Dan Barnes and Mitch McNary played a solid game with Barnes and McNary contributing Cohasset's second half goals. Barnes' goal was a tremendous effort as he stole the ball deep in the zone and fought through to net a tying score for White. Charlie Coffman and Pete McKenna played strong games at attack, continuously applying pressure on Whitman-Hanson.

the same team by a score of 7-0, a 100% turnaround. Senior co-captain C.C. Chapman reflected on the game. "We figured out what we did wrong against Harwich," she said. "We just buckled down defensively against Kingston and hung in there."

And finally, game 4. To say "more of the same" would be selling Cohasset short. Last Friday, the girls of Cohasset absolutely hammered Holbrook from the very start down at Freedom Field. Haggerty, Spofford, Crowley-Buck, Kenzie Durkin, Erin Liddell all managed to do significant damage from the plate to amount a final score of 19-1.

Though this was clearly a team effort, the "MVP" award clearly goes to Christina Pinkus. Since when did Randy Johnson join the team? Pinkus fired an incredible 19 strikeouts.

Pretty good, if you ask me. But not good enough for Pinkus. She belted a homer over the center field fence as well, the second out-of-the-parker ever at Freedom Field!

"We were on this week," said Junior Katie James. "We played with motivation and enthusiasm. And because we wanted the wins more, we got them."

The Skipper's post-season opportunities remain up in the air with their 7-9 record. They need to win three of their remaining four games to earn a spot in the playoffs.

And the catch: they need the 3 wins by May 31st! Let's hope the rain will hold off and let the Skippers throw their hat into the ring of post-season play.

Also on May 31, the All-star game will take place at Rockland High School. Senior Co-captain Casey Anderson will make her second appearance on the team along with teammate Pinkus.

Cohasset's Christina Pinkus smashes the softball out of the park, literally. This hit was a homerun and was just one of a slew of hits for the Lady Skippers in their game against Holbrook last week. Cohasset won 19-1.

brings a great attitude to each practice and game".

Chapman launched her softball career in 4th grade. Today she maintains her enthusiasm.

"This season has been a great experience for me," reflected Chapman. "I love the feeling of working as a team to punch through the tough games. I also got to know everyone."

After a softball game, Chapman would often head to band rehearsal with cleats still on her feet. Her musical involvement goes on and on… concert band, jazz band, marching band, pep band, and wind ensemble.

She has led the trombone section since her freshman year. For her gifted work Chapman won the C.P. Harvey Jazz Award in 2004.

These musical accomplishments come as no surprise considering her musical family. Her father plays the cornet, her brother the guitar and clarinet, and her sister the flute.

"Music is a lot like sports," said Chapman. "It's all about communication. You need to combine your individual talent with that of your teammates to get a good result."

In addition to sports and music, Chapman loves to act and work behind the scenes of the Cohasset Drama Club. This activity sparked her future educational path.

Chapman intends to major in film at Temple University next fall. Temple's first-rate film program attracted her from the first day she set foot on campus. The university invited her to participate in Temple's honor program designed for students with accelerated learning abilities.

As she graduates from CHS this spring, Chapman will certainly be ready to take on new challenges. "Three years from now, I want to feel I have really utilized my resources to my advantage. I'll be happy if I took some chances and stayed focused on the things that are important to me."

Baseball's Junior League debuts

Little League for most Cohasset youngsters historically has ended at the age of twelve. But this year, thirty-six 13 and 14 year old boys have the opportunity to continue playing summer's great past time. The board of directors of the CYBSA worked diligently to form the Junior Baseball League, under the auspices of Little League. Working with similar minded baseball officials from Norwell, a bi-town Junior League came to fruition.

The inaugural season of the Junior League is now under way. Cohasset has fielded three teams and Norwell is carrying six. The teams are drafted by the coaches and are evenly matched in terms of talent and ability. Veteran Little League coaches Kathy Ofsthun, Bob McCunney and Rob Doonan are managing the three Cohasset squads. CYBSA President Liam O'Connell was the driving force in the formation of the league. Recognizing the void the lack of Middle School sports created, O'Connell focused on a way to keep the boys playing.

The gap between the youth sports programs and the high school programs leaves Cohasset at a competitive disadvantage in many arenas. Varsity and JV Coaches Al Golotta and Bob Rodgers were thrilled to hear of this league and support the efforts as this program will be a feeder program into high school. More importantly, 36 boys, who developed a love for the game in Little League can keep on playing.

The boys have adjusted to Junior League rules. For example, pitchers can pitch a total of nine innings in a week compared to six in Little League. The infield increases to 90 foot base paths from 60 feet. The pitcher's mound is 60 feet, 6 inches to home plate compared to 46 feet in Little League. The extra distance in both throwing the ball and running the bases proves to be critically important in close games.

Playing for Cohasset on the White Team coached by Bob McCunney are Adam Berger, Sebastian Braga, John Kearney, Alex Kinnealey, Owen Landon, Joseph Lavigne, Dan Martin, Rob McCunney, Charlie Mushin, Kevin O'Connell, Tim O'Leary, and JoDi Rosano.

The Red Team roster includes Sean Ahearne, Thomas Barrett, Chris Brown, Jackson Dean, Kyle DeSisto, Jack Emanuello, Alec Livingstone, Andy McKenna, Conor Ofsthun, Paul Pozniak, Nick Simonds, and Dan Sullivan.

said Gallotta. "He could be a head coach anywhere, but his willingness to work with the younger kids is so important for us."

The Skippers got the chance for eight wins with come from behind wins against South Shore Christian and Sacred Heart.

Chris Bryan's third hit of the game was a two-run double to highlight a three-run seventh inning in Skippers' 6-5 come from behind win against South Shore Christian.

Blanco was the hero against Sacred Heart as Cohasset over came a 2-0 deficit with a run each in the fourth and fifth innings and four in the sixth. Blanco drilled a two-run double to begin the four-run sixth inning.

Pilczak had two hits and Bryan was the complete game winner for Cohasset. Ted Straughn ran into tough luck in the loss at Harwich. Straughn pitched a strong game with 10 strikeouts and no walks.

"Ted has been an outstanding pitcher for us over the last month, but we just can't get any runs for him," said Gallotta. "He is always facing the other teams number one pitcher, but we have not helped him a lot."

second half and saw a big push by the WH squad. Brown stopped 10 shots overall, but the visiting team was able to push by the gamewinner and an insurance goal late, finally securing an 8-6 win.

The 13-U Silver team was outmuscled but not outhustled by a much larger visiting squad from Barnstable. Rumors that their players actually drove themselves to the match were dispelled by stealthy side-line investigation by some Cohasset parents who were concerned for the team's survival against a squad that was enhanced with preposterously large "age-eligible" seventh graders. That edge – and Cohasset's teams are always fielded by grade level only – made Barnstable a particularly formidle opponent, but that did not stop Cohasset from getting after the visitors like piranhas on an unsuspecting hippo.

Patrick McCormack started the scoring with a sweet bounce shot from the slot. As the game progressed, Luke Ernst knifed in closely enough to fire a couple of bullets, only to be stymied by an excellent effort from the opposing goal tender. After a quick coaching adjustment, a properly delivered bounce shot got Ernst the first of his two tallies on the day. Adrian Dunne rounded out the first-half scoring with a confounding quick stick from the right side of the net.

Matthew Swanborg, in a debut performance in net, was spectacular. He gamely stopped most of Barnstable's shots, and there were many. Of particular note was his stuffing of the opponent's version of Andre the Giant who had run over our entire defense and thundered to the net unmolested.

The second half found Adrian Dunne in net where he persevered despite numerous defensive miscues. He was helped at the other end of the field by Alexander Everett, who endured a merciless mauling on the way to tucking Cohasset's fifth goal. Chris Brash rounded out the afternoon with a measured missile after a quick feed from Luke Ernst.

Robbie Mahoney and Patrick Dunn repeatedly cut down Barnstable's offensive giants, while Alex Evans terrorized their defensive clearing efforts all day long. Jeff Durkin and Chris Carpenter played great two-way midfield. The rest of the boys mustered ably against the visitor's relentless assault, but ultimately succumbed in a game that was more closely contested than the final 19-6 score suggests.

Seaside Adventures sets sail for third year

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is accepting applications for its Seaside Adventures program. This is the third year for the CSCR camp that was developed as an entry program to introduce and familiarize children with the coastal and ocean environment. The summer camp program is an outdoor activity camp for students ranging from third to sixth grade.

The camp is age-appropriate, exciting, with hands-on projects introducing essential concepts of oceanography, marine biology, and environmental science. Each day students are asked to think of essential questions related to the program's theme. Students are then given opportunities to reflect upon or discuss their understandings based upon their experiences. In other words, the camp is a forum to learn from experience.

Interested parents can visit the camp's website at www.ccscr.org for additional information on camp activities and to fill out an application.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is a nonprofit organization with a central mission to educate students and young adults in the environmental sciences. CSCR conducts a wide range of educational programs to actively educate and involve student candidates in local environmental projects.

'Everyone wanted to be his friend'

However, Simeone's young life came to an end too soon, as shortly after graduation, he was drafted into the U.S. Army and assigned to the 101st Airborne Division. He would never return home to the town he loved.

On May 30, 1969, Simeone, a grounder in Company B 2nd Battalion, 501st Infantry, was conducting ambush patrols near Dong Ap Bia Mountain, on the western border of the A Shau Valley in Vietnam. His platoon moved into an ambush site along a trail and began waiting for possible enemy troops that might move along the trail at night. At about 10:15 p.m., several North Vietnamese were spotted moving toward the platoon's position.

When the enemy forces were in range, Claymore mines were detonated, killing four of the hostile troops. That in turn led American forces to emerge to assess the result of the ambush. The Vietnamese who survived the attack immediately retaliated, killing several friendly troops and wounding several others.

Simeone volunteered to attempt to reach the wounded men who were unprotected from enemy fire. He and his platoon leader crawled forward to aid the stricken men, but were observed by the enemy force. As he neared the casualties, Simeone was mortally wounded. He was only 21 years old.

Vietnam took a heavy toll on the town, as eight men were killed, including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, John Paul Lyon, Edward R. Maree, and Dennis J. Reardon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II. The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals. Simeone was one of three young men from the Cohasset High School Class of 1966 to sacrifice his life.

For his bravery and service in the war, Simeone was honored with many military awards including the Bronze Star Medal with V for valor with the Oak Leaf Cluster in light of his second award, the Purple Heart Medal. He was also awarded the Vietnam Service Medal, Vietnam Campaign Medal, Good Conduct Medal, National Defense Medal, Parachutists Badge, Combat Infantry Badge, along with numerous other campaign and unit awards.

Simeone will always be remembered for his good-natured ways and love of life. Even after his passing, he continued to inspire those around him. Simeone's death had a profound impact on Golden who was studying at Yale while his friend was serving in Vietnam. Golden said losing Simeone made him realize he wanted to find a way to give back to his country, like his friend had done by serving in the military, and he decided he could serve his country well in politics.

To ensure his memory is never forgotten, a memorial square has been dedicated in Simeone's honor, which residents drive by every day. Located in a fitting spot, Simeone's memorial square can be found at the intersection of Lantern Lane and Pond Street, just down the street from his family home on Bancroft Road. The square was dedicated in his memory in November 1996.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on John Paul Lyon or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com.

Squares named after fallen servicemen

PFC Craig M. Simeone is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset for their service to the country. The town lost seven other men during the Vietnam War who have all been memorialized with squares or other memorials in town including:

- Peter J. Albiani, Jr.: Intersection of Jerusalem and Gammons Roads
- Peter Cogill: Intersection of Church and Doane Streets
- Allen F. Keating: Intersection of Summer Street and Black Horse Lane
- William C. Laidlaw: Intersection of Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road
- John Paul Lyon: Intersection of North Main Street and Joy Place
- R. Edward Maree: The boat landing at the end of Parker Avenue
- Dennis J. Reardon: Corner of Elm Street and Stephen's Lane near the police station entrance

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives during Vietnam are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

RECREATION NOTES

Summer dog training — The Cohasset Recreation Department, will host a series of dog training classes for beginners and advanced dogs all summer long. Classes are held outdoors on the Common on Wednesday evenings. The dog obedience Beginners classes have the following starting dates and run once a week for 5 weeks; Wed. For more information on nay of these classes call the Cohasset Recreation Center at 781-383-4109. To call the class instructor call 781-857-1239.

Summer drama workshop — Again, the Cohasset Dramatic Club will be providing the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Theater Program for children ages 6-16. Registration for "Alice in Wonderland" will begin on Monday, June 13, at the Town Hall auditorium.

The cost of the program will be $350, which is all-inclusive to include T-shirts, a cast party and all other events that pertain to the program. Auditions will be held the week of June 20. Two evening sessions will be held the week of June 27, with the day program beginning the week of July 4. The program will tentatively meet Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The program will wrap up on the weekend of Aug. 5, with four performances.

Checks should be payable to the Cohasset Dramatic Club. There are many roles for both boys and girls; however, this program must be limited in number, hence, registering Monday, June 13, may be essential. For more information call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Boot camp fitness training — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4, on Cohasset Common, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges and push-ups.

Tour of historic cemetery

A spring walking tour of historic Hingham Cemetery will be held Sunday, June 5 Participants will be meeting at the Hingham Bell Tower next to the Old Ship Church at 1p.m.

Cemetery Director Lucinda Day will lead the tour, which includes a history of the cemetery dating from 1672, important cemetery monuments and notable burials, as well as social commentary. The cemetery's 150 year old arboretum consists of several hundred specimen trees, both native and exotic.

The tour lasts about an hour and a half and is open to the public. A $5 donation is requested, with no charge to those under 12. Rain date is Saturday, June 11. For further information call 781-749-4868.

Navy veteran to speak on Memorial Day

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Rain or shine, you can be assured that hundreds of local citizens will gather at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday for Cohasset's traditional Memorial Day observances.

The annual event that includes a parade down North Main Street to the Common and onto Elm Street and the harbor is always a draw in this small town that has lost more than of its share of soldiers, sailors and airmen over the years.

The Veterans Honor Roll — which will eventually include those to served in all the nation's wars — is one of the finest tributes anywhere and demonstrates the esteem in which Cohasset holds its veterans.

The stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Lt. Commander Kathleen Sullivan, a U.S. Navy veteran, a Cohasset resident.

The parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. but the day's events actually begin much earlier, the from 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans park. Then at 7 a.m. at the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library building (now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society) where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll. The buses arrive at Woodside at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery. The veterans join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

'LEST WE FORGET

George H. Mealy Post Commander of the Sons of the American Legion, Tom Wigmore, places flags at the graves of Cohasset veterans who were laid to rest in Woodside Cemetery. Ed Brennock placed flags on veterans graves in Beechwood Cemetery and Ralph Perroncello of the VFW placed the flags at Central Cemetery. All memorial flags – that total roughly 1400 – are replaced each spring. Thirty wreaths have also been put on the memorial squares and monuments around town.

Memorial Day schedule

- 7 a.m., veterans breakfast at the Legion
- 8:15 a.m., buses leave former Paul Pratt Library building on S. Main Street for North Cohasset
- 9:30 a.m., buses arrive at Woodside Cemetery, then on to Beechwood Cemetery
- 10:30 a.m., parade steps off from Music Circus parking lot
- 11 a.m., ceremony at Central Cemetery at Joy Place
- 11:30 a.m., ceremony at MIA/POW Square at Depot Court
- 11:45 a.m., parade arrives at Veterans Memorial Park. Guest speaker is USN Lt. Com. Kathleen

Lightkeepers hosting annual Memorial Day cookout

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation is pleased to invite everyone to Bancroft Hall on Government Island for hamburgers, hot dogs, soft drinks and coffee on Monday, May 30, following the Memorial Day Parade.

The non-profit CLC was established in 1991 to renovate a former two-family lightkeepers' residence no longer in use after automation of Minot's Light, and to convert it to a function room for community use. Building preservation and renovation was funded by residents and other supporters

The building is leased from the town and operated and maintained by the CLC. Operating and maintenance expenses and reserves for capital improvements or replacements, are covered through the rental of two apartments on the second floor and by charging a fee to non-residents for use of function room facilities.

Cohasset residents are able to use Bancroft Hall facilities for a nominal charge, with no cost to non-profit organizations, although donations are welcome.

CLC is expecting to serve over 1000 people at this year's post-parade celebration. This is the eighth year the organization has sponsored the cookout in recognition of the generosity of the community.

Author coffee at Atlantica on June 7

Buttonwood Books & Toys presents "Coffee with the Authors," Tuesday, June 7, 9:45-11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St, Cohasset. The event features a continental breakfast and a stimulating morning with authors David Hosp, Holley Bishop and Katie Willard, as they discuss their work.

Cohasset resident David Hosp will discuss his novel "Dark Harbor," a fast-paced thriller.

Cohasset resident David Hosp will discuss his novel "Dark Harbor," a fast-paced thriller. The story takes place in Boston and involves a serial killer, a prestigious law firm, politics and the mob.

Holley Bishop has received favorable reviews from Kirkus and Publisher's Weekly for her nonfiction book, "Robbing The Bees: A Biography of Honey." This book is a tribute to honey, the beekeeper, the flowers, the science of the beehive, the history of beekeeping and most importantly, the honeybee.

Katie Willard of Sudbury, will discuss "Raising Hope," her moving story about what it means to be a mother, a daughter, and a family. Noted local author Claire Cook writes, "'Raising Hope' does just that. A sweet, optimistic debut novel that promises more to look forward to from life and from Katie Willard."

Advance reservations and tickets are required and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Tickets are $15 per person and are non-refundable.

Molly Manley and Janet Marshall sign copies of their new children's book at Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza, Cohasset.

Children's book combines talents of Hingham women

Collaborate on 'Nantucket Nanny'

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

Janet Marshall and Molly Manley have turned a leisure-time amusement conjured up while on vacation together into a long-term creative collaboration.

The two Hingham friends remember making up impromptu games, telling jokes and rhymes in limerick form while staying up into the late hours during vacation days with their families and other friends from town in the British Virgin Islands.

Then on the beach one day, Manley suggested to Marshall, "How about doing limericks for children?

"It all started off as a joke. But we soon agreed that most of the kind of limericks we were making up were not suitable for children," said Manley during an interview at Marshall's Bradley Hill home.

"Molly and I has been friends for a long time, and we thought it would be fun to work together on a children's books of limericks and illustrations," added Marshall, an artist who had already illustrated some half-a-dozen children's book projects before beginning the collaboration with Manley.

The first result of the startup team effort was "Talkaty Talker," a bright and colorful limerick picture book for children published by the Pennsylvania-based Boyds Mills Press in 1994. Manley penned the limericks and Marshall drew the illustrations.

The two women followed four years later with Lulu Lentola, also released by Boyds Mills and featuring the title orca character. Both books illustrated Manley's rhymes with Marshall's childlike renderings of various animals, such as penguins, rhinos, elephants, cats, rabbits and parrots.

Apparently, vacation spots are a vibrant source of material for Marshall and Manley. The authors have just released their third book together, "A Nantucket Nanny," inspired mainly by the sights and sounds taken in by Marshall while on her more recent yearly vacations to Nantucket.

The book is also the duo's first for a new publisher, this one a lot closer to home, the Beverly, Massachusetts-based Commonwealth Editions.

The colorful cover "A Nantucket Nanny."

Marshall's illustration technique involves transferring her original drawings into cut-outs, translated into shapes, and pressing them on colored paper to get the effect of silk-screened images as well as a graphic design look. She then hand-colors the edges of the cut-outs and glues them down.

"I always loved the colored paper work of Matisse," said Marshall, citing one of her creative influences.

Once again, Marshall uses quaint animal images to add life to Manley's 12 limericks, which are set in the various regions of Nantucket, such as Siasconset, Quidnet, Pocomo and Shawkemo. Miss Peach, the nanny goat, pedals a bike to Cliff Beach; Kerry, the seal on a surfboard, races the Fast Ferry; and stubborn Dwight, the bunny in pajamas, flies a kite by Sankaty Light. Marshall has made the trips to Nantucket with her husband, Colin, every year for the past few years in June and October, "when the island is as its best," she said.

"It seemed like the sort of limericks that Molly writes would go best there, specially made for the charm of Nantucket," Marshall said. "The creative process usually went that Molly would write the limericks and I would come up with the animal character that best fits."

Marshall and Manley gave notable mention to some of the other perennial attractions of Nantucket that they also highlight or feature in "A Nantucket Nanny." These include the gray-shingled houses, the cobblestone streets, the Daffodil Festival, the Fast Ferry and the Madaket sunset to name just a few

Manley focuses on one limerick and accompanying illustration in particular, featuring a triplet of cats from Quidnet in a window box, which she said best speaks for the charm of Nantucket.

"We really wanted to include the picture of the cats in the window box. That sort of thing is where a lot of the whimsy of the island comes from," Manley said.

Marshall, 65, a graduate of the Hartford Art School, began writing and designing her own picture books in 1988, when her four children were almost grown. The following year, her first books, "My Camera at the Zoo" and "My Camera at the Aquarium," were published by Little, Brown & Co Manley, 68, had written short stories for adults before beginning her children's books collaboration with Marshall.

"A Nantucket Nanny" is available in Hingham at Zuzu's Gift Shop, Barnes & Noble at Hingham Plaza and Over the Moon at Lincoln Plaza. Also, at Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset, most Barnes & Noble stores throughout New England and in many towns on Cape Cod and on Nantucket as well as online from Commonwealth Editions.

Marshall and Manley hope the book will be the first of a series for Commonwealth Editions.

DAR chapter honors students with good citizen awards

The Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met May 22 at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens award. Sponsored through the local chapter, award winners were Julia Concannon of Rockland High School, John DeWaal of Cohasset High School, Alaina Leonard of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, and Leslie Osborn of Hingham High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. Three students are selected by the faculty and then voted on by the members of the senior class. They must have the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. This program is recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Julia Concannon of Rockland, the daughter of William and Maryellen Concannon, plays baritone horn in the band. She is vice-president of her class, president of the National Honor Society, member of the Key Club, yearbook committee, student government and youth and government. She is also captain of the soccer team and plays softball. According to the RHS guidance director Julia is a "most active student leader at RHS, participating in many activities and serving as an innovator of several programs." Outside of school she participates in CCD and has a part-time job. She will attend University of Massachusetts at Amherst and received a John and Abigail Adams scholarship.

They must have the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism.

John DeWaal of Cohasset, the son of John and Julia DeWaal, is a member of the National Honor Society. He plays in the high school concert band and is lead trumpet on the Jazz Ensemble. He also helps teach younger band players, and participates in golf and tennis. Outside of school he has participated in the Appalachia Service project and is a sailing instructor at the Cohasset Sailing Club. John will attend the University of New Hampshire.

Alaina Leonard of Whitman, the daughter of Maureen and Dennis Leonard and the granddaughter of Ita Leonard of Hull. Alaina is secretary of the Student Council and was their publicity coordinator. She received the Student Council Good Samaritan award and the Communications award. She helped to form a chapter of "Freedom's Answer" at the school. The organization gets eligible students to register and then vote. She is part of the Peer Leadership program and is a role model in the drug and alcohol prevention program at the middle school. She is involved in the Key Club and S.A.D.D. Alaina is also a talented singer and an Irish Step-dancer. She will attend Bridgewater State College.

Leslie Osborn of Hingham, the daughter of Bev and Chet Osborn, is president of the Anti-Defamation League and the Spanish Club. She is also a member of the high school chorus, the Intergenerational Club and the Climate committee. As a representative of the Anti-Defamation league, she has participated in the Boston Youth Congress. She represented her school in Washington, D.C., at a national Young Leaders conference. She helped organize a Leaf Rake for the South Shore Elder Services and a food drive with the Hingham food pantry for the Mary Martha Learning Center. She played four years on the tennis team, was a camp counselor for the Hingham recreation dept., and a lifeguard at the Blackrock Country Club. She will attend college in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Each Good Citizen was presented with a certificate and wallet card stating they are local award recipients. Their parents came forward to help pin on the Good Citizen pins and were congratulated on their outstanding young adults. A small gift and a flag were also presented to each recipient.

OBITUARIES

Kevin R. Prendergast

Avid outdoorsman

Kevin R. Prendergast, 51, of Cohasset, died May 23, 2005 at his home, after a brief illness.

The son of Joseph E., and Shirley (Dixon) Prendergast, he was born in Weymouth and graduated from Cohasset High School (1972), Wentworth Institute of Technology, and Northeastern University.

Mr. Prendergast, an avid outdoorsman, worked as project superintendent/manager for Turner Construction company.

He was a mechanical and electrical engineer, and was a licensed construction supervisor by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and licensed for building operation in the City of Boston. During the course of his 27-year career, he worked on many projects including the new US Airways terminal at Logan Airport, the Tsongas Arena in Lowell, the Reebok World Headquarters in Canton, the Whitehead Institute in Cambridge, the John F. Kennedy Library in Boston, and many of the Children's Hospital buildings in Boston, and most recently, the 605,000-square-foot Virginia Beach Convention Center in Virginia Beach, Va.

Kevin R. Prendergast

Mr. Prendergast was an adventurer, who loved to kayak, bicycle, run and mountain climb. He and his wife, Pamela, enjoyed taking long trips to unplanned destinations, exploring everything along their way.

In addition to his wife, Pamela (Browne) Prendergast; he leaves a son William, of Cohasset; three brothers, Michael J., of Hingham; Brian P., of Windham, Maine; and Daniel T., of Marshfield; his mother-in-law, Madelyne Browne of Cohasset, and two sisters-in-law, Meredith B. Gledhill, and Melissa J. Browne, both of Cohasset. He also leaves 13 nieces and nephews.

A funeral mass was held today (Friday, May 27) at Saint Anthony Church, Cohasset, at 10 a.m.

Interment is at Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in his memory to Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree, MA 02184, or to Children's Hospital, 300 Longwood Avenue, Boston, MA 02115.

Elizabeth Doyle

Enjoyed helping children

Elizabeth "Liz" (Mulhern) Doyle, 54, died on April 25, 2005, at her home in Lake Worth, Fla.

Born in New Hyde Park, N.Y., she was the daughter of the late Florence and Edward Mulhern of Cohasset, and subsequently of Helen Mulhern, also of Cohasset.

Mrs. Doyle was employed at the Indian Pines Elementary School, Lake Worth, Fla., for the past 17 years. She will be remembered for her knack of making a book come to life for children, for her ability to boost their self esteem, and for bringing out the best in every child.

She leaves her husband of 33 years, Mark Callahan Doyle, formerly of Pittsfield; her children, Tyler Doyle of Lighthouse Point, Fla., Mike and his wife Amanda Doyle, of Lake Worth, Fla.; two sisters, Mary Jewett of Foxboro, and Pat Butscher of Tallahassee, Fla.; two brothers, William "Bill" Mulhern of Sandwich, and Robert "Bob" Mulhern of Taunton; and extended family, Mike Delaney of Pembroke, Matt Delaney of Pembroke, Mark Delaney of Cohasset, Christine Suckow of Pembroke, and Connie Walsh of Falmouth.

A Memorial mass is being held at 11:30 a.m. Saturday, June 4, at St. Anthony's Church.

Donations in her memory may be made to Hospice of Palm Beach County, 5300 East Ave., West Palm Beach, FL 33407.

Shawl Ministry meets on May 28

The next monthly meeting of the Shawl Ministry of the South Shore, will be Saturday, May 28, from 1-3 p.m. in the Trustees Meeting Room of the Hingham Public Library on Leavitt Street.

The group meets the fourth Saturday of every month and is open to anyone interested in knitting or crocheting as a way to express the love of God to people in need of care. The sessions close with a blessing over the works in progress and the finished shawls. New participants are always welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. The Rev. Victoria Gaskell is the facilitator.

Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

Hingham Public Library is located off Route 228 at 66 Leavitt St. The entrance is in the rear on the lower level and is handicapped accessible. For information call Victoria weekdays at 617-353-3036.

Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M,N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about the Shawl Ministry, go to www.shawlministry.com.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

TAKING DIRECTION

If you want to know how important it is to make the most of your residual hearing with a hearing instrument, consider that it may help save your life. Scientists now know that low pitched sounds are what help us tell where a sound is coming from. How? While low pitched sounds surround the head and enter both ears almost simultaneously, the brain is able to distinguish the small interval between when the sound enters one ear and the other. This is what tells you where sounds are coming from. If a hearing-impaired person is not able to make this distinction, he or she may be vulnerable to any of a number of dangers that are usually preceded by low pitched warning sounds.

Just as trifocals were designed to correct vision for different activities like reading and driving, some hearing instruments are designed to correct hearing in various situations. Put the many available products for the hearing impaired to good work for you. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we'll help you choose from among the variety of designs of hearing instruments to find the one that best suits your needs. Start with a comprehensive hearing test at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. The low pitched drone of an oncoming vehicle helps people with normal hearing know that it is not safe to cross the street.

DESTINATIONS

Great dining on Cape Cod

This is the first in a series of articles on places to eat and things to do at New England vacation destinations. Next week: The Berkshires.

By MAT SCHAFFER

When it comes to dining out, Cape Cod has grown up. Once known only for clam shacks and roadhouses, the Cape now offers a wide array of dining experiences: New England or ethnic, casual or fancy, affordable or expensive, the choice is yours. Yes, you'll still find lobster rolls and chowder but you'll also find pad Thai, linguine con vongole and Brazilian barbecue. Where to go for dinner after a day at the beach? Consider these Cape must-tries stretching from Buzzard's Bay to P-town. Prices are for a full meal.

Sagamore Inn, 1131 Route 6A, Bourne, 508-888-9707

Set the Wayback Machine for the 1960's at this timeless upper Cape favorite where the beers are inexpensive and the portions, large. Try the pot roast, the fresh seafood specialties and Italian-American staples like lasagna and veal parmesan. Your children — and your inner child — will love it. $20 to $40.

The Chart Room, 1 Shipyard Lane, Catautmet, 508-563-5350

Driving to this popular spot located beside the moored boats inside Kingman Marina is complicated and confusing but worth the hassle. The atmosphere is nautical, the cocktails are generous, the quahog chowder is creamy smooth and the lobster salad, fresh and delicious. Call ahead for directions. $20 to $40.

Five Bays Bistro, 825 Main Street, Osterville, 508-420-5559

Simple and chic with a martini list to rival any big city watering hole, this is the kind of place you wish you could bring home with you. Co-owner Tim Souza is behind the stove, whipping up gourmet goodies like pan-seared sole Francaise, porcini-encrusted swordfish and sauted veal medallions with parmesan risotto. $20 to $40.

Daniel Webster Inn, 149 Main Street, Sandwich, 508-888-3622

Dine fireside in the music room or under the stars in the conservatory at this boutique inn, built in 1644. Chef Steven Chausse's menu covers the classics — lobster chowder, slow roasted prime rib, horseradish-crusted Cape scrod and veal Oscar, garnished with lobster, spinach and Barnaise. $20 to $40.

Barnstable Restaurant and Tavern, 3176 Main Street, Barnstable, 508-362-2355

Remember Anago chef/owner Bob Calderone? Well, he moved his family from Boston to Barnstable and opened this neighborhood haunt where he's cooking upscale pub grub. The menu includes sandwiches, fried seafood, assorted pastas and entrees like rack of lamb with whole grain mustard sauce and bouillabaisse of local fish. $20 to $40.

Brazilian Grill, 680 Main Street, Hyannis, 508-771-0109

You'd think you were in Sao Paolo when you walk into this pay-by-the-pound rodizio extravaganza. Help yourself from a smorgasbord of salads, seafood and starches. Then, pick and choose from skewers of roasted beef, pork, sausage and poultry, carved tableside. Save room for homemade flan. Under $20.

STAFF ILLUSTRATION BY KATHLEEN M.G. HOWLETT

Bangkok Thai Cuisine, 339A Barnstable Road, Hyannis, 508-771-2333

This unprepossessing hole in the wall with only a handful of tables boasts some of the best Thai food on Cape Cod. Excellent soups, savory stir-fries, spicy curries and a mean pad Thai. Cognoscenti swoon over the crispy duck with tamarind sauce. Under $20.

Kreme 'N Kone, 961 Rte 28, West Dennis, 508-394-0808

For more than 50 years K-N-K has been dishing up clam chowder, fried clams, onion rings, 1/3 pound hamburgers and cheeseburgers and broiled seafood dinners (with rice pilaf and slaw.) You can also get a lobster roll, oyster roll, fried fish sandwich, hot dog and soft serve ice cream for dessert. Under $20.

Schoolhouse Ice Cream and Yogurt, 749 Route 28, Harwichport, 508-432-7355

45 flavors — 31 in rotation. Traditionalists will find peppermint stick or rocky road; modernists, cranberry sorbet or pumpkin pie. Treat the kids to Harwich mud pie (fudge-rippled coffee with chocolate-covered almonds and cookie crumbs) and yourself to a scoop of rum raisin infused with real rum. Under $20.

Chillingsworth, 2449 Main St., Brewster, 508-896-3640.

Refined Continental-inspired cuisine is the draw at this oasis of white linens, cut flowers, and antiques in a 300-year-old estate on six acres of lawns and gardens. Chef/owner Robert "Nitzi" Rabin is forever winning raves for dishes like rare seared tuna tournedos with foie gras and butter poached lobster with carrot, sea beans and lobster sauce. Over $40.

Nauset Beach Club, 222 Main Street, Orleans, 508-255-8547

This cozy bistro in a converted Cape-style house specializes in the alta cucina (high cuisine) of Northern Italy. The seasonal menu is ingredient-driven with fare like roasted Wellfleet ostriche (oysters), linguine con vongole made with local clams, bistecca alla griglia (grilled beefsteak) and zuppa de pesce of just hooked fish. Over $40.

Cafe Edwidge/Edwidge at Night, 333 Commercial Street, Provincetown, 508-487-2008.

A crowded breakfast/brunch destination through midday, after sunset, Edwidge turns funky and fun. Sip a martini on the wooden deck while perusing chef/co-owner Steven Frappolli's eclectic menu-sake and plum glazed Chilean sea bass, tuna tartare or rack of lamb. Over $40.

Clem & Ursie's, 85 Shankpainter Road, Provincetown, 508-487-2333

As idiosyncratic as Provincetown itself, at Clem and Ursie's you can eat fried clams, shucked oysters, steamed lobsters, Portuguese kale soup, racks of ribs and assorted sushi and sashimi under one roof. Grab a table-hand-painted by a local artist-in the main room or under the awning out back. $20 to $40.

'Land of the free, home of the brave'

Cohasset observes Memorial Day

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When Old Glory and glorious weather come together, it can translate into a Memorial Day to remember.

There is perhaps no town more beautiful and no setting more stunning than Cohasset and its Veterans Memorial Park in springtime.

With 50 flags, representing each of the states, blowing in the breeze under the blue sky and the American flag flying on several flagpoles at half staff, but still above the rest – the stage was set for the annual observances honoring those men and women in the Armed Forces who have made the ultimate sacrifice.

What the names of the fallen have in common is their common link to Cohasset, which on Monday was the epitome of small-town America.

As lobster boats rested on their moorings in the harbor at low tide — toddlers tumbled around on the green grass at the park, some older citizens sat on the benches and reflected, and children played and families visited with one another – all the while waiting for the parade to appear around the corner on Elm Street.

At just before noon, the sound of sirens heralded the impending arrival of the parade, which featured dozens of veterans in their service uniforms, police, firefighters, local officials, and hundreds of Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. Again this year, the Rusty Skippers played with the middle-high school band under the joint direction of Stephanie Hoskin and Steve Biagini.

The parade that stepped off at the Music Circus had wended its way from Central Cemetery down North Main Street and through the village, with several stops to pay tribute at memorials along the way.

"I don't know where to begin," said Steve Wigmore, commander of the George H. Mealy American Legion Post in his welcoming remarks at Veterans Memorial Park. "But believe me we've got a great day."

Wigmore described the assembly of local veterans representing all branches of the service and all wars from World War II on – as "the best of 2005, you vets of Cohasset, Massachusetts."

Ralph Perroncello, commander of the VFW post, made special note of his fellow World War II veterans.

"Thanks to all the World War II veterans who marched and showed up after all these years," he said. "It's been 60 years."

US Navy Lt. Commander Kathleen Sullivan of Cohasset, the keynote speaker, noted how Memorial Day since 9-11 has taken on renewed meaning.

"Until a few short years ago Memorial Day, it seemed was a day that we remembered heroes of wars from years, decades and even centuries past. But today we also remember the men and women who have lost their lives in the War on Terrorism," Sullivan said.

"The War on Terrorism is unlike any in our history. The enemy is illusive, they are not wearing a uniform, they hide behind innocents; there are no clear battle lines; the attacks seem random and unpredictable; the tactics are unconventional."

But Sullivan said the common thread that ties this war to all others, are the men and women who gave their lives for freedom.

Deep Run has growth spurt

Planning board reviews projects

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's a small neighborhood, but it could undergo big changes as two houses on Deep Run are in the process of moving through Large Home Site Plan Review hearings before the planning board.

Homeowners Robert and Sara Leggat live at 21 Deep Run and have the less controversial of the two proposals. The couple would like to demolish a section of their single-family home and build up to create a new second floor, while staying within the footprint of what currently exists.

Michael and Kristyn Stevens, 6 Deep Run, have a more extensive project. They would like to tear down their single-family home, located on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Deep Run, and build a new shingle-style home with a wrap around porch and three-car garage. Because it sits at the entrance to Deep Run, some abutters are worried the expansion will change the character of the neighborhood.

Prior to the hearings, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore explained to homeowners and abutters who came to hear the proposals, that site plan reviews are just that — an informal review conducted by the board. The board "cannot give approval, per se," he said, but it can recommend the building

PICTURE THIS/Maria Plante

Maria Plante volunteered during the eighth annual Memorial Day cookout at the Lightkeepers Residence.

Name: Maria Plante

Occupation: Cohasset Town Constable and advocate for the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens.

Best day of your life: Aug. 16, 1957 at 5 p.m. under the clock at Kenmore Square where I met my husband and June 25, 1960, the day we were married.

Best vacation: Celebrating our 25th wedding anniversary on St. Maarten in Anguilla.

Favorite season: I love them all, but spring is my most favorite.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving, when all our children and their families are here.

Favorite junk food: Anything chocolate.

Favorite book: "The Thorn Birds," by Colleen McCullough.

Favorite movie and actor: "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" and Jack Nicholson.

Favorite TV Show: "House."

Pet peeve: People who are ill mannered.

Most embarrassing moment: Being escorted off Ted O'Brien's live TV show where I had been invited to debate the casino gambling issue in Hull.

Goal: To enhance the quality of life for all mentally retarded people.

Person you'd most like to meet: Mother Teresa.

Biggest worry: That my children and grandchildren won't be able to afford to live in this area.

Best part of Cohasset: The hidden gem – the Cohasset Lightkeepers Residence.

Cook RFP gets review

Bids could go out by June 15

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectmen are dotting their "I"s and crossing their "T"s so to speak, as they finalize a Request for Proposals for the Cook Estate property. They voted Tuesday to accept the latest draft, pending a review of its appendices and approval from legal counsel.

With that approval, advertising for the RFP could begin June 15 which would set the bidder solicitation process in motion. Interested developers would be given 30 days to submit a proposal, which means all proposals must be received by the town by July 15.

"We're getting close to a final product," said Town Manager Bill Griffin.

One of the latest changes to the document is the decision to set a minimum bid price of $4.9 million for the property to ensure the town makes up what it has spent thus far. The town will purchase the property from the Cook heirs for $4.5 million, and the previous minimum bid price was set at $4.8 million. To date the town has spent roughly $250,000 on legal fees, engineering costs, and appraisals, as well as a refundable deposit of $200,000.

"We're getting close to a final product."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

The town is trying to build a reduced number of units of senior housing on the Cook Estate property.

Over the course of the past 15 months, the town had worked with the Northland Residential Company to build 95 units of mixed-income, age restricted housing on the site off Sohier Street. Northland was chosen during an extensive RFP review process in March 2004, and at that time, a minimum bid price of $5.25 million had been set. Northland offered $5.4 million.

However, soils would not allow wastewater from the 95 proposed units to be disposed of on site, as was planned, and a municipal sewer connection was not an option. A downsized project was the only option for the site. Because of the change in scope, under state procurement laws, the project would have to go out to bid again, selectmen said. Northland has said it intends to participate in the second bidding process.

This time around the town could end up purchasing the property, as the Cook heirs have said they are not inclined to give the town any more extensions of the purchase and sale agreement. The town has already secured three extensions. If a suitable buyer is not found before Sept. 15, the deadline set by the Cooks, or if permits cannot be secured in time, the town may opt to purchase the property outright to take some of the pressure off.

If the town must purchase the property, it will need to pay interest on the money borrowed, which Director of Finance Michael Buckley said could cost roughly $13,000 per month. To ensure the town can cover that cost, it was necessary to up the minimum bid to $4.9 million.

However, purchasing the property is a decision that will need to be made by a Town Meeting vote. Due to the failure of the $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override at the special election May 21, a special Town Meeting will be held at some point before mid-September to balance the budget, and the Cook issue could be included on that Warrant.

In addition to upping the minimum bid price, the board also agreed to make access to the 8.7 acres of abutting town property a requirement in the RFP. The Cooks own two parcels of land — 18.92 acres off Sohier Street across from Fairoaks Lane, and three acres on the other side between the Fairoaks neighborhood and the Mobil station. The town has an 8.7 acre parcel near Stop & Shop that abuts the Cook property. While the town-owned land was included in the first RFP, based on the requirement that it would be deeded back to the town as open space, the selectmen voted to leave it out of the new transaction. But they said an easement to access the property is very important.

"The developer must agree to access," if the land is going to be used for anything in the future, said Griffin, adding it will be up to the board to decide how that land should be used. "If a developer has to commit to give access to the land, they'll want to know what's going on it," he said.

"The sense I had was that it would remain as open space to protect the water supply," said Chairman Fred Koed, as the property is in close proximity to wetlands as well as Peppermint Brook which runs to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. He suggested the land be kept open, and that access be granted only for maintenance of walking paths that will be located on the combined property as well as fire and police department access for the development, as the town land only has a small amount of frontage on Route 3A.

"That's a really good point," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

The selectmen voted to keep the land open space and require in the RFP that the town be granted an easement by the developer.

Pending the approval of legal counsel, the RFP will be advertised in the Central Register June 15, and bid documents will be opened July 15.

Fees leave fishermen feeling cold

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Commercial fishermen will be spared paying a newly implemented user fee to tie-up their skiffs on the town floats and docks, at least for the time being. While mooring and user fees will remain in place for their main vessels, fishermen will receive a refund of $72 , the flat rate for docking a skiff.

There has been some concern over the new implementation of fees, as in previous years, there has been no charge to tie up a skiff — a small boat without a motor which many fishermen use to row out to the larger boats. For fishermen, it is a necessity they be able to get out to their boats, and imposing an additional fee on their livelihood did not seem fair to many.

"Seventy-two dollars is a big jump from nothing," said Margaret Figueiredo, whose husband Bob and son Paul are both fishermen.

But some also feel the fee structure itself is not fair, as not all skiffs are created equal. They come in varying lengths and widths and some take up more space than others, yet everyone is charged the same fee.

Paul Figueiredo said his skiff is 8-feet-long, and every day he uses it to row out to his fishing boat. "Why should I pay the same amount as someone who has a 12-foot skiff?" he asked. Mooring and user fees in the harbor are charged per foot. Paul Figueiredo said the new flat fees look like a way to balance the budget.

In addition, the lack of space on the floats is creating problems, and both residents and fishermen feel if they are going to be required to pay a fee, they should be guaranteed a spot.

"People who pay should have a place to tie up. That's just the fair thing to do," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Chairman of the Harbor Committee Bob Cunningham said the fees were imposed this year as a way to help clear up space on the floats. The thought was, if there was a fee imposed, those who do not use their boats on a regular basis might not tie up just because they can. He also explained the fee was set at a flat rate as a way to minimize enforcement. In other words, if everyone is charged the same fee, there does not have to be a member of the staff checking to ensure those who say they have an 8-foot skiff and pay for an 8-foot skiff really have an 8-foot skiff.

However, Paul Figueiredo said all it takes is a quick look to determine the difference between an 8-foot boat and a 12-foot boat.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he feels in terms of fees, it is important to draw the line between using the harbor for a commercial business or for pleasure. He said he grew up in Kennebunkport, ME and realizes the importance the fishing industry has on coastal towns and said Cohasset should be encouraging the industry. "I'd be in favor of waiving the fee and refunding the $72," he said.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil agreed as did Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed, who said it is also important to encourage the fishing industry not only because it is a profession that helped mold the town, but because it has many other benefits. As a working fishing port, Cohasset is always bumped to the top of the list when dredging becomes necessary.

The board agreed to waive the fee, but Town Manager Bill Griffin suggested contacting Town Counsel on the matter to ensure it is legal to waive fees for some, and not others. A moratorium on fees has been enacted for now.

Other harbor issues

There has been some other confusion regarding fees and the use of moorings in the harbor. Cunningham said everyone that uses the harbor should be paying a fee of one kind or another, whether it be a mooring fee, user fee, or transient fee.

Cunningham said those with a mooring should not be sharing that mooring. He said there has been some misunderstanding about sharing and the notion spaces in the harbor can be lent out like a time share in Florida is not accurate. If a person isn't going to use their mooring for a few weeks, a friend cannot take it for their own.

"A better analogy is a pass to a ski mountain. If you're not going to be skiing for a while, you can't say to other people they can ski with it. It's issued only to the user," he said.

However, Cunningham said if a person has paid their mooring fee and has a spot and would like to trade with a friend who may be going on vacation for a while, hopping back and forth should not be an issue in that case.

For those who may be coming to Cohasset only for the night, a transient fee will be imposed at $35 per night. No boats should be docking for free.

Police motorcycle units make their debut

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In an effort to get police out of their cruisers and more visible to the public, Police Chief Jim Hussey has been able to add two Harley Davidson motorcycles to the department's fleet of vehicles.

The police motorcycles were a hit this past weekend when they escorted the trolleys carrying prom-goers to the town line and provided an escort for Monday's Memorial Day Parade.

But residents with a head for accounting in these tough fiscal times can put down their sharp pencils.

The motorcycles have been leased for a year. The Cohasset Police Association, the private fund-raising arm of the police union, is paying for one of the motorcycles and Hussey is using left-over funds in his cruiser account for the other.

Leasing costs for each bike are $2,800 a year, plus roughly $500 for maintenance, Hussey said.

Hussey says the money is well spent and is helping fulfill his vision of community policing that is shared by the Police Advisory Council, which is made up of local citizens.

"When I first got here, I tried to break down the barriers between the public and police department," he said. Hussey noted, for example, the cruisers no longer have the darkened windshields, which were uninviting to the community.

He also explained that motorcycles are a great way to encourage interaction with the community.

Officer Christy Tarantino, left, and Sgt. William Quigley rode the police department's new motorcycles to escort Monday's Memorial Day Parade.

"I used to ride one myself in the 1980s," he said. "There is nothing better to get kids around to talk. It's an attraction.

"It's a win-win for everyone."

Hussey said shortly after he came on board last spring, the officers asked if there would ever be a chance they'd have motorcycles. Hussey said he would look at the numbers and explore the possibility.

The police association subsequently came forward and offered to pick up the tab for one of the bikes.

Hussey said after a year, he would review how effective the motorcycles have been and if the public thinks they are a valuable asset.

The chief also said the motorcycles provide more flexibility by allowing officers to go places where cruisers can't.

Case in point on a serious note, Hingham police are using motorcycle units to patrol Bare Cove Park where two homeless men were found murdered last month. Hingham Chief Steven Carlson said the motorcycle units are able to patrol the 470-acre park which has miles of walking and biking trails.

Deep Run residents have plans to expand their homes inspector to either award or deny a building permit for the project.

The large home bylaw serves only as a way to insure there is a mechanism for abutters to air concerns when a large home is planned for a neighborhood, and help preserve the character of the town by preventing "mansionization." The bylaw was passed at the 2004 Annual Town Meeting.

The bylaw is triggered when a homeowner plans to exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area, up to 6,000 square feet.

The Stevens' proposal would increase their home to 4,390 square feet, and discussion on the project will continue at the June 8 planning board meeting. However, the roughly 20 neighbors who attended the May 25 hearing were given a taste for what the project would entail, including a construction phase of roughly one year.

Henry Arnaudo of HPA Designs, Inc., the company that designed the plans for the Stevens, said in the end, the home will be slightly longer and not much deeper than what currently exists. He said there will be a difference of a little more than 17 feet in the home's height, but "everything about this house meets the dimensional regulations," as required by the town's zoning bylaws. Arnaudo said it was necessary to raise the level of the home by a few feet because there are ledge and drainage problems on the site.

Due to the ledge, blasting will be required to give the Stevens a new basement. Ken Smith of Atlantic Blasting Company was on hand to explain what will take place, and try to allay the fears of abutters whose homes have been damaged from area blasting in the past.

Michael and Kristyn Stevens, 6 Deep Run, would like to tear down their house on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Deep Run and build a new shingle-style home with a wrap around porch and three-car garage.

Smith said he estimates it will take roughly two weeks to complete blasting for the site, and the activity will not be constant. He said once the current house comes down, they will better be able to gauge the situation and come up with more concrete answers regarding how much blasting is needed and for how long.

Neighbor Ed Lappen, 18 Deep Run, said he was concerned because his swimming pool is very close to the area where the blasting will occur. In addition, Beverly Koswick, 25 Deep Run, said her house was damaged when neighbors blasted years ago and she doesn't want to see her walls cracking again. Other neighbors echoed her sentiments.

"There is a 250-foot state (setback) requirement," said Smith, which means all abutters' property will be at least that far from the point of detonation. He explained the rock in Cohasset is very "reactive" rock, and it transmits a high frequency vibration, which he said is actually better for homes than a low frequency. He said earthquakes produce low frequency vibrations, which actually cause more damage to homes than high frequency, although they are not as easily detected by humans.

But planning board member Peter Pratt said with any project, "You're asking for trouble with blasting, even in the hands of a master" especially when homes in the area have been damaged by blasting before.

"Would you consider chipping, which could be less invasive?" asked Pratt.

However, Smith said because Cohasset ledge is so hard, "It doesn't respond well to chipping, especially when you get below the weathered outside portion." In addition, chipping can take much longer than blasting and it is a constant 8-hours a day process, which may have a more negative impact on neighbors.

"So chipping is not a panacea in lieu of blasting," said planning board member Stuart Ivimey.

Moore said while the concerns over blasting are relevant, they are not sufficient reasons not to allow the project to move forward. "In the real world there are no guarantees there won't be any problems. You can never anticipate an accident," he said.

The Leggats' home, with the new addition, will total 3,966 square feet. The couple says with the addition there will be no change in the grade of the land, meaning drainage for nearby homes should not be affected, and there will be no blasting of ledge.

Koswick was the only neighbor who voiced concerns with the proposed addition, and she said while she thinks the plans for the house look great, she is concerned about the landscaping on the Leggats' property. The couple had a new septic system installed and trees along the property line were removed, leaving the Koswicks with less privacy than they had been used to.

Although the Leggats agreed to work with their neighbors and said they had intended on planting some foliage during a later stage of their overall home improvement plan, Moore said the fact that the home will be expanding has nothing to do with the tree removal and should not be a factor in the review process.

"If the applicants decided tomorrow to do nothing (to their home), the problem would still be there," he said.

The planning board said it would recommend the building inspector approve the Leggat's plans with a few conditions, including the total lot square footage figure be included in the final plans.

The public hearing for 6 Deep Run will continue June 8 and is slated to be taken up at roughly 8:15 p.m. For more information, please contact the planning board office at (781) 383-3517.

CHAMBER CHATTER

Map and business directory — The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce has announced that a Cohasset map and business directory is in the works. This new marketing tool will provide a comprehensive categorical listing and brief description of retail and service businesses in town. As a benefit of membership, Cohasset Chamber members will be listed free of charge.

It is very important that members update their contact information. Members are advised to check the Chamber website to review business information, or complete the Contact Information Update form mailed with the Chamber renewal notice.

For a limited time only, the Chamber is extending a special offer of $125 for a directory listing/description to non-member businesses. The $125 fee includes a Chamber membership effective immediately, through July 31, 2006.

For further information, call Jane Higgins Norton at 781-383-0708 or Mike Conlon at 781-383-1616.

MBTA pays $200K in eminent domain case

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority has paid a settlement 10 times that of their original offer to a Cohasset couple whose land was taken by eminent domain as part of the Greenbush line construction.

William and Huguette Stone were the owners of a vacant lot at 383 South Main St., of which the MBTA took a portion by eminent domain last November. The government has the right to take private land by eminent domain for public use, and there is usually compensation awarded to the owner in return.

Although the MBTA originally offered $20,000 for the property, the couple's attorney Peter E. Flynn of Saugus said a complaint was filed in Norfolk Superior Court and an agreement has been reached, paying compensation to the Stones in the amount of $200,000.

"We were thrilled to obtain ten times the MBTA's original offer and present the Stones with a check for an additional $200,000," said Flynn, adding it was especially important for his clients that they were able to come to a resolution quickly, "while also avoiding lengthy, costly, and uncertain litigation."

The land was taken from the Stones Nov. 1, 2004, and at that time the MBTA felt its offer of $20,000 was proper compensation. However, Flynn said the Stones were not happy with the settlement and filed a complaint in Norfolk Superior Court Dec. 7.

Although litigation was filed, Flynn said, "Negotiations with the MBTA continued, which allowed us to come to an agreement quickly and withdraw the complaint before further pursuing the litigation."

The complaint alleges the compensation was "inadequate and does not reflect the fair market value of the property taken, and/or damages to the plaintiff's remaining property." Flynn explained the land is reasonably suited for some limited development, but that "Any development would encounter issues relating to the presence of wetlands, access, and a right of way over a railroad line," once construction of the Greenbush line is complete.

Through much negotiation, the $200,000 settlement was reached, and the Stones filed a notice of voluntary dismissal in Norfolk Superior Court March 15. Flynn said he and his clients are very happy with the outcome, adding while construction of the Greenbush line is somewhat controversial, it is a "worthy project."

MBTA spokesman Joseph Pesaturo said in order to build the Greenbush line, the MBTA has taken roughly 90 pieces of property by eminent domain throughout the entire 17-mile Greenbush corridor. There have been 30 eminent domain cases negotiated with property owners and nine property owners, including the Stones, have challenged the MBTA's taking price and have filed lawsuits.

Cohasset residents William and Huguette Stone have been awarded a check for $200,000 from the MBTA, thanks to Attorneys Peter Flynn (right) and Jason R. Scopa, shown here in front of their clients' South Main Street property. The property was taken by eminent domain by the MBTA for construction of the Greenbush line. The settlement awarded was 10 times more than the MBTA's original offer.

The Greenbush Line is the third leg of the Old Colony Railroad Restoration Project, and is being built as mitigation for the Central Artery/Tunnel Project in downtown Boston. The project will stretch for 17 miles and once complete, will restore train service from Scituate to South Station. The project is intended to reduce automobile traffic on the congested highways leading into the city. According to the MBTA, the project will cost roughly $479 million including planning, engineering, land and permitting costs, along with the cost of construction and new trains.

Vanderweil charts course for future

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Vanderweil said there has been so much emphasis put on creating housing, that giving a boost to the town's commercial tax base has been overlooked.

It seems as if almost every board in town is in the process of devising strategic plans for the future, and the selectmen are no exception. Over the next few months, selectmen will prioritize areas they say need extra attention and form strategies to implement plans for the next 5-10 years.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil compiled a list of ideas for the board's consideration, three of which were discussed at the board's May 24 meeting. Other items in Vanderweil's plan will be discussed in increments at upcoming meetings.

With the failure of two overrides at the May 21 special election, residents have shown they are not in favor of increasing their tax bills. But with costs continuing to rise, the town is fighting an uphill fiscal battle.

In light of that, Vanderweil has proposed the town look into economic development which would increase the town's commercial tax base and recommended a committee be formed to help provide input as to how it can be done. He suggested residents Gabriel Gomez, 59 Highland Ave., Peter Brown, 38 Atlantic Ave., and Tom Powers, 25 Powers Lane, to serve on the potential committee, as they have all expressed interest in being involved with this type of planning for the town.

"They're really hot to trot on this," Vanderweil said.

Vanderweil said there has been so much emphasis put on creating housing, that giving a boost to the town's commercial tax base has been overlooked. Vanderweil said Gomez works in venture capital, and he believes the town could be a prime location for startup companies. Brown works in commercial real estate and Powers is a local developer, and together with Gomez, the three have a lot of combined knowledge the town could benefit from.

Selectman Michael Sullivan noted there is only so much land that is available for commercial development, and what there is, is privately owned. Vanderweil said landowners would have to be a part of the planning process, which could include developing new areas or re-vamping those that already exist. He also acknowledged the fact that Cohasset is off the beaten track and it would take good marketing to entice business owners to operate in town.

Zoning is another area which Vanderweil said needs to be thoroughly looked into moving forward. He said although it is really under the purview of the planning board, a committee should be formed to recommend zoning changes throughout town.

"Zoning can be used to do everything. It's a very powerful tool," he said.

Vanderweil said there are a number of goals he would like to see accomplished including:

- Enhancing open space
- Encouraging below average price-point residential expansion in town, affordable by teachers, municipal workers, etc.
- Promoting marine uses and views along Cohasset harbor.
- Implementing "night skies" zoning (standards for exterior lighting).
- Smart growth through residential development, including affordable housing in the downtown area.
- Revisiting the zoning concepts rejected by the 2005 Annual Town Meeting (Demolition Delay, Earth Removal, Large House Site Plan review).
- Addressing other issues in the draft town Master Plan.

Vanderweil said any changes to zoning will have to be voted on by the town.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he has been urged by some residents to ask the board to reinstate the zoning advisory committee. Sullivan said he thought it was a great idea and said potentially lawyers or residents with real estate experience could be on the committee.

The health of the harbor is another area for which Vanderweil said the town must begin implementing measures for improvement.

"People that use the harbor have noticed over the last few years that things are changing," he said, adding many began noticing differences after dredging took place in the mid-1990s.

Vanderweil said there has been a disappearance of mollusks, sea grass, and fish, and a reduced life for galvanized hardware. In addition, the marsh near the yacht club is receding, he said.

Vanderweil said Paul Pattison, 104 Elm St., has seeded the harbor with various shellfish, hopeful he will be able to increase the population, but continually returns to find they have all died off.

"This is a vital part of Cohasset and we need to see if anything can be done to find out why the harbor health seems to be deteriorating," Vanderweil said.

Vanderweil suggested Pattison as well as Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, and Jack Buckley, 272 North Main St., be appointed to a harbor health committee, as all three are currently working on the issue in an informal working group.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would also suggest Jim Drysdale, 4 Cedare Acres Lane, for the committee due to his experience not only as a biochemist, but as an avid fisherman.

Sullivan said the town should potentially hire a professional to do a complete analysis of the harbor at some point in the future, as there are so many different factors that can cause changes to the harbor, and it might take a professional to pinpoint them all.

Vanderweil agreed and said potentially the town could hire a scientist from Woods Hole to do a study.

"I do think it's something we could fix," he said.

At the May 31 meeting of the board, Vanderweil suggested the town work with Vine Associates, the company which is rebuilding the Border Street seawall, to investigate grant opportunities the town could apply for. With funding, the town could be proactive and build a new seawall on Howard Gleason Road which would hopefully protect the marsh from further deterioration.

Vanderweil said the topics he has suggested are just a few to get the ball rolling, so to speak, and he encouraged the other selectmen and residents to come up with more ideas for areas the town should be improving on moving forward. Tom Callahan, 35 Hillside Drive, said he would like to see sewering added to the list.

Callahan said while the Little Harbor area will receive the connections it has always wanted, "There are other people in town." He said a $100,000 study for sewering the rest of the town, as passed at the Annual Town Meeting, is not adequate, "When much more was spent on Little Harbor alone."

The board will be having ongoing discussions about Vanderweil's recommendations and sub-committees will be appointed where necessary. Any residents interested in serving on committees to investigate economic development, zoning, or harbor health should contact the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to Cohasset Town Hall, 41 Highland Avenue.

Local resident honored by Catholic Charities

Neal Finnegan of Cohasset, director of Citizens Financial Capital, Inc., and principal in Clover Capital, LLC and Data Products, US Inc., will be honored at Catholic Charities Spring Celebration on Thursday, June 9, at the Seaport Hotel in Boston. Finnegan is a past chair of Catholic Charities' board of trustees and continues to serve on its board.

"In honoring Neal for his exemplary leadership and commitment to our mission, Catholic Charities seeks to exemplify the values which should animate our ministry every day — respect for the dignity of each person, the quest for greater social and economic justice in our society and a belief that meaning in life flows from service to others," said Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, president of Catholic Charities Archdiocese of Boston.

Finnegan is former chairman of Citizens Bank of Mass. and former director of Citizens Financial Group. He is best known as former chief executive officer of US Trust, a $6 billion banking company headquartered in Boston, which merged into Citizens Financial Group. Finnegan is chairman of the Northeastern University board of trustees. He is also trustee and executive committee member of WGBH-TV Boston public television foundation, vice chairman of the Mass. Multiple Sclerosis Society, director of The Education Resources Institute and a founding charter member and director of the Ireland Chamber of Commerce in the United States, Inc.

Neal Finnegan

"In honoring Neal for his exemplary leadership and commitment to our mission, Catholic Charities seeks to exemplify the values which should animate our ministry every day..."

— Rev. J. Bryan Hehir, president of Catholic Charities Archdiocese of Boston.

The Spring Celebration benefits the programs and services of Catholic Charities. The organization maintains more than 40 locations with services for adoption, behavioral health, child care and after-school programs, adult day health, counseling, refugee and immigration services. In 2004, Catholic Charities served more than 194,000 children, teens, families and seniors in need.

REC NOTES

Summer drama workshop — The Cohasset Dramatic Club will provide Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Theater Program for children ages 6-16. Registration for "Alice in Wonderland" will begin on Monday, June 13, at the Town Hall Auditorium.

This year the cost of the program will be $350, which is all-inclusive T-shirts, a cast party and all other events that pertain to the program. Auditions will be held the week of June 20. Two evening sessions will be held the week of June 27, with the day program beginning the week of July 4. The program will tentatively meet Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 1 to 3:30 p.m. The program will wrap up on the weekend of Aug. 5, with four performances.

Checks can be made payable to The Cohasset Dramatic Club. There are many roles for both boys and girls; however, this program must be limited in number, hence, registering Monday, June 13, may be essential. For more information call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Summer brochures available — The Cohasset Recreation Department announces the 2005 summer brochures are now available at the Town Hall and will be coming home soon via Cohasset schools with grades K-5.

All summer programs with additional recreation information are contained with the summer brochures.

Registrations are now being held for all sport-specific summer camps, with info and forms obtainable on the 1st floor foyer table of the Town Hall.

Additionally, registration for the CHS Cheerleading Clinic, held from Aug. 22, to 24, must be completed by May 27.

Also, registrations for Summer Playground, youth tennis, and drama will be held the week of June 13, at the Town Hall auditorium.

Boot camp fitness training — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4, on Cohasset Common, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges and push-ups.

Dog obedience — The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer throughout the summer, dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School. Classes will be held on Wednesday evenings, on the Town Common.

For both the beginner class and the obedience with distractions classes, dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6 to 7 and 7 to 8 p.m. The other sessions will be held during June, July and August.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five-week, one-hour per-week program.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Dogs need to be 3 months of age and over to quality for training classes and have up to date shots.

END OF AN ERA

Demolition of a brick, Georgian colonial on Whitehead Road has begun, leading the way for a new, shingle style home to be built in its place. The 15-room house was originally built in 1908, and sits on a 2.3 acre island promontory at the mouth of Cohasset Harbor and possess a spectacular 360-degree vista including an unfettered view of Minot Ledge Light. The new owner's plans include razing the 6,590 square foot structure, and replacing it with 13,768 square feet of living space with a new landscape design. H. MacKenzie Freeman, a noted eye specialist, sold the house last June for $7.3 million in a private sale. The name of the new homeowner has not been made public. These photos were taken from Government Island.

Brown sisters sing before Red Sox game at Fenway Park

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LORDY, LOOKS WHO'S 40!

Hello Cohasset! The sun is finally shining and it seems to have an effect on everyone's mood. Let's hope the great weather continues.

I have two very special people to wish a very happy 40th birthday to. Debbie Johnson is celebrating her special day on Tuesday and my husband Bob, celebrates his on Wednesday. As they read this and are both ready to wring my neck, just remember that you are only as old as you think you are(and I am not that old until next year)! Family and friends wish both of you all the best in the upcoming year!

BROWN SISTERS SING AT FENWAY

Wearing festive Boston Red Sox T-shirts for the occasion, King Street residents Sarah, Abby and Audrey Brown sang the National Anthem in front of a full crowd at Fenway Park on Saturday, April 16. The three sisters are well known in Cohasset as they have performed at many town functions including the South Shore Arts Festival on the Common, PSO fund-raisers, baseball fund-raisers and the Appalachia Service Project Festival.

The girls received word the Wednesday morning before the game they had been chosen to kick off the festivities, which is quite an honor at such a young age. Abby is the oldest at 11 years old, while Sarah and Audrey follow close behind at 9 and 7 years old, respectively. That night, the World Series Champions the Boston Red Sox beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 6-2.

PROJECT LINUS

Project Linus at First Parish recently gathered to make blankets for infants, children and teenagers who may need comfort during their stay at hospitals, shelters or foster care. These 53 handmade blankets will be divided in half and distributed between the Children of Chernobyl when they arrive on June 20 for five weeks of treatment at area Boston Hospitals and to Boston Medical Center to comfort teenage summer car accident victims.

Wearing festive Boston Red Sox T-shirts for the occasion, King Street residents Sarah, Abby and Audrey Brown clasp hands as they sing the National Anthem in front of a full crowd at Fenway Park Saturday, April 16.

First Parish has currently donated 132 blankets during its first year as part of the Greater Boston Chapter of the organization that Parents Magazine calls "One of the Ten Children's Charities That Deserve Your Money." Project Linus is named after the blanket toting character from Charles Shultz's comic strip "Peanuts."

The seamstresses, who donated their time and talent to create blankets over the past year are: Sandy Bailey, Pat Baird, Beverly Bielewicz, Alyssa Campbell, Janet Campbell, Cindy Cavanaro, Jacqueline Clark, JoAnne Chittick, Carolyn Contis, Julia Cowen, Margaux Donze, Roella Hobbs, Dee Lehner, Carol Martin, Betsy Millard, Maria Mol, Tatyana Nakashima, Liza Parker, Mary Parker, Susan Shumaker and Annie Spang.

The next effort of Project Linus at First Parish will be to create cotton flannel baby blankets for a hospital in Kenya which will be delivered in September. If you would like to join Project Linus to sew or if you would like to make a donation of fabric or money to purchase fabric, please call: Janet Campbell at 781-383-0665 or email at campcoh@comcast.net

CALLING ALL LOBSTER LOVERS

Lobster lovers will thrill to hear that First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church on Cohasset Common will again be holding its lobster roll sale Friday, June17, Saturday, June 18 and Sunday, June 19, the weekend of the South Shore Arts Center's Festival on the Common.

Rolls will be made fresh and sold all day during the Festival. The price is $12 for an all-meat lobster roll and a bag of potato chips. Committee Co-Chairman Lucia Woods says, "It's the perfect June meal. Have a lobster roll with us and then have a strawberry shortcake dessert across the common at the Second Congregational Church. It's a truly delicious experience!" Pre-orders are encouraged. Co-Chairman Betsy Millard reports that in previous years the supply sold out each day. Mail orders must be sent by June 14 to the Parish House, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025. Checks should be made out to First Parish Cohasset. Telephone orders may be placed by calling Woods at 781-383-1555.

CUB SCOUT SIGNUPS

Cub Scout registration will be held on Tuesday, June 7 from 7-8 p.m. at Deer Hill School. Any boy interested in joining Cub Scouts should plan on registering at this time. Boys entering first grade can join Tiger Cubs, a program for boys and an adult partner. Boys going into second through fifth grade can join Cub Scouts. Any currently registered cub scout needs to reregister for next year at this time also.

SALVE REGINA GRAD

Congratulations to Amy E. Devlin, who received a bachelor of arts degree in communications media from Salve Regina University. Amy is the daughter of Thomas and Helene Devlin and is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

BC HIGH AWARDS

Christopher P. Barber, Andrew J. Flynn and Patrick T. Kelly of Cohasset are 2005 graduates of Boston College High School. They recently won special awards at Senior Class Night, an evening set aside to celebrate and reward its seniors.

Christopher won a High Honors award for his exceptional score in the National Test of Economic Literacy.

Patrick won an Excellence award in Studio Arts II.

Andrew won the JSEA Award for being a person who is open to growth, intellectually competent, religious, loving, and committed to doing justice. He also received an Excellence award in World Religions and in French V College Level, an award for finishing his four years among the top ten in his class, he won a Lawrence E. O'Rourke award in English. He was named a Commended Scholar in the National Merit Scholarship Program, he won a National Honor Society award, a Student Council award, and he was selected by the faculty to deliver the Student Address at Commencement.

Congratulations to all of you young men on these accomplishments!

OLD YEARBOOKS?

Do you have old Cohasset yearbooks in your attic? The Cohasset Historical Society is looking for a few volumes in order to complete their archives. If anyone has a yearbook from 1962, 1980, 1983, 1988, 1998, 2002 or 2003 and would be willing to donate it, the Society would be grateful. The Society actively maintains and collects Cohasset memorabilia so please think of them before discarding your treasures. Call (781) 383-1434 or stop by 106 S. Main St.

That is the news for this week. Make sure to send all of your wonderful news no later than Tuesdays by noon.

'She always wanted to be the highest fundraiser'

Relay team to walk for Shelly Donze

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Shelly Donze spent her life planting seeds. Whether literally in the overflowing garden of her Parker Street home, or figuratively in the hearts of those who knew her, her compassion and nurturing way caused wonderful things to bloom.

For roughly eight years, Donze fought a battle with breast cancer, all the while tending to those around her and spreading her love of life to everyone she met. On March 20, 2005 the first day of spring, Donze passed away at the age of 47, but her spirit will continue to live on through the many people whose lives she touched.

On June 17 and 18, more than 50 people including family members and friends from both Cohasset and Hingham will gather at Cohasset High School for the ninth annual Relay for Life, to walk in her memory. The American Cancer Society's Relay For Life is an overnight benefit event in which team members take turns either running or walking laps, trying to keep one team member on the course at all times. "Springtime for Shelly," the team walking in Donze's memory, has already surpassed its $10,000 goal.

"My family and I are very honored that a team has been formed in memory of Shelly and her ordeal with breast cancer. We are also proud of the extent of participation in this team and how successful the team has already been in exceeding its goals for fund raising. Shelly would have been proud," said Jeff Donze, Shelly's husband.

Shelly's 13-year-old daughter Margaux said she remembers how her mother would participate in the Relay every year, both as a coordinator and as a participant, and how she would always set the same goal for herself.

"She always wanted to be the highest fund-raiser," said Margaux, and it looks like this year, Shelly's wish will come true. At last count, "Springtime for Shelly" had raised $10,390, more than $1,700 of which was raised by Margaux alone, which would surely have made her mother proud.

Shelly was diagnosed with breast cancer in October 1997 and in the spring of 1998, she participated in her first Relay for Life as part of the First Parish Church's team "High Spirits." However, seeing an opportunity before her, she later formed a team of her own called "The Green Roadrunners," which was made up of members from Margaux's Girl Scout Troop, and inspired a whole new generation of young volunteers. As a co-leader for Margaux's troop and as a former teacher, Shelly taught her "Green Roadrunners" about cancer and the importance of the fund-raising they were doing to help aid research.

"Shelly was a third-grade teacher for seven years in Texas and at the American School in England, as well as a special needs tutor for children with learning disabilities. Her work in education with children in some ways transposed to this event. Shelly helped the girls understand how cancer affects so many, and assisted them in learning how they could help by participating in this event," said Jeff.

"Lots of people don't understand how bad it is until someone they know gets it," said Margaux.

But the Relay was not the only volunteer effort Shelly was a part of that had a positive impact on those fighting cancer. She was also co-coordinator of the American Cancer Society Road to Recovery program based in Hingham, which organizes free rides for patients to doctor appointments and radiation treatments. Always willing to lend a helping hand, Jeff said Shelly was busy working with the program right up to her last month.

"She was extremely giving and always took time for people," said Jeff. "We miss her a lot."

When not volunteering, Shelly had a wide variety of other hobbies to keep her busy. She was the President of the Amateur Garden Club of Cohasset, and could often be found outside, most likely with her golden retriever Toby, who accompanied her everywhere she went.

Shelly also loved to play tennis,

Cohasset resident Shelly Donze, shown here in 1998 with daughter Margaux, will be remembered by family and friends during this year's Relay for Life, to be held Friday, June 17 and Saturday, June 18 at Cohasset High School. The annual event is one of the most important fund-raisers of the American Cancer Society.

and her 16-year-old son Chris is following in her footsteps as a standout member of the varsity tennis team at Cohasset High School.

Shelly was also very musical and Jeff said she would play songs for hours on the piano in their living room. She was also a member of a knitting group, which Jeff said was made up mostly of retirees many years older than her. But Shelly enjoyed their pace and approach to life and didn't let age get in the way of forming new relationships. "She was friends with everyone," he said.

But while she enjoyed taking things slow sometimes, there was an adventurous side to Shelly, which actually brought her together with her husband. The two met while windsurfing. Jeff said while there was a part of her that was very sweet, and there was also a part that was very strong and determined. He said sometimes Shelly would have trouble getting back to shore if the seas were too rough and he would go out in a boat to bring her back in. "She'd get mad at me every time," he said with a smile.

"She hated to give up on anything," he said, which is why he believes she was able to fight her battle with cancer for so long. "She's our hero," he said.

Jeff said events like the Relay for Life are extremely important because they provide the means for cancer research. Relay coordinator Harry St. Onge, a three-time cancer survivor, said last year, Cohasset alone raised more than $152,000 with the help of 700 team members spread throughout 37 teams.

"We still don't know why she got cancer," Jeff said, even with the extraordinary team of doctors Shelly had working with her. Jeff added doctors need the tools to find the causes and cures and funding to help that mission is vital. "We've got to protect the next generation," he said. "We've got to protect our children."

This year's Relay for Life will begin at 3 p.m. Friday, June 17 at Cohasset High School. The survivor's lap will be held at roughly 6:30 p.m., with the lighting of the Luminaria and a lap by all at 9 p.m. The Taste of the Relay will be held at roughly 6:40 p.m. after the survivor's lap and will run until 8 p.m. Participants in this year's Taste include Schooners, the Red Parrot, Atlantica, the Red Lion Inn, Salsa's, Starbucks, the Windsor Tea Shop, the Pizza Zone, and Laura Atherton.

For more information or to volunteer, please contact Relay Coordinator Harry St. Onge at (781) 383-9457 or via e-mail at st.onge@comcast.net, or check-in at the registration tent during the Relay. More information on the Relay can also be found on the American Cancer Society Web site at www.cancer.org.

OUR WORLD

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum on 100 Sohier St., Cohasset, is open every Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $3 per child, with an optional donation for adults.

Arts and crafts - The entire month of June is devoted to making arts and crafts from exotic Taiwan. Call 781-383-3198 for more information.

Ukulele Lessons - Jim Armstrong, well known and respected South Shore guitar teacher, will be teaching children to play the ukulele. Unlike the guitar, a ukulele is just the right size for a preschooler and much easier to play. Children will be playing a song after only one lesson to build confidence. Students learn to play and sing classic American and International children's songs and make lasting friendships with fellow musicians by forming and naming their own band. At the final session, a recital will be given for parents. Bands will display their banners and play and sing their favorite songs over real, live microphones. Classes start the week of June 6. Sessions are held Mondays and Tuesdays. Call Jim for times, dates and fees, 781-871-9088.

Summer Spanish camp and toddler programs - Call Jodi for details, 781-871-1267.

Girl Scout signups June 13 at Town Hall

Cohasset Girl Scouts will hold a new scout registration at the town hall on Monday, June 13, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Registration is open to all Cohasset girls entering kindergarten this fall through grade 12.

Registration is $10. Parents interested in serving as troop leaders are encouraged to also sign up at registration. After June 13, registration forms will be available from the Cohasset Recreation Dept.

Girls already in scouting will get registration forms from troop leaders and do not need to register at town hall.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Public comment

One of the benefits of being around Cohasset for a while is that we've accumulated a lot of institutional memory.

In light of recent discussion at selectmen's meetings about the "public comment period" it's a good time to take a little stroll down memory lane.

When "yours truly" started covering Cohasset back in 1992, there was no official public comment period – just a mention at the end of selectmen's meetings if there were any questions or comments from the public or the press.

These were the days before the Town Manager form of government and board meetings ran until 11 p.m. and later as a matter of course. We sat there week in and week out watching members of the public, who had a pressing issue, wait patiently and then finally give up and leave before they ever had a chance to speak.

It didn't appear to us that was the right way to treat citizens. And it certainly discouraged people from coming to meetings with a concern or comment.

So we suggested in an editorial – and the selectmen later adopted the practice – of following what Scituate selectmen have done, which is to set aside about 10 minutes shortly after the start of their meeting for public comment.

However, with that being said, the public comment period was never meant to provide an entry point for angry citizens to come and hijack a meeting. It is supposed to provide an opportunity to raise an issue which would then be put on a future agenda if it couldn't be handled in the 10 or 15 minutes provided.

Of course, there will – and should – always be exceptions. There are times when the citizenry is riled up and time is of the essence, so they come to selectmen to voice their concerns.

However, selectmen for the most part should be able to set a meeting agenda with realistic time parameters so they can accomplish the business at hand. We think this is where newly elected Selectman Gary Vanderweil is coming from.

No selectman, who sincerely wants to serve those who elected him, would seek to stifle the public's right to speak and redress its government.

But, no elected official wants to sit there and be subject to personal attacks or see the meeting's agenda blow up week after week, while the audience conducts a gripe session.

There's a happy medium here that should be able to satisfy ordinary citizens while not letting them run away with the meeting. We think returning to the 10- or 15-minute rule would be a good step. If the matter can't be handled in that time frame, then put in on the next agenda.

We implore selectmen not to schedule public comment at the end of the meeting. That would serve as a way to discourage input and we hope the board does not want to see that happen.

Another form of public comment occurs after a board member has made a motion and it's been seconded. Then the chairman usually asks for comment from the rest of selectmen and others in attendance before the vote is taken. The audience should be allowed to comment and use its powers of persuasion but should do so in a concise enough manner so that the matter doesn't drag on endlessly.

The chairman needs to wield the gavel and call for the vote when he feels the issue has been sufficiently aired. If not, then table the issue until a subsequent meeting.

Public comment is a balancing act, of sorts, but an important one. We think the current board is up to the task of encouraging "transparency" and citizen input, while at the same time being able to govern effectively.

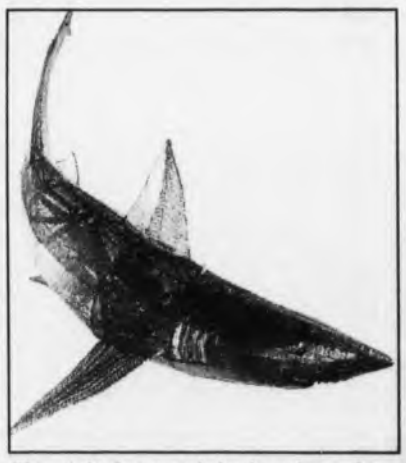
LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Has anyone seen our shark?

TO THE EDITOR:



We are an elderly couple, having lived on the shore of a South Shore town for 40-some years. For some time we have been collecting sculpture in a modest way and having been associated with a graphics workshop and an art gallery (Impressions) we came to know a number of artists and their work. One of the more spectacular pieces as "tree Shark" by Kitty Wales, a well-known metal-working artist and teacher at U Mass Boston. In her work she produces series of wild and feral animal studies and in the process goes to unusual lengths in the name of veracity, such as in this instance donning a wet suit and sketching on a water proof pad the swimming motions of sharks in their native habitat. A troika of three of her tree-dwelling sharks can be seen at De Cordova Museum and Sculpture Park in Lincoln.

Our particular shark was made out of expanded metal, the fenestrated kind of sheet steel that yard men use for their trailers. Just to show how tough these critters are, the artist placed in the belly an old skill saw blade and several coiled band saw blades. The eight-foot shark was suspended above the sea wall at the edge of the ocean by two stainless steel cables "strong enough to hold the Queen Mary", this from two mature oak trees. Suddenly after swimming happily in the tree tops for several years, our shark disappeared.

We assumed that it had been brought down in a winter storm. The experienced tree man who had installed the shark thought this most unlikely and on further examination found sharp instead of frayed ends of the cut cable. He startled us with the pronouncement of, "our shark was stolen". The most likely explanation was that this was simply an elaborate prank comparable to the MIT student productions such as the mounting of a Ford 'fliver" on the stately MITdome.

In the interim we decided to the South Shore Conservatory a sculpture garden designed and executed by Ron Rudnicki, a well-known sculptor and landscape architect. The sculpture involved consisted of six pieces from our yard and the seventh in absentia, namely our "Tee Shark". I had always believed that she would some day swim back to us. And seven is a very magical number.

There if the clever and energetic perpetrators of this unusual heist will return the shark, no questions will be asked. Said shark may be left on the Cohasset Common next to the flag pole. It will swim again in the treetops, but this time in the patch of woods beside the Stackenberg Garden the South Shore Conservatory. This is a far happier fate than moldering in the dark in someone's barn, where I suspect it now is.

This eight-foot metal shark sculpture has disappeared.

Some perspective on the '50-50'

COMMENTARY

GARY VANDERWEIL

In light of the failure of "50/50" cost splitting for Little Harbor in the May 21st debt exclusion vote, I would like to review some history, and provide an idea of the costs that will now be involved.

When the original North Cohasset project was first brought to town meeting for funding, the article was written and presented as being 100 percent paid for by the users.

On the floor of town meeting, many North Cohasset residents objected to this for two reasons. One reason was that the North Cohasset users were basically being forced to connect to sewer because of litigation between Cohasset and the state over our discharge permit to Cohasset Harbor, as well as threatened litigation between Cohasset and Hull (to clean up Straits Pond, an "Area of Critical Environmental Concern"). Since they were being forced to connect to sewer to solve what was perceived as an overall town problem, these residents felt that the town should contribute to the cost. The second reason was the feeling that whenever a sewer was installed by any town, it should be an overall municipal project.

In addition to the comments by residents of North Cohasset, many residents of Central Cohasset spoke up, saying that they agreed with 50/50 for North, and they hoped that in a year or two when the expansion of the Central District was brought forth for funding, that the North Cohasset residents would support them, for the same reasons.

These arguments prevailed at town meeting, and a 50/50 cost split for North Cohasset was agreed upon. Two years later, town meeting approved the same split for the expanded Central District.

Both the above decisions were also approved by follow-on 50/50 Proposition 2-1/2 exclusion votes.

The present expansion of sewering is for the Little Harbor – Atlantic Avenue District and the Jerusalem Road – Deep Run District. Because of the failure of the debt exclusion vote, sewer users in these districts will pay relatively more than those in the North and Central Districts.

The cost implication is roughly as follows: Work on private property is thought to average about $17,000 per house. Clearly, some houses with large setbacks and copious ledge will pay significantly more and others will pay significantly less. Since this is work on private property, it is not subject to 50/50, and the failed override will have no cost impact.

The public part of the project is for the infrastructure work and is estimated at $27,400 per house. Without the 50/50 split, the users will pay all of this, instead of only half. Assuming a town betterment is issued to the house owners for 20 years at 2.5 percent, annual cost to the users will be $1,760. Had the 50/50 passed, annual user cost would have been $880.

It is historically interesting to note that some of the residents in North and Central got a double-whammy of a good deal. Not only did they get 50/50 on the infrastructure, but those users with grinder pumps also received 50/50 on the private property work. The Sewer Commission at the time came up with what it thought was the creative idea of defining the municipal project to incorporate the grinder pump service connections on private property. This allowed state equivalency grants to be applied to work on private property, in essence providing a discount for the private construction work. Then, when 50/50 was decided upon, the 50% town support was applied to the entire municipal project, work on private property and all.

I have to say that it was difficult at the time to make the residents of North and Central realize what a good deal this creative arrangement was for them. The sewer commission received an inordinate amount of criticism during the design phase for doing this, and then when the bids came in higher than the estimate (largely a result of the wariness of municipal contractors to work on private property) more criticism was heaped on it. And then, during construction, previously unrecognized special difficulties occurred on a lot of the private property work, and a third round of criticism was heaped on it. (Then, as now, Sewer Commissioners needed to have thick skins!) Also, construction extras were necessitated by these special conditions, which helped exhaust the contingency budget, and, ultimately, after Central was completed, necessitated a special town meeting to approve 4 percent additional funding.

As a result of all the difficulties with doing a public project encompassing private property, the Sewer Commission at the time decided that in the future, it would do only the street infrastructure work under the public process, and that the household connections would be the responsibility of the individual homeowners.

The threat we should know more about

COMMENTARY

GABRIEL GOMEZ

Sarah Lunde…Jessica Lunsford…Jetseta Gage…Dru Sjodin... We are by now all too familiar with the stories of these innocent lives ended abruptly, prematurely, and brutally by previously convicted sex offenders. As parents we feel the pain of their loved ones. While our hearts reach out to them for their loss, we simultaneously feel a tightening in our chests as we wonder if our own children could be at risk.

Should we be worried, living in such an idyllic and community-oriented town such as Cohasset? I am worried, and all of the horrible cases in the news this year have heightened my awareness. The fact is that none of the parents of the children in the news thought that it could happen to them. Many of them were in small towns, places where they felt that parents were looking out for each other's children. Many of these were places like Cohasset where you would recognize everyone's faces even if you didn't know their names.

A search of the towns near Cohasset in the Massachusetts Sex Offender Registry gives me more concrete reason to worry. The search returns 223 "high risk" sex offenders living or working in the nearby towns of Scituate, Hull, Weymouth, Hingham, Norwell, Quincy, Marshfield and Pembroke, including one in Cohasset. The scary part is what "high risk" means. No one knows exactly how often convicted sex offenders strike again after they've served their prison time — but most studies put the number pretty high — one I found said that 20 percent of child molesters will be charged with a new sex offense within 5 years and 52 percent will be charged within 20 years. For me, those numbers mean that the above mentioned towns could expect 45 children to be sexually assaulted within the next 5 years and 116 children in the next 20 years. As a result, I'm very concerned about the 223 registered offenders living and working in and just outside of Cohasset.

The search returns 223 "high risk" sex offenders living or working in the nearby towns of Scituate, Hull, Weymouth, Hingham, Norwell, Quincy, Marshfield and Pembroke, including one in Cohasset.

Given the risk, what's being done to protect our children, and is it enough? As we all know well, we have a wonderful police force of caring individuals committed to safeguarding our community. Further, our teachers and other public servants are certainly watching out for us. Megan's Law in Massachusetts requires sex offenders to register with the state, providing information including an address and a photograph. State Senator Scott Brown is working on making that law more restrictive and preventing sex offenders from living near schools and child-care facilities. Yet I'm worried that the laws aren't enough, because they've been in place for several years now and yet despite the specific information available on these individuals, as a parent I couldn't tell you more than a vague, stereotyped description of who specifically we need to protect our children from.

I'm writing to propose that as a community we come together to form a group of concerned citizens dedicated to better informing ourselves on this pressing threat to our children and making it easier for others to do the same. Megan's Law in Massachusetts says that every citizen has the right to specific information on sex offenders, including photographs, so long as he or she uses the information to protect his or her own children.

It seems to me that armed with this information we'd have a fighting chance at keeping our children out of harm's way. If we were aware of names, addresses, occupations and images, we'd actually know if a threat had entered our backyard. I'd like to propose that we found a citizens' group that produces a newsletter using the specific public information available. We could start by distributing a newsletter in town, then follow up with an internet site with this specific information on individuals. We would be centralizing the disparate information currently available from many public sources and make it easier for parents to become aware of potential threats that are nearby. Perhaps we can call this group PROTECT (Parents Reaching Out To Eliminate Child-related Threats). Please contact me if you'd like to join this group of concerned citizens. I look forward to hearing your thoughts and ideas.

Nudity, from camp to resort

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Some 40-odd years ago, when America was just coming to terms with a two-piece bathing suit called the bikini, the fellow who ran our shop came up with an idea for a series of stories — ordinary people doing extraordinary things.

Hugh was going to visit a nudist camp and write about what it was like to take off one's clothes in public. Dave was to visit Orange, Mass., and describe what it felt like to jump out of an airplane, with a parachute, of course. And I was to visit Ingemar Johansson's training camp and spar a couple of rounds with the heavyweight champ himself.

Arriving at the camp, he dutifully removed his clothing only to find that he was more bashful than he thought.

Only Hugh got to fulfill his assignment. When a bigger boss than the one in our shop heard that one of his writers was going to jump out of an airplane, he put his landing gear down quickly. And me . . . well, the fellows who were training Johansson to fight Floyd Patterson are probably still laughing.

Hugh's story of his weekend in the nudist camp was a big hit and drew a lot of fan mail, most of which came in plain brown envelopes, but I can remember only one incident that never appeared in the story. Hugh told it to us himself, keeping it out of print lest it arouse the prurient interests of his readers.

Arriving at the camp, he dutifully removed his clothing only to find that he was more bashful than he thought. So he lay down in the grass and placed a copy of the New York Herald Tribune strategically over his plump frame. He was admiring the sights around him when a passing young lady, naked as a jaybird, looked down on him and asked, "May I see your sports section?"

Well, maybe you had to be there . . .

I bring this up to show how standards have changed in the 40-odd years since we had to buy one of those magazines they keep behind the counter just to find that place at the end of the dirt road in the wilds of Pennsylvania where Hugh was urged not to dress for dinner and didn't need National Geographic and Swedish photography magazines to study anatomy.

All one needs to do now is place a call to an agency like Bare Necessities Tour & Travel of Austin, Texas, to sign on for a nude summer cruise of European waters for $2,295 or $6,595, depending on one's need for comfort. And don't tell the agency you want a nudist camp. They're nudist resorts now.

"The bar has been raised," Nancy Tiemann, owner of Bare Necessities, told USA Today. "(Nudist camps) have come from being five miles down a dirt road behind a junkyard fence to really upscale resorts that are a far cry from that."

Instead of the traditional volleyball, Desert Shadows Inn Resort & Villas in Palm Springs, Calif. ($200 a night), offers nude hot air ballooning, moonlight hikes in the nude and bus tours in which you can take off your clothes and drive by the homes of the stars, for reasons that escape me.

You can even buy a home in a nudist resort. They start at $400,000 at the Caliente Resort & Spa near Tampa, Fla., and at $250,000 at nearby Paradise Lakes Resort, which is still under construction and has been sold out already.

And not a Herald Tribune in sight to hide the sports section.

HEALTH NOTES

Ticks bites can cause disease

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Now that the weather's getting better, hopefully, we'll spend more time outdoors, so it's important to remember how to prevent tick bites. We tend to think of Lyme disease as the principal disease we can obtain from ticks. Unfortunately, however, there are over a dozen other diseases we can contract from ticks. Some species and life stages of ticks are so small that they can be difficult to see, but all hungrily look for animals and, sometimes people, to bite.

We find ticks in various environments, often in or near wooded areas; when walking through infested areas or by brushing up against infested vegetation (such as leaf litter or shrubs). Ticks also feed on mammals and birds, which help maintain ticks and the pathogens they carry. Fortunately, there are some simple steps you can take to protect yourself and your family:

Protect yourself from tick bites by using a few simple precautions.

• Avoid tick-infested areas. Many local health departments, parks, and cooperative extension services have information about the areas most infested with ticks. If you are in a tick-infested area, walk in the center of the trails to avoid contact with vegetation.

• Wear light-colored clothing, which allows you to see ticks that are crawling on your clothing. Tuck your pant legs into your socks so that ticks cannot crawl up inside of your pant legs. Some ticks can crawl down into shoes and are small enough to crawl through most socks. When traveling in areas with lone star ticks (which are associated with Southern tick-associated rash illness, ehrlichiosis, and Rocky Mountain spotted fever) you should examine your feet and ankles to ensure that ticks are not attached.

• Use chemical repellent with DEET or permethrin and wear protective clothing. Repellents containing permethrin can be sprayed on boots and clothing. When used in this manner, the repellent will be protective for several days. Repellents containing DEET (N, N-diethyl-m-toluamide) can be applied to the skin, but they protect for only a few hours before reapplication is necessary. Parents should apply this product to their children, avoiding the hands, eyes, and mouth. Contact the Board of Health concerning the use of Deet with children.

• Perform daily tick checks Check your body for ticks after being outdoors, even in your own yard. Conduct a body check upon return from potentially tick-infested areas by searching your entire body for ticks. Use a hand-held or full-length mirror to view all parts of your body and remove any tick you find. Check these parts of your body and your child's body for ticks: under the arms; in and around the ears; inside navel; back of the knees; in and around the hair; between the legs; around the waist.

• Check your children for ticks, especially in the hair, when returning from potentially tick-infested areas.

• Check your clothing and pets for ticks. Ticks may be carried into the house on clothing and pets. Both should be examined carefully, and any ticks that are found should be removed. Placing clothes into a dryer on high heat effectively kills ticks. See the "Prevent ticks on animals" section of this page for more information.

• Safely remove ticks. Use fine-tipped tweezers and protect bare hands with a tissue or gloves to avoid contact with tick fluids. Grab the tick close to the skin. Do not twist or jerk the tick, as this may cause the mouthparts to break off and remain in the skin. Gently pull straight up until all parts of the tick are removed. After removing the tick, wash your hands with soap and water (or waterless alcohol-based hand rubs when soap is not available). Clean the tick bite with an antiseptic such as iodine scrub, rubbing alcohol, or water containing detergents.

• Prevent ticks on animals Prevent family pets from bringing ticks into the home. Maintain your family pet under a veterinarian's care. Two of the ways to get rid of ticks on dogs and cats are putting on tick medicine or using a tick collar. Be sure to use these products according to the package instructions. For more information on animals and health, contact the Board of Health.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Survivor to speak at 'Hotel Rwanda' showing

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee announces it will show "Hotel Rwanda" at its next Friday Movie Night on June 10 at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Admission is free to the public and doors open at 6:30 p.m.

Ten years ago, some of the worst atrocities in the history of mankind took place in the country of Rwanda — and in an era of high-speed communication and round the clock news, the events went almost unnoticed by the rest of the world. In only three months, one million people were brutally murdered.

Hotel Rwanda is the story of true-life story of Paul Rusesabagina and his amazing, heroic struggle. Don Cheadle plays Paul Rusesabagina magnificently as a hotel manager who housed over 1,000 Tutsis in the Hotel Des Milles Collines. When all hell broke loose on Rwandan soil, he was there to shelter people in need. In the face of unspeakable events, inspired by his love for his family, an ordinary man summons extraordinary courage to save the lives of over a thousand helpless refugees.

Prior to the film, there will be a presentation by Sister Anna Beata Murekatete. Sister Anna is a survivor of the 1994 genocide and member of Order of The Benebikira Sisters. Previously, she was the Headmistress of Saint Bernadette Secondary School (grades 6-12) in Rwanda's Butare Province. After 1994, her school had 800 boarding students — half of whom were orphans from the genocide. She cared for these students while at the same time taking care of her extended family of 15 nieces and nephews who were also left orphaned. She was a co-founder of Urunana (hand in hand) a human rights club for students which received an UNESCO peace pillar award.

Don Cheadle and Sophie Okonedo in Hotel Rwanda.

In 2002, Sister Anna was sponsored by the Paraclete Center of South Boston to come to the United States for a sabbatical. The Paraclete Center provides unique and enriching after-school programming to South Boston adolescents in the middle school years. She was able to return to Boston to pursue graduate work, having received a scholarship for tuition from Boston College. She was joined by her colleague, Sr. Augusta, in January who is learning English. They are both assisting the Paraclete Center in its work to build a leadership school for girls in Nyamata, Rwanda.

If you would like more information about the event, call Democratic Town Committee Chair Agnes McCann at 781-383-0222 or visit their website at www.cohassetdems.org.

Democrats meet Saturday

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will hold its June meeting this Saturday, June 4 at 9 a.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Andrea Silbert, Democratic candidate for Lt. Governor will be speaking and all are invited. For more information, please visit us on the web at www.cohassetdems.org.

Opinion sought for selectmen's comment period

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he would like to see the public comment portion of the selectmen's meetings moved to the end of the agenda, rather than the beginning where it is currently listed. He said that way, if the comments are going to be lengthy, they can be put on the agenda for the next meeting.

This second proposed change was more welcome than his first, which was announced at the May 3 meeting of the board. Vanderweil had suggested scheduling a public comment period only once a month, which did not go over well with members of the board or the public who were in attendance that night.

However, Selectman Rob Spofford said while he understands Vanderweil's point, he would like to hear the public's view on the matter.

"I would like to see it (public comment period) managed, but I think it's onerous to make the public wait," until the end of the meeting, Spofford said.

Selectman Chairman Fred Koed said he would like to postpone a vote on the matter until Selectman Michael Sullivan returns to allow all five board members to have a say. In addition, the board will be accepting feedback from residents on the matter before making a decision. Those wishing to voice their opinion may call the selectmen's office at 781-383-4105 or make a submission in writing to 41 Highland Ave.

Gluten-free diet subject of wellness seminar

All The Best health food store has announced it will be offering periodic in-house seminars on health and wellness. The first of the seminar series, "Wheat and Gluten-Free 101" takes place at All The Best, One Pleasant St., Cohasset, Thursday, June 16, at 6:45 p.m.

Guest speaker is Melinda Dennis, MS, RD, LDN, who will offer instruction in how to eat safely on the gluten-free special diet, which she follows herself. Dennis is a registered dietitian of the Nutrition Dept. at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston and nutrition coordinator of their newly established Celiac Center. Diagnosed with celiac disease over 14 years ago, she is the founder, former chairperson and newsletter editor, and current nutrition advisor of the Healthy Villi, a Boston-based celiac support group. She is also founder and owner of Delete theWheat, a nutrition consulting service offering one-on-one gluten-free shopping tours and home visits for those following the gluten-free diet.

The seminar is recommended for people with newly diagnosed celiac disease or those needing a review. It will focus on hidden gluten, label reading and cross-contamination, while keeping key nutrients in mind. Participants will receive a 10-page gluten-free diet handout, hidden gluten guide, resources for websites, cookbooks and support groups, and gluten-free food samples.

There is a $5 fee that includes the lecture, a question and answer period, handouts, samples of wheat and gluten free foods, and a $5 coupon redeemable at All The Best.

Psychologist to speak on youth violence

Clinical psychologist Dr. David Shumaker will discuss "What Parents Need to Know About Youth Violence," at 7 p.m, June 12, in the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist of Cohasset. Dr. Shumaker's remarks will focus on the risk factors and underlying dynamics of youth violence. There will be ample time for questions and commentary. The program will conclude by 9 p.m.. It is an evening open to the public and sponsored by First Parish Unitarian Universalist, located on Cohasset Common. The purpose is to help prevent youth initiated violence through parent awareness.

The purpose is to help prevent youth initiated violence through parent awareness.

A licensed psychologist in Massachusetts, Dr. Shumaker received his Ph.D. in clinical-community psychology from the University of South Carolina. He has done post-doctoral training in pediatric forensic psychology in Massachusetts General Hospital's Children and the Law Program. His publications include "Children Who Murder: A Psychological Perspective," which he co-authored. Dr. Shumaker is currently on the staff at Massachusetts General Hospital, teaches at Harvard Medical School, and is a Lecturer on Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Locally he maintains a part-time private practice with Mar Vista Psychological Associates in Cohasset. A graduate of Cohasset High School and Harvard College, Dr. Shumaker lives in Cohasset with his wife, Tricia, and their two young sons.

This week in COHASSET

FAA meetings

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said Tuesday he would be attending meetings with the Federal Aviation Administration both Wednesday and Friday of this week to discuss the Logan Airport flight paths over Cohasset. Dormitzer and many others would like to see planes use more of the space over the ocean when taking off or returning to the airport, therefore sparing coastal towns from the noise. Friday's meeting will be with the Congressional Delegation.

Brennan on MBTA board

After 40 years representing Cohasset on the MBTA Advisory Board, Louis Eaton of Beach Street resigned from his post in April, leaving an opening on the board. Hearing of the vacancy, Mendel Road resident and Special Assistant to the Town Manager for Greenbush Engineering Mark Brennan wrote a letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin stating his interest in taking over in that role.

"While no one can replace Lou, I'm asking that you consider me to backfill this voluntary position for the town. With my current and prior involvement with the MTBA I believe I could be very useful in this position and would not let it interfere with my current duties," Brennan wrote.

Griffin recommended to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday that it appoint Brennan to the committee.

"I think we've given due notice," for the position, he said, adding he thinks Brennan will be a good fit.

The board agreed and unanimously voted to appoint Brennan..

Library maintenance

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he was concerned to hear there is not enough money in the maintenance budget to make some repairs at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. He asked the board if it would request a periodic maintenance report from Town Facilities Manager Brian Adams which will outline where maintenance items are being completed and how much they cost. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would work with Adams on the issue.

Legal fees meeting regarding Avalon

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said because the water department is currently in litigation with developers from AvalonBay, he would like to have a meeting with the department to discuss how much money is being spent in legal fees, how the case is going, and how much longer the department expects the issue will be going on. Vanderweil said the matter will have to be discussed in executive session.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he was glad to hear Vanderweil's interest because he had asked for the same information more than two months ago before Vanderweil was elected to the board, but members of the department have not yet come in to have the meeting. He said he hopes their combined interest will help push the scheduling of the meeting along.

Softball team congratulations

Selectman Rob Spofford publicly congratulated the Cohasset High School softball team for making it to the State Tournament. Needing at least 10 wins to make the tournament, the girls won seven games in a row to come back from a 4-9 record. This is the first time in 16 years the softball team has made it to a tournament and Spofford said he couldn't be more proud of the girls, especially his daughter Virginia.

Sunrise seniors have one thing in common.
They're all different.

At Sunrise, we celebrate all of our residents for the unique individuals they are. We believe no two people are alike, so the care and services we provide should never be exactly the same.

This approach helps seniors live the life they want to live, from beautifully appointed living spaces to personalized assistance and care. We call it resident-centered senior living, and it begins the day a senior walks into our community.

Visit or call Sunrise Assisted Living, and discover how we're different. In Cohasset, we offer Assisted Living and Alzheimer's Care.

Back to the basics

On the eve of what he hopes is a long stay in the Div. 3 state tournament, Cohasset boys lacrosse coach Stu Curran said Wednesday his team's postseason success will be determined by how it fares in the fundamental aspects of the game.

"At the high school level, it's all about good ball possession, good ball movement, and getting the ball to your offensive players," Curran said. "If we play sensible with the ball and keep people from fast-breaking against us, we're in good shape."

Of course, by the time you read this, this could all be a moot point. The Skippers, who earned the 6th seed in this year's tournament, hosted Wayland yesterday in what figured to be an exciting first round encounter.

If Cohasset is still alive today, they take on the winner of yesterday's Austin Prep/Canton matchup. If it's Austin Prep, the game would be on the road; Canton would have to travel to Cohasset.

The Skippers will be bolstered by the return of two defensemen who missed a good part of the season, sophomores Jeff Brown and Conor Holway. Brown was considered one of the best freshmen lacrosse players in the area last year, and is a big addition to a solid defensive core led by senior Crandon Leahy, whom Curran called his team's "train wreck."

"Crandon is just a very large

An early ending for lady laxers

Wednesday's girls lacrosse tournament game between Cohasset and Hingham was shaping up to be a classic.

When Cohasset senior Lauren Rizzotti scored 50 seconds into the second half to tie the score at 5-5, it looked as though this first round encounter would go right down to the wire.

But then Margot Spatola started doing Margot Spatola things; game-set-match, Hingham.

After Rizzotti's goal, the visiting Harborwomen went on a 5-0 run over the next seven minutes, with Spatola scoring three of the five and generally wreaking havoc with her attacking runs from midfield. When it was all said and done, Hingham boarded their bus with a 14-7 win.

After the game, Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney offered a clear assessment of how what had been a tied game turned into a rather one-sided affair.

Cohasset's Lindsay Durkin (pictured lining up a shot on goal against Marshfield last month) notched two goals and an assist in Wednesday's first round tournament game against Hingham, but it wasn't enough to prevent the end of the Skippers' season.

CHS softball wins 7 in a row to qualify for tournament

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

This has got to be one of Cohasset's all- time turnaround sports stories.

Only two weeks ago, the softball team wallowed around the league's bottom tier with an ugly 4-9 record.

Then the rains came, the clouds parted and the Lady Skippers went into an absolute field frenzy. Can you believe winning their next seven games in a row?

What do they have to show for their efforts? An invitation to the Div. 3 state tournament - which started with yesterday's game at Archbishop Williams, played after the Mariner went to press - and six more victories than they earned in 2004.

Let's put this '05 season in perspective. Three years ago, this team did not exist. Who would have imagined the varsity softballers ending up in such short time qualifying for the tournament?

No one could be happier than head coach Deborah Bostwick. What does she make of the stunning rebound?

"These girls really poured their hearts and souls into this season," she said. "I'm so proud of them for sticking with it. This is a real accomplishment."

CYBSA softball coordinator Rob Spofford showed enthusiasm about the girls' accomplishments.

"When we put together this team three years ago, this is

Boys tennis needs a turnaround

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys tennis team kicked off their postseason campaign yesterday with a home match against Martha's Vineyard (played after the Mariner went to press).

If they won, the 10th-seeded Skippers are scheduled to play again today against the winner of yesterday's Chatham-Walpole match.

Chatham, the Div. 2 South 7-seed with a 15-4 regular season record, would host Cohasset. Walpole would have to make the trek to Skipperville if they were victorious.

No matter how it shakes out, Cohasset will be hoping to play like they did last Thursday against Sacred Heart, and not how they did the next day in their season finale loss to Scituate.

Cohasset got four strong performances in their 4-1 win over SH, with all wins coming in straight sets. Junior Nils Sceery continued his superlative season at first singles, winning 0 and 1. Sceery is 18-2 on the season, with his only two losses coming to undefeated Ryan Sweney of Norwell.

Blain Morin picked up a straight-set win at third singles, as did the doubles teams of Chris Donze/Chris Pescatore and Owen Stevenson/Josh Dupre.

The picture was not quite as bright for the Skippers against Scituate. The Sailors were 7-8 heading into the match, needing a win in what was also their season finale just to qualify for the state tournament. Cohasset had to be considered strong favorites going in, but it did not play out that way.

Sceery earned the lone point in his team's 4-1 loss, defeating Scituate's Brad Anderson 6-1, 6-2. The rest of the Cohasset team had troubles with Scituate's new-look lineup; Morin and Stevenson/Dupre went to three sets, but lost.

Cohasset coach Kent Parrot wasn't sure what to make of his team's performance.

"They just seem to have ups and downs," he said. "It seems like they play well against the tough teams, and then not play well against other teams."

Whereas the singles players were the strength of the team through most of the season, Parrot said they have not been as consistent down the stretch. His doubles teams, though, have been pretty strong at the same time.

Parrot has been particularly impressed with the Donze/Pescatore duo.

"They had a great win over a Hingham team [two weeks ago] that is arguably the best team on the South Shore, other than Duxbury," Parrot said.

Cohasset players and fans are hoping it all comes together this week.

In Lou of a dear friend

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN

Lou Molinari was a wonderful man, and a wonderfully simple man.

No need for qualifiers or further explanations. Lou would have blanched at that regardless of who the subject was, more so if it were him. That wasn't his style.

Say what's on your mind and move on. That was Lou's lesson in life as well as journalism.

It was just one of the things I learned from my friend, this wonderfully simple man who rendered this world a bit less wonderful by leaving it last Friday.

Lou, at the age of 70, was 29 years my senior. At my age, he had been an assistant sports editor for the Patriot Ledger, back when the Patriot Ledger had a sports section to be proud of.

"I liked writing about sports, but maybe I wasn't real good at that so they asked me to start laying out pages," my unwaveringly unassuming friend once told me, the ever-present grin on his face. "I guess I was a little better at doing that because they let me do it for a while."

Technically speaking, I was Lou's boss. Literally speaking, he taught me so much more than I taught him.

In point of fact, the only things of value I ever "taught" Lou were related to the computer. When he finally relented and switched from typewriter to PC a little more than four years ago, there were a few things he needed to be shown, beginning with how to turn it on. But Lou got through it, laughing every time his lack of technical understanding got in the way.

Lou left his position as assistant sports editor at the Ledger many years ago to open a decorator business in Cohasset. When that venture went under, he seized a chance to return to his first love: covering school boy sports.

Up until a few months ago, Lou was writing upward of a dozen stories per week between the CNC and Bridgewater weekly papers. He certainly wasn't doing it with any hope of getting rich.

Though he probably could have used a little more money, he never complained about it. Two or three times over my five-year tenure as CNC sports editor, Lou asked me if there was going to be any money added to the stringer budget.

My reply always started in the form of an apology. Indeed, I felt badly we could not give someone with his resume, compassion, level of reliability and unique voice a little bump every now and then.

I don't think I ever got through the apology, however.

"Don't worry about it," he'd cut me off. He'd always add things such as: "I'm not going anywhere. I know you're doing the best you can with what you have. I appreciate the work. I have fun doing it."

All vintage Lou. Life was too short to get in a squabble.

That's just one of the many reasons I enjoyed talking to Lou so much. Whether he stopped by the office or we hooked up on the phone, our conversations were seldom short or business only.

Lou had such a great perspective on things. He seemed to have two simple rules in his life: If it makes you happy, do it. If you're not happy, keep your mouth shut.

One of the things that seemed to make Lou happy was making friends. Let's just say Lou had lots of reasons to be happy.

Lou was humble man. After he lost his business in Cohasset, he worked as a delivery man well into 60s, and kept going even after a couple of scares with his heart.

what we envisioned," he said. "These kids have given it their all, and have really made us proud."

The turning point came last Friday when weather forced Cohasset to host a doubleheader. The Lady Skippers lined up their opponents like bowling pins.

Holbrook stepped onto Freedom Field at 2:30. The Lady Skippers knew this was their game to win. Christina Pinkus hurled 11 strikeouts to freeze up the opponents' bats.

Emily Nash, Katie James, Anna Haggerty, Virginia Spofford, and Laura Campedelli all produced on the offensive end. Cohasset wasted no time in this one, earning a 12-3 victory. But they weren't ready to rest on their laurels.

Before the Skippers could catch their breath, Nantucket stepped up to the plate. Fatigue did not faze Cohasset even after the exhausting battle against Holbrook.

Pinkus pitched another solid game, this time with 13 strikeouts. Her arm must have ached after this game.

Haggerty, Campedelli, and Erin Liddell showed great intensity in the field and gave Pinkus the defensive backing she needed to get the job done.

Nash, Spofford, Haggerty, and Alida Tangherlini all pounded in runs for the Skippers. This team effort yielded a 9-0 Skipper shutout. Quite a contrast to Cohasset's lopsided loss earlier in the season to the Whalers.

"This win felt really good," said Spofford. "We kept up our stamina and hammered away. This was a win we really needed, and we played like we wanted it."

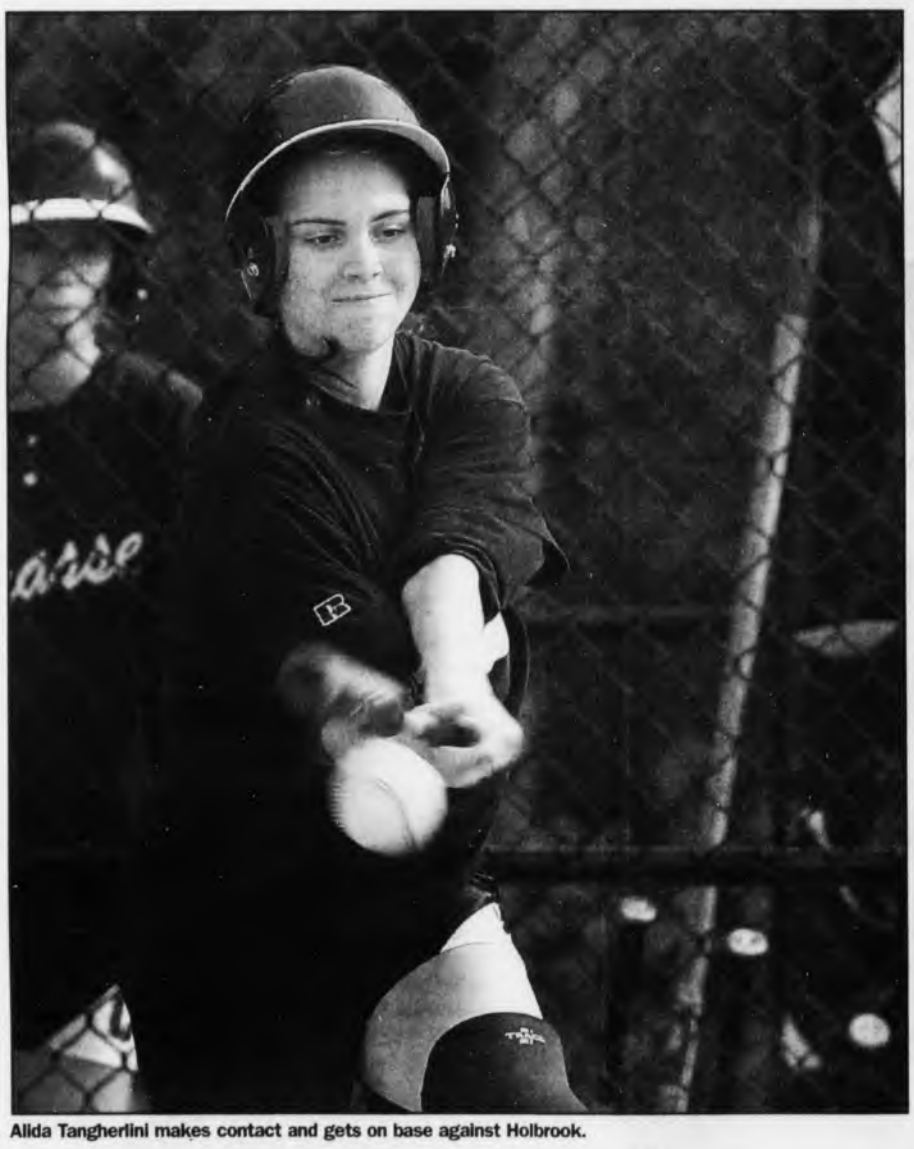
As the sun finally poked through the clouds on Sunday afternoon, the Lady Skippers kept the momentum going on the home front. Cohasset threw the party and Sacred Heart provided the excitement.

It was now or never for their tourney invite. A combination of defense and some tricky base running earned Cohasset a 5-1 victory, their 10th win, and a coveted spot in the state tourney!

Pinkus threw another outstanding game, striking out 14. The right side of the field - namely Melissa Crowley-Buck, Liddell, and Spofford - got most of the action. To no one's surprise, they handled the plays very well.

With the invitation to the postseason a done deal, the girls ran down to Mashpee for the regular season finale. The Falcons caved in by a 20-8 score.

Pinkus, Spofford, and James split this game on the mound, each doing her part to ground the Falcons. Haggerty, Spofford, Pinkus, Liddell, and Crowley-Buck generated runs at the plate.



"This was the icing on the cake," said Bostwick. "Along with giving us more confidence, this win should help our seeding in the tournament. For the girls to jell as a team late in the season is exactly what a coach hopes for."

Should they get by the Bishops, Cohasset would take on the winner of yesterday's game between Tri-County and Diman (details can be found on www.massachusetts.ihigh.com). Hopefully they can keep their seven game winning streak alive in the postseason.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Cohasset's Christina Pinkus is all smiles after getting the win in relief in a recent game against Holbrook. The Skippers' sophomore southpaw has been lights out on the mound all season, and particularly during the team's seven-game winning streak to end the season.

Alida Tangherlini makes contact and gets on base against Holbrook.

Right fielder Melissa Crowley-Buck robs a Holbrook hitter of extra bases during their May 20 victory. The Skippers junior's play in the field is one example of strong Cohasset defense that has helped guide the team to the Div. 3 state tournament.

Cohasset's Elizabeth Stone muscles a forehand winner past Norwell's Susan Bitetti in the second set of their South Sectional Final Saturday at Duxbury High School.

Stone settles for second

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

By now, you've probably heard or read all the accolades for Norwell freshman Susan Bitetti and her performance in Saturday's South sectional final.

As copious as the praise has been, it is all well-deserved.

Bitetti was matched up with Cohasset senior Elizabeth Stone for the third time this season, the two stars of the local tennis circuit having split their two matches in team play. On this day, however, it was all about the South Shore's two best female high school tennis players.

Stone came to win, having fallen in the sectional final the past two years to Brookline's Katrina Elder-Bush. Probably the favorite to win this tournament before the year started, Stone played great in front of the solid turnout at Duxbury High School.

The only problem, from Stone's perspective anyway, was that Bitetti played even better, and took home the first place trophy with a 7-5, 6-3 win.

Bitetti has certainly played some great matches this season, and this one may have been her best.

"It's definitely up there," she said minutes after the match. "The way I hung in there after being down 3-0 in the first set, I'm proud of the way it all turned out."

Indeed, Stone appeared to be in control early. Bitetti was having difficulty getting her first serve in, and Stone made her pay with some great second serve returns and a couple strong backhand winners.

"I was just in the zone for those first three games," Stone said afterward. "I think Susan was a little tentative at first, but then she really stepped it up."

Down 3-0 and with her opponent serving, Bitetti had to turn things around, and fast. And she did, starting with that fourth game, as she broke serve by simply hitting back everything Stone had to offer. Bitetti quickly tied up the set at 3-3, and had Stone running all over the court to catch up with her shots.

Momentum shifted yet again in the next game, however, as Stone came back from a 0-30 hole to break Bitetti's serve with four great winners in a row.

The momentum changed again - this time, for good - in the next game, one that featured six deuces. Stone had two advantages in the game, but Bitetti battled back from both of them and tied the set at 4-4.

"It would have been nice to win, but I'm not going to be disappointed or upset about it. That's just not healthy."
Elizabeth Stone

After splitting the next two games, Bitetti took the next two and the set. In the set's final game, the Norwell freshman hit a couple amazing shots - including a lob after Stone had come to the net - and a big forehand, cross-court winner to finish off the set.

"I was a little nervous [before the match]; this is obviously a big match. But the biggest relief was winning that first set," Bitetti said. "But I knew I had to step it up even more in the second set."

It took a few games, but step it up she did. Neither player could hold serve in the second set's first four games, and it appeared as though whoever held serve first would take control of the set. Bitetti outlasted Stone during a few long points, and indeed held serve for a 3-2 set lead.

That lead quickly became 5-2, as Bitetti was now hitting on all cylinders. Stone was not going to go quietly, however, and won the next game with a blistering forehand down the line.

Bitetti refused to let her opponent get back into the match though, finishing things off with a strong final game.

"I was thinking about the last time we played, and I had seven match points before I finally won," Bitetti said. "I was kind of nervous that would happen again."

It didn't, and Norwell's freshman phenom can now call herself the South Shore's best.

Many figured this was the Cohasset senior's award to win this year, but in her typical, admirable style, Stone would not get down on herself afterward.

"It would have been nice to win, but I'm not going to be disappointed or upset about it. That's just not healthy," she said. "It's over, and I tried as hard as I could."

Cohasset coach Gigi Meehan was certainly proud of her star player after the match.

"She did better than all but one girl in the entire South. That's nothing to be ashamed of," she said. "Elizabeth is just a great kid with a lot of energy, and she showed both of those traits today."

Meehan also said she would now be rooting for Bitetti, who advances to the state semifinals against defending state champion Shivani Dave of Concord-Carlisle. That match is scheduled for Saturday, June 18, 9 a.m. at Clark University in Worcester.

Norwell coach Judy Field said she felt this was Bitetti's best match of the season.

"Absolutely, without question it was," Field said. "It just keeps getting better and better. Susan just kept plugging and plugging, and eventually she was really able to control where she was placing the ball. It was great tennis from both players."

Girls tennis tourney run begins today

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls tennis team's quest for a third straight Div. 2 South sectional title begins today.

The Skippers will take on the winner of yesterday's preliminary round match between Abington and Dedham today at 3:30 p.m. at the courts adjacent to Milliken Field.

The girls are, of course, quite familiar with South Shore League foe Abington, having split with them during the regular season. With their full lineup, however, Cohasset would have to be considered the strong favorites in the rubber match, should it come to that.

If the Skippers overcome that obstacle, they would advance to the sectional quarterfinals to take on whoever emerges from the Westwood-Bourne-Sacred Heart bracket. Westwood, the number-4 seed with a 14-2 record, is the favorite in that group and would host Cohasset in that round (the Skippers are the 5-seed).

The section's top three seeds are, in order (with regular season records in parentheses): Medfield (18-0), Old Rochester (17-1) and South Shore League champion Norwell (14-2).

The field is loaded, with 26 teams total qualifying for Div. 2 South, but Cohasset has the weapons to make another serious postseason run. Elizabeth Stone, of course, is a near-automatic point at first singles, and junior Susan Curry has emerged as a solid second singles performer.

The likely first doubles team is the freshmen duo of Meg Anderson and Sally Meehan, who advanced to the South semifinals in the individuals tournament before losing to the eventual sectional champion from Barnstable. At second doubles will likely be Rachel Garber and Emilie Shea, forming one of the area's strongest second doubles tandems.

For all the details on this and other state tournaments, go to www.massachusetts.ihigh.com.

He never had a lot of money, but he didn't need a lot either. Fortunately, he found a perfect partner in Ginny. The couple raised two wonderful sons together - Lou, Jr. and Scotty.

"Our idea of a big night on the town was going to Dunkin Donuts for a coffee and muffin," laughed Ginny on Sunday, two days after she became a widow. "But that was great for me. Lou and I had a good time together no matter what we did."

Ginny was a pillar of strength when she called me Sunday morning to break the news of Lou's passing. She thanked me for being Lou's friend. I, on the other hand, could barely hold it together.

I'm doing better now. It helps to know Lou made it to the end a happy man. He didn't need much beyond the love of a good woman and his children. The things he did, he did because he enjoyed doing them. He had all he needed, so laughing through the hardships and complications came easily to him.

In my mind, Lou Molinari could not have lived a richer life.

Thanks for helping to show me what really matters, Lou.

In next week's Mariner, we'll take an in-depth look at the Cohasset High School track team, which recently concluded its season with a number of strong performances at the State Class Meet and Freshman/Sophomore meet.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Recreation Department Youth Tennis Lessons Ages 7 and over

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be offering Youth Tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven week program starts on Tuesday, July 5, with one hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Various levels of instruction are available. The cost of the program is $80 per participant.

Registration will be held the week of Monday, June 13, through Thursday, June 16, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p.m., as well as Tuesday, June 14, from 5 to 7 p.m., at the Town Hall Auditorium.

You must register in person during the times listed above. If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for Tennis, it will be helpful as we have more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Back to the basics

young man who runs very well," Curran said of the 6-foot-3, 200-pound Leahy. "If you're an opposing attack man, you have to know where he is, because he causes a lot of havoc back there."

Cohasset will also need to see solid midfield play to continue from the likes of Joe Durkin, Matt Casey, Michael Grimm, Trevor Brady and Sam Steele. Durkin has been a good, consistent performer all season long.

"Joe has been a workhorse for us all year," Curran said. "He does a lot of blue-collar stuff that is critical to the team's defense. Defensively, he is really strong."

Up front, of course, are Cohasset's two leading scorers, Jake Previte and Aidan Buick. Previte recently broke the school record for career points, held by Jamie Buick. Curran said he thinks that, with the exception of Duxbury, his attack tandem is as good as any on the South Shore.

"It's not about us getting 75 shots on net; it's about getting seven or eight really good shots out of each of those guys," Curran said.

If the Skippers are still alive today, they likely will have followed their coach's number-one rule for each game.

"Starting with the opening whistle, each kid has to make a commitment to do one thing better than the opponent in every shift," Curran said.

"The best player on the field took over," he said. "We had marked [Spatola] pretty well in the first half, but we missed her on transition a couple times in the second. I don't think it was from a lack of effort on our part; it was just a couple missed assignments."

Indeed, the Hingham senior was held in check for the first 25 minutes, her only point being an assist on a goal from Christine Sowyrda. Cohasset's Miranda Lanzillotti, Marissa Evans and Molly Kirk all played tight defense in their half of the field, with much of the focus aimed at Spatola.

Spatola finished with a flourish, however, scoring four goals total in the second half, the last of which coming with 7:53 left in the game to give Hingham an insurmountable 12-7 lead.

The Harborwomen co-captain said after the game the difference between the two halves was her team speeding up the game and attacking in transition.

"It was getting frustrating in the first half; [Cohasset] had the ball most of the time," Spatola said. "Once we got it going in transition, that's when we started scoring. We've been working on our transition game all season, and we did really well with it today. I just think they weren't as quick as us in their transition defense."

Hingham jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the game's first two minutes on goals from Danielle Russell and Abby Harris. Both scores were set up by nice passes from Beth Mellors.

Lisa Spirito got one back for Cohasset three minutes later, and the teams traded goals for the rest of the half. Russell got another one for Hingham to make it 3-1, but Lindsay Durkin answered with a sterling individual effort.

Sowyrda then got her goal, her first of three on the afternoon. Durkin again answered for Cohasset, with Hingham's Kerri Doherty and Rizzotti rounding out the first half scoring. The Harborwomen went into the break with a 5-4 lead.

After Rizzotti tied it up, Russell scored her third goal of the day to give Hingham a lead they would not relinquish. Spatola proceeded to score three of the next four, with a Sowydra tally in the mix as well.

Cohasset goals down the stretch by Rizzotti and Cassie Rosano did little to stem the tide, as Hingham also got goals in the closing minutes from Doherty, Spatola, Sowyrda and Megan Hardey to hold on to the solid victory.

Hingham head coach Cory Ford (wife of Cohasset athletic director Ron Ford, setting up a little subplot on the sidelines) said afterward she felt the Skippers had outworked her team in the first half, and let that be known in her halftime talk.

"At the half, we discussed the fact that Cohasset wanted it more," said Ford. "I asked my team, 'Do you guys want to win or not?'"

They seemed to get the message. Whereas the Skippers were winning most of the 50-50 balls in the first frame, Hingham got the overwhelming majority of them in the second, in addition to controlling most of the face-offs.

Credit must also be given to the Hingham defense, who did a fantastic job of marking Cohasset's two leading scorers, Rizzotti and Mackenize Holway. Marianne Black, Katie McCann and Tori O'Doherty-Popp all routinely pounced on Rizzotti whenever she forayed into the attack zone.

For Cohasset, it was the end of a good run that saw them finish a program-best 10-7. Sweeney said he saw his team peak at the end of the year, adding that he feels with a little more work over the off-season, his team can break through and win some tournament games next season.

As for his five seniors this year - Rizzotti, Holway, Lanzillotti, Kirk and Danielle Hajjar - Sweeney was very appreciative of what they have meant to the Cohasset girls lacrosse program.

"Those five girls came into the program the first year I coached it. I think their dedication to the lacrosse has brought the program to the next level, and my hope is now for the underclassmen to take it even further," Sweeney said.

CHS Class of 2005 to graduate Saturday

their outstanding performances academically, in sports, and in the arts, but because they will be the last he will see graduate as his 19-year career in the district comes to a close.

The former long-time assistant principal served as interim principal this year. Holbrook Junior Senior High School Principal Joel Antolini will be taking his place next year.

This year's class has given DeLorenzo some of his fondest memories. He said every day he looked forward to break "with my special table." He said he is also very proud of the Spinnaker staff which produces the school newspaper, as well as the large number of students who participated in extra-curricular programs. He also said he is thrilled with the number of college acceptances for the seniors this year.

Throughout the course of the year, there have been many highlights DeLorenzo said he will never forget.

"School began with a new enthusiasm," he said, and the undefeated football team helped give a boost to school spirit. While he said there were a small amount of students at the welcome back dance and homecoming who did not "make good choices and drink chocolate milk" as he would remind them every Friday afternoon, by the end of the year, all dances, including the junior/senior semi formal and the prom and post-prom party were a major success.

In November, DeLorenzo said the Powder Puff football game between the junior and senior girls was excellent and the fall drama production of "Grease" was theatrical talent at its finest. The exceptional holiday concert following the drama production further proved the class of 2005 has an abundance of artistic ability. That talent continued to be showcased by the instrumental music programs and chorus throughout the spring.

What will always set the class apart in DeLorenzo's mind is the wild weather they had to face, with an abundance of snow falling throughout the month of January. But even with the disruption of schedule, the winter sports teams were a huge success — especially the wrestling team which won the State Championship. But the wrestling team wasn't the only one to secure a state title, the girls and boys lacrosse, girls and boys tennis, and the softball team all made their State Tournaments as well, and DeLorenzo couldn't be more proud.

With the achievements of the year behind the Class of 2005, there are only more milestones to come and DeLorenzo will be there to hand out diplomas that will set the next adventure in motion. Without a doubt, there will surely be students who not only shake his hand, but give "Mr. D" a hug, as so many Cohasset seniors have done over the years.

Cohasset High School graduation will be held Saturday, June 4 at 1:30 p.m. under the tent at the South Shore Music Circus on Sohier Street. Speeches will be given by Supt. Denise Walsh, Principal Jack DeLorenzo, valedictorian Toby Norman, salutatorian Jonathan Grimm, and class president Lauren Rizzotti. There will be a reception hosted by the PSO following the ceremony on the Music Circus grounds where refreshments will be served.

Buttonwood Books & Toys presents "Coffee with the Authors," Tuesday, June 7, 9:45-11:30 a.m. at the Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St, Cohasset. The event features a continental breakfast and a stimulating morning with authors David Hosp, Holley Bishop and Katie Willard, as they discuss their work.

Cohasset resident David Hosp will discuss his novel "Dark Harbor," a fast-paced thriller. The story takes place in Boston and involves a serial killer, a prestigious law firm, politics and the mob.

Holley Bishop has received favorable reviews from Kirkus and Publisher's Weekly for her nonfiction book, "Robbing The Bees: A Biography of Honey." This book is a tribute to honey, the beekeeper, the flowers, the science of the beehive, the history of beekeeping and most importantly, the honeybee.

Katie Willard of Sudbury, will discuss "Raising Hope," her moving story about what it means to be a mother, a daughter, and a family. Noted local author Claire Cook writes, "'Raising Hope' does just that. A sweet, optimistic debut novel that promises more to look forward to from life and from Katie Willard."

Advance reservations and tickets are required and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Tickets are $15 per person and are non-refundable.

Tour of historic cemetery

"Some might question whether our freedom is really at stake," Sullivan said. "But I sincerely believe it is. As a student of terrorism, I can tell you the very purpose behind terrorism is to cause instability and the eventual breakdown of the status quo.

"...To allow this to go unchecked, allow it to happen on our soil, in our house (as they say) and the results could and would be disastrous for our country, our Constitution and our way of life."

Gold Star mother June Simeone, whose son Craig was killed in Vietnam on Memorial Day 36 years ago, placed the wreath on the Veterans Honor Roll honoring all those servicemen and women who lost their lives.

Then roughly a dozen young flower girls threw flowers into the harbor to remember those lost at sea.

For at least one spectator, Cohasset's Memorial Day observances were a first.

Ros Burrows, 80, hails from Cheshire, England, and was visiting Cohasset for a wedding. A relative, Robert Yates married Jill Hamilton, daughter of Jim and Laurie Hamilton of King Street.

"It's been most memorable," Burrows said about her entire visit and Memorial Day in particular. Staying at the Cohasset Harbor Inn, she couldn't help but see and hear the day's observances unfolding and came out to be one among upwards of 2,000 spectators.

"My husband was a merchant seaman during World War II," she recalled. "His ship landed American soldiers at Normandy." His ship also carried food and supplies from America to England to help with the war effort.

She said her husband would bring her nylons given to him from the "American boys."

"This was very impressive and very moving," she said of the ceremony. "And then I think about those lads in Iraq."

Janet Palmer, also from England and visiting for the same wedding, said she was touched and surprised by "this taste of America." Palmer, who was born in 1944, said she was "a war baby" and her mother had to travel to Oxford to give birth because London was too dangerous.

Sullivan, the keynote speaker, said she hoped traditions like the Memorial Day parade and ceremony would continue.

"Most of all, my hope and the hope of every veteran, is that every time you hear our National Anthem, whether at a sporting event or a ceremony such as this," she said. "You, too, will stand proudly, face the flag that stands for freedom, the freedom that our lost heroes fought so courageously to preserve, place your right hand over your heart, and remember."

Peter Wood covers his grandson's (Matthew Luscombe) ears during the loud playing of patriotic music just before the beginning of the observances at the harbor.

John McNabb, right, shares a Memorial Day tradition with his nephew Gavan Nolan, 5, as they dig into a hot dog and hamburger at the community cookout at the Lightkeepers Residence.

'How can we possibly do enough to preserve their memory?

By Kathleen Sullivan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It is the VETERAN, not the preacher,
Who has given us freedom of religion.
It is the VETERAN, not the reporter,
Who has given us freedom of the press.
It is the VETERAN, not the poet,
Who has given us freedom of speech.
It is the VETERAN, not the campus organizer,
Who has given us the freedom to assemble.
It is the VETERAN, not the politician,
Who has given us the right to vote.

Good afternoon. I have to say there is nothing that moves me like the playing of our national anthem. I look forward to it. I feel so proud to stand; face our flag, the flag that stands for freedom, and hold my right hand over my heart.

I would like to thank Steve Wigmore, our Post Commander, for inviting me to speak today, the Reverend Mulvehill, for setting the tone for this ceremony with the invocation, and I would also like to personally thank all of you for joining us for this Memorial Day ceremony.

I've had the opportunity to march in this parade and participate in this ceremony over the past few years and it is so rewarding to see so many lining the parade route year after year. It is especially rewarding to see so many families watching and participating together. It certainly reinforces my belief that our future and the future of fine traditions such as this are in good hands.

Our all-volunteer armed forces have answered the call to defend our freedom. Please remember this as we remember those most recently lost. Their mission, their cause is the same as those who went before them.

I am going to take advantage of owning the microphone for just a moment to extend a very personal and deeply heartfelt thank you to the veterans and the active duty members of our armed forces here with us and all over the world. Thank you for your service and your sacrifice. You are my heroes.

Sacrifice. It is, in the context of war, the act of giving up one's own life or risking injury to one's self for the sake of something having a more pressing claim. Today, American citizens across this great nation and around the world are remembering the men and women who paid the ultimate sacrifice – those who gave their lives for the sake of something having a more pressing claim – freedom. They gave their lives for the sake of our freedom.

Until a few short years ago, Memorial Day it seemed, was a day that we remembered heroes of wars from years, decades, even centuries past. But today we also remember men and women who have lost their lives in the War on Terrorism.

The War on Terrorism is unlike any other in our history. The enemy is illusive, they are not wearing a uniform, they hide behind innocents; there are no clear battle lines; the attacks seem random and unpredictable; the tactics are unconventional.

But there is a common thread, nonetheless. A thread that ties this war to all the others, and that is that the men and women who paid the ultimate sacrifice gave their lives for the sake of something having a more pressing claim – freedom.

Some might question whether or not our freedom is really at stake. I sincerely believe that it is. As a student of terrorism, I can tell you that the very purpose behind terrorism is to cause instability and the eventual breakdown of the status quo. In the success of their attacks, our citizens would begin to question the effectiveness of our government and lose confidence in our leadership.

In response to the attacks we would have to change the status quo and even infringe on our liberties in the effort to prevent further attacks. Allow this to go unchecked, allow it to happen on our soil, in our house as they say, and the results could and would be disastrous for our country, our Constitution and our way of life.

Our men and women in uniform understand this. Our all-volunteer armed forces have answered the call to defend our freedom. Please remember this as we remember those most recently lost. Their mission, their cause is the same as those who went before them.

And how do we remember them for their service and their sacrifice? How can we possibly do enough to preserve their memory? My hope is that fine traditions such as our Memorial Day parade and ceremony will continue. My hope is that all of you will continue to participate. Most of all my hope, and the hope of every veteran, is that every time that you hear our National Anthem, whether at a sporting event or a ceremony such as this – you, too, will stand proudly, face the flag that stands for freedom, the freedom that our lost heroes fought so courageously to preserve, place your right hand over your heart, and remember.

Thank you.

How to Find Real Estate for 30% to 50% Below Market Value

DISCOVER THE HUGE SOURCE OF PROFITS MOST REAL ESTATE INVESTORS OVERLOOK

"I can show you from firsthand experience, it can take just a couple hours of your time to position yourself to make tens of thousands of dollars in real estate." J.G. Banks, legendary probate investor

You can buy choice real estate for 30 percent to 50 percent of its market value, sell it quickly for its full price, and make tens of thousands of dollars on just about every investment.

You can do this with single-family houses. Duplexes. Condominiums. Apartment buildings. Strip malls. Office buildings. Ranchland. Farms. All types of real estate.

The reason these bargain properties exist is that they are part of an estate that's in probate. Don't let the word "probate" scare you. There is no legal mumbo jumbo involved. When you acquire real estate that's part of someone's estate, you're simply helping beneficiaries settle the estate by purchasing its assets.

In just a few hours each week — less time than most folks spend watching TV during a single evening — you can learn to cash in with estates by following my easy-to-follow "estate mining system."

A single mom with three teenagers used my system to purchase the home she never thought she could afford. But when you get the property for half price, that's what can make the difference.

In every neighborhood, it's possible that one or two properties, and maybe more, are in probate. You can find profit-making opportunities close to home. Even areas of town you only dreamed of moving to can suddenly become affordable when the price of real estate drops in half.

To Make Big Money: BUY LOW and SELL HIGH

Rest assured, I'm not talking about rundown foreclosures, bankruptcies, or condemned properties like the slew of so-called "real estate gurus." Properties in probate can be beautiful homes with no mortgage or debt attached, making them some of the cleanest and easiest of all real estate to buy low and sell high quickly.

There is no "For Sale" sign out front, and few people know where to find these properties. But for those who do, it can be a land of riches and the fastest route I know to making big money in real estate.

Why Such Incredible Bargains Everywhere?

Not every beneficiary wants to keep the property they inherited. Perhaps the estate involves people who live out of state and they don't want to change their lives. If a house is willed to more than one person, it's likely the property must be sold to ensure everybody gets their share.

Plus, most beneficiaries want their money quickly. Fifty dollars today is a lot better than the promise of $100 sometime off in the future. Especially when attorney fees are eating away at that $100 value. So you have highly motivated sellers who appreciate you're helping them get on with their lives.

Believe It or Not, a 300% Gain Can Be "All in a Day's Work"

The potential to make significant money is huge. For example, if you purchased just one property at a 30 percent discount, and then resold the property for 100 percent of its market value, you'd make about $45,000 on a property worth $150,000. And with my system, it may not even take a full week's effort to do this.

But here's how you leverage your money to make gigantic profits... assuming you put down 10 or 15 percent to purchase the property, when you quickly sell for full market value, the gain on your initial down payment could easily be more than 300 percent.

Real estate has long been a proven path to making millions of dollars. Almost anyone can walk along this path, and I believe that no route has more moneymaking potential than the one you'll discover in my FREE workshop.

How to Get the Cash to Buy Properties

In addition to learning why it's possible to regularly purchase real estate for as little as 50 cents on the dollar, you'll also discover it's possible to get the cash to fund your offers to buy properties. That means, you do not have to have money in the bank.

My system is so comprehensive that the State of California accredited it. But like just about everything in life, it works best if you work at it.

A gentleman from Dallas purchased 18 probate properties his first year.

Another student bought a vacant lot for $40,000 less than comparable lots on the same street.

You won't find a book on "How to Make Money in Estates" at bookstores. My FREE workshop is the only way to start learning the secrets of "estate investing."

More than $3 trillion dollars worth of assets are in probate. It's a buyer's paradise. Yet there are very few real estate investors who know about it.

I guarantee that if you attend my FREE workshop and put yourself "in the know," you'll be positioned to be "in the money" as never before.

TOP FIVE REASONS TO ACQUIRE PROBATE PROPERTIES

1. BARGAIN BASEMENT PRICES: The probate market is full of fabulous properties you can snap up for 30% to 50% below market value. Get the home of your dreams for your family, or resell quickly and be positioned to capture a lifetime of gains within days. It's the ultimate "Buy Low/Sell High" scenario.
2. HUGE INVENTORY: There are almost six million estates in probate, with assets worth trillions of dollars. Every type of real estate — from houses to beachside motels — are in probate. According to the Los Angeles Times, there are nearly 44 times more probate properties than properties in foreclosure.
3. BUYER'S MARKET: Purchasing property out of an estate assures you of a highly motivated seller. Most beneficiaries are anxious to sell the house (and other unwanted assets) so that they can pay off debts attached to the estate that must all be settled before the estate can be distributed.
4. ALL KINDS OF TREASURES: Historic architecture, classic cars, fine jewelry, antiques, art, toys, collectibles, and much more enter into probate every day. Millions of items. And they can sit there for years unless you rescue them.
5. IT'S A SECRET: Few people know how to find and purchase property from an estate. Even the beneficiaries don't know how to sell. That means, as a "first in" estate investor, you have little or no competition from other buyers — plus you're helping anxious sellers.

How to Buy Almost Anything for 30% to 50% Off

BUSINESSES. CLASSIC CARS. ANTIQUES. ART. COLLECTIBLES. TREASURES OF ALL KINDS.

There's a whole world of assets beyond houses. To start, there can be commercial real estate including industrial parks and offices. Plus all kinds of personal property — even businesses.

An enterprising young man turned his love for cars, and the knowledge he gained from the J.G. Banks workshop, into a career. The man purchased an auto shop that the beneficiaries had no interest in. He and his brother own and run the business, creating for themselves a potential lifetime of profits from one estate purchase. The flow of wealth didn't stop there. Our student also netted over $22,000 in profit on four cars. All four vehicles were acquired using the J.G. Banks system.

An estate can be your quickest way to acquire a prime business for pennies on the dollar. You can run it, or sell it quickly for market value and position yourself for substantial gains.

Estate hunting is also a great way to start an e-business, auction off your findings, and cash in on the new, thriving e-based economy.

One of our students made profits of 1,000 percent to 3,000 percent on the possessions he found in estates and then quickly sold. There is a potential windfall in every estate you search.

You can use probate to build a tidy business around just about any item or collectible that interests you. Millions of items, and real estate, end up as "buried treasure" hidden in probate.

Huntington hits high note with 'Falsettos'

When the Huntington Theatre Company decided to mount a new production of William Finn and James Lapine's "Falsettos," artistic director Nicholas Martin assembled a team of up-and-coming theater professionals to bring a new look and feel to the Tony Award-winning musical.

"This is a real coming of age for set designer David Korins and me," explained director Daniel Goldstein, 29, by telephone recently. "We were both interns, along with music director Michael Friedman, for Nicky Martin at the Williamstown Theatre Festival. A lot of what I have learned in my career, I have learned from Nicky. That he thinks of me now as a fellow director and colleague is an honor which I can't quite process because I'm so busy with this show."

"Falsettos" —a joining of two separate one-act shows, "March of the Falsettos" (1981) and "Falsettoland" (1990) — revolves around a gay man's efforts to blend his disparate relations into a new kind of family to include his ex-wife and young son, his lesbian neighbors, and also his HIV-positive boyfriend. The show was produced on Broadway in 1992 when AIDS was still a front page story. With the help of a first-rate cast of Broadway performers and a young, energetic design team, Goldstein has set out to "illuminate the piece for a new audience."

Whizzer (Romain Frugé), Marvin (Geoffrey Nauffts), Charlotte (Anne L. Nathan) and Cordelia (Kate Baldwin) marvel at how they came to be lovers and friends in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Falsettos," playing through June 26 at the Boston University Theatre.

"The issues that were at stake in this piece in the 1980s and 1990s are still important today. Our new approach includes a production look that is very different from what has been done with the show before. The Huntington space is very large, so we're using a series of Iris curtains to close off the space in different configurations, making the show more intimate," says Goldstein. "And, quite simply, Bill Finn has written a masterpiece. It does exactly what any great show is meant to do, which is to retain its immediacy. It is a wonderful story about family. I don't qualify it as just a gay musical. You have every kind of person, couple and family depicted. It's a true family musical."

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "Falsettos" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through June 26. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800 or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org.

TIME TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT HEARING LOSS
It probably comes as no surprise that hearing problems affect about one-third of Americans between ages 65 and 74, as well as half of seniors ages 85 and older. The fact is that hearing loss is the third leading medical complaint among older adults, after arthritis and high blood pressure. Yet, 80% of people who would benefit from hearing instruments do not avail themselves of their use. For some, there is an element of embarrassment over even needing such a device. For others, the instrument seems unsightly. However, the technology is advancing quickly. New hearing instruments are smaller and more effective than those produced just a few years ago. The biggest advances involve combining more features with less bulk.
At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we recognize that there are varied needs and uses for different hearing instruments. We carry different makes because we want you to end up with the right kind of hearing aid that will enable you to hear to your best ability. You can always count on the Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialists at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, for experienced, knowledgeable recommendations, evaluations, fittings, follow-up support, and repairs. Have you had your hearing tested lately? Call us at 781-337-1144 for an appointment. We offer FREE hearing evaluations and FREE batteries for the life of any hearing instrument purchased, and all in-office repairs are FREE for all makes of hearing aids.
P.S. Today's hearing instruments feature better technology for hearing conversations in noisy environments.

Great dining in the Berkshires!

Second in a series on places to eat and things at do at New England vacation hotspots. Next Thursday: New Hampshire.

By FRAN FOLSOM
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Chef/owner Bill Gideon fires up a dish at Gideon's in North Adams.

Jacob's Pillow stages creative dance shows all summer long.

The big attraction in the Berkshires may be the Boston Symphony Orchestra's performances at Tanglewood and dance performances at Jacob's Pillow, but dining is right up there as well. In fact, there's culinary gold in those hills, which serve up small towns and wonderful restaurants. Check out the following.

1. American Craftsman Cafe, 7 South St., Stockbridge; 413-298-0250

Chef Jonathan Pratt's imaginative menu includes grilled hanger steak, red commeal-crusted tilapia and a fig and caramelized onion tart to die for. If you like the table and chairs you're dining at in this chic cafe, you can purchase them and anything else that's on display. All the artwork is by artisans of the American Craftsmen Galleries. More than $40.

2. The Red Lion Inn, 30 Main St., Stockbridge; 413-298-5545

Executive chef Brian Alberg, four-time chef at the James Beard House in New York City, has brought the Red Lion into the 21st century with his American regional cuisine. Sample roasted fennel and pear salad with baby arugula, pan-seared sea bass with carrot coriander puree or grilled duck breast with ragout of baby vegetables and a port-fig reduction. More than $40.

3. John Andrews Restaurant, Route 23, Egremont; 413-528-3469

Out of the way but worth the drive. The cassoulet of duck confit with house-made pork sausage is rich and filling, the roasted organic chicken with fried polenta and mashed butternut squash will sate your appetite. An impressive wine list has garnered chef/owners Dan and Susan Bianchi-Smith the Wine Spectators Award of Excellence. More than $40.

4. Martin's, 49 Railroad St., Great Barrington; 413-528-5455

Tucked away on a side street, surrounded by upscale restaurants, Martin's has been holding its own here for 17 years. Chef/owner Martin Lewis, originally from Sharon, will tell you the secret to his omelets is that he learned to make them at the Plaza Hotel in New York City. Grab a newspaper from the pile on the stool, settle at a table and order up, it's all great. And get a chocolate or cinnamon babka for later. Less than $20.

5. Church Street Cafe, 65 Church St., Lenox; 413-637-2745

This classy cafe has been an institution in Lenox for 24 years. Menu offerings include panko-crusted Alaskan halibut. Each of the three dining rooms highlights works by local artists. $20 to $40.

6. Spigalina, 80 Main St., Lenox; 413-637-4455

In an 1805 Greek Revival house with exposed hand-pegged beams, chefs Lina and Serge Paccaud create gourmet Italian dishes. Lina, a graduate of the Culinary Institute of America, likes variety so she changes the menu every two weeks. She does leave two items, her limoncello fettuccine with sauteed shrimp and Serge's mocha hazelnut layer cake. $20 to $40.

7. Chez Nous, 150 Main St., Lee; 413-243-6397

Franck Tessier and Rachel Portnoy have put a touch of France into their funky, colorful restaurant. Everything is made by them, fresh on the premises, from the mushroom walnut pate to entrees like sauteed scallops with sun-dried tomato risotto to desserts of hot chocolate mousse and creme fraiche panna cotta. If you like the food, you can spend the night in one of their two elegant upstairs suites. $20 to $40.

8. Trattoria Rustica, McKay Street, Pittsfield; 413-499-1192

A taste of Italy is in the air here when chef/proprietor Davide Manzo creates his house specialties: calamari al ferri, linguine puttanesca or salmon al forno. Service is unhurried as nothing leaves Manzo's kitchen without his stamp of approval. The impressive wine list reads like an Italian novel. More than $40.

9. The Lantern Bar and Grill, 455 North St., Pittsfield; 413-448-2717

Mike Papas is the third generation in his family to own the Lantern. The decor is '60s kitsch: wooden booths, paneled walls, plastic-topped chrome bar stools. Don't let the looks fool you. Mike's chili was voted best in Pittsfield and his burgers were voted best in Berkshire County by the Berkshire Eagle newspaper. Less than $20.

10. Shaker Suppers at Hancock Shaker Village, Route 20, Pittsfield; 800-817-1137

Set your watch back two centuries to 1830 and enjoy a candlelight dinner in the Believer's Dining room. Chef Paul Proudy uses fresh products grown at the village. There's squash and carrot soup, followed by pot roast of beef with cranberry chutney or ham baked in cider and Sister Mary's zesty carrot dish. Top all this with a dish of warm bread pudding. The dinners are $50 per person, reservations are required. More than $40.

11. Yasmin's at the Orchard's Hotel, 222 Adams Road, Williamstown; 800-225-1517

Chef Swen Boehm deserves an A for his innovative menu. Entrees include petite rack of veal served on sweetbreads and morel mushrooms, grilled citrus flavored swordfish over Mediterranean style vegetables and a champagne sauce, or roast Long Island duck with creamy savoy cabbage. More than $40.

12. Gideon's, 34 Holden St., North Adams; 413-664-9449

Walking in here you're surrounded by the welcoming aroma of good food and spices. Chef/owner Bill Gideon's eclectic menu ranges from veal Oscar to Asian roasted sea bass. The dessert specialty of the house is the molten chocolate cake; try it, your taste buds will thank you. $20 to $40.

Berkshires calendar

By HEATHER ENG

The small towns in Western Massachusetts are anything but lacking in the arts. The Boston Symphony Orchestra retreats to Tanglewood every summer, and the Pops plays there, too. And Jacob's Pillow draws world-renowned dance artists, including the Martha Graham Company and the Mark Morris Dance Group.

Such local institutions as the Norman Rockwell Museum and Mass MoCA add to the cultural community, and small arts festivals, exhibits and shows can be found all over the Berkshires. Here's a sampling of what the Western Massachusetts hills have in store:

JUNE 11

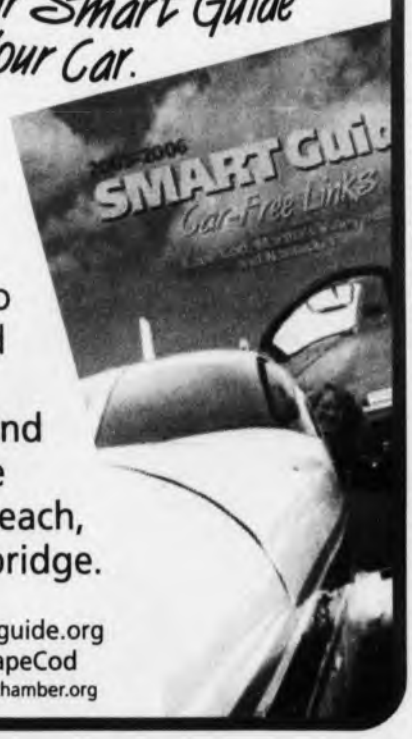
• "The Art of the New Yorker: Eighty Years in the Vanguard" opens at the Norman Rockwell Museum, 9 Glendale Road, Stockbridge. Through Oct. 31. 10 a.m.-5 p.m. daily. $12, student $7, children 18 and under FREE with an adult. www.nrm.org

JUNE 18

• Jacob's Pillow 2005 Season-Opening Gala, Blake's Barn, Jacob's Pillow, George Carter Road, Becket. 5 p.m. Tickets start at $125. 413-243-9919 x25. www.jacobspillow.org

JUNE 21

• Savion Glover and special guests Jimmy Slyde and Dianne Walker perform at the Ted Shawn Theatre, Jacob's Pillow, George Carter Road, Becket. Through June 26. Tuesday-Saturday 8 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 2 p.m. $55, seniors, students and children $49.50. 413-243-0745. www.jacobspillow.org



JUNE 25

• "William Kentridge: 9 Drawings for Projection," with live music by Philip Miller is at Mass MoCA, 87 Marshall St., North Adams. 8:30 p.m. $22. www.massmoca.org

JUNE 29

• The Martha Graham Dance Company performs at the Ted Shawn Theatre, Jacob's Pillow, George Carter Road, Becket. Through July 3. Wednesday-Saturday, 8 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 2 p.m. $55, seniors, students and children $49.50. 413-243-0745. www.jacobspillow.org

Study on area noise pollution

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Towns on both the north and south shores are affected on a daily basis by the noise flights arriving and departing at Logan International Airport generate. Any time, day or night, the all-too-familiar din of the engines interrupts phone calls, wakes residents from their sleep, and are just a plain nuisance.

For more than 25 years, communities surrounding Logan Airport have been working to reroute flights over the ocean, which would greatly decrease noise pollution to affected communities.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer serves as co-chairman of the Community Advisory Committee, which has been working on many initiatives to help improve the noise pollution communities surrounding Logan now face.

"There are 5 million people affected and it operates every day," said Dormitzer, adding the

78 receive diplomas at CHS graduation

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Saturday's sunshine had some competition in the bright smiles of the 78 members of the Cohasset High School Class of 2005 who received their diplomas under the green and yellow tent of the South Shore Music Circus.

With "Pomp and Circumstance" being played by the Cohasset High School band, the class filed in, and the ceremony was kicked off with the senior class chorus members singing "The Star Spangled Banner." With the boys dressed in blue caps and gowns and the girls in white — the deep red of the long-stem roses held by the girls completed the patriotic picture.

Class president Lauren Rizzotti welcomed friends and family and reminded her classmates graduation day may be the last time they are all together as a group. She said however, she is sure no matter what they choose to do in life from this day forward, "I'm confident they will be successful in their adventures."

Rizzotti said among her classmates, there are many talents to Holy mackerel!

Cohasset fishing heritage in focus

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset is a town with a strong fishing heritage. For roughly 150 years, mackerel fishing was essentially responsible for the town's wealth, prominence and growth, as an abundance of maritime trades led to a booming economy.

To celebrate those roots, the Cohasset Historical Society and its Maritime Museum, in conjunction with the Hull Lifesaving Museum and Essex Shipbuilding Museum, are presenting a variety of maritime activities from colonial times to the present.

An authentic colonial fishing schooner, the Lewis H. Story, will arrive from the Essex Shipbuilding Museum and dock in Cohasset for visitors to go aboard. The boat will be docked during the weekend of June 17-19, coinciding with the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common.

Just down the road at 4 Elm St., the Cohasset Maritime Museum will have a sample of maritime pictures and objects from all three institutions on display for the weekend. Books, boat model kits, pictures and collectibles will be available for sale.

In addition, there will be a supporting exhibit titled "Cohasset Mackerel Fishery" opening today (Friday) at the Historical Society headquarters, located in the Paul Pratt Memorial Building on South Main Street. The exhibit features artifacts related to the industry, including an antique compass and foghorn.

New lighting, seats a plus

Music Circus is ready for season

By Matthew Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

The South Shore Music Circus has had perhaps its busiest off-season ever. The result will be a whole new look and style for the venue both inside and out when it opens for its 2005 concert season on June 18.

"The new lighting system has more capability to light the performers, the venue and music, or all at once if necessary."
— Adam Thibault, stage manager

The backstage hospitality room at the Music Circus now displays a completed, wall-size mural commission, depicting a colorful, panoramic view of Cohasset's Government Island, looking out over Bassing Beach and Minot Light and the Glades in Scituate. The mural, painted over the winter by Cape Cod artist Hans de Castellane, will give star performers and backstage visitors an eyeful as they pass the time in the hospitality area before, during and after shows this summer.

Logan study could help ground noise pollution

CAC has found there are ways the airport could mitigate noise pollution.

Dormitzer presented a Logan Airport Noise Study before the local congressional delegation, including aides for US senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry, as well as representatives from the Federal Aviation Administration Friday, June 3. He made the presentation again before selectmen Tuesday.

"There are 5 million people affected and it operates every day."

— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer about Logan Airport

Dormitzer said there are three runway combinations that roughly 80 percent of Logan flights use, and they all affect Cohasset and surrounding towns. While many of the flights take off or arrive over Boston Harbor, they are either turning to fly over land soon after takeoff, or are approaching over land. At the low altitudes, the noise problem is much worse for those on the ground. However, if the planes could take off over the harbor and stay out over the water for as long as possible, at a higher altitude, potentially swinging out as far as Minot Ledge Light, the problem would be greatly improved not only for Cohasset, but towns such as Hingham, Hull, Braintree and Weymouth.

"That way, all the planes stay off shore," he said. "It is a solution and it is the solution."

However, in order for flight paths to be changed, the airport would need to re-draw its air maps.

"The lines are drawn in space," said Dormitzer, explaining all it would take to allow flights to come in over the water is a reconfiguration of the lines on the map. However, he said the air-traffic controllers have not been in favor of that change.

Dormitzer said the CAC's proposed changes would result in roughly 35 over-flight changes, which have already passed an FAA safety screening. He said the paths would also need to pass an efficiency screening, and the results from that test are not yet in. However, he is optimistic about the possibility the changes will be made in the future.

"I'm not totally pessimistic. We have achieved an enormous amount," he said.

The noise study is a requirement of a 2002 legal order by Jane Garvey, who was then administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. That decision authorized the construction of a new runway, 14/32, at Logan International Airport, which was expected to direct many thousands more flights annually over Boston Harbor, impacting area towns, including Hingham, Cohasset, and Hull. The decision specified several mitigation measures to lessen the impact of aircraft noise on communities in the greater Boston area.

Noise levels were measured and averaged for the noise study and Dormitzer said the findings "are astonishing." He said one of the loudest planes to fly over Cohasset is a 727 which is often used by Federal Express, and therefore makes flights most often between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m., which is very disruptive.

Compared with every other airport in the world, Dormitzer said Logan Airport is closer in proximity to its closest city than any other, as it is roughly only half a mile from Boston and therefore, has a big impact on the surrounding area. The second and third closest airports in relation to their neighboring cities are the Frederic Chopin International Airport and Orlando International Airport, which are both more than 10 kilometers away from their respective cities of Warsaw and Orlando.

The Cohasset Historical Society has sold Moors Rocks off Jerusalem Road, but the no-build covenant will remain in tact.

Moors Rocks sold but will remain open space

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One of the features that makes Cohasset so uniquely beautiful are its miles of rocky shoreline. While the vast majority of property along the coast has been developed over the years, a roughly 2-acre gem known as Moors Rocks has been left untouched, and many residents would like it to stay that way.

Over the years, the thought of losing the land to development has sparked controversy, and the recent sale of the property by the Cohasset Historical Society has caused the rumor mill to churn once more. However, society co-vice chairman Tom Gruber said residents have nothing to worry about, as the property has a no-build deed covenant which will prevent the development of the site.

"For all intents and purposes, it's not buildable," said Gruber, as the land is almost completely rock, but the covenant will ensure there is legal protection to keep it the way it is.

In 1949, Adelaide Pratt donated the 1.95 acres of land, located on the water side of Jerusalem Road across from Deep Run between Pleasant Beach and Black Rock Beach, to the historical society. Pratt was given the land by her grandfather Benjamin Moors.

"At that time, there was no other organization in town to give it to," said Gruber, as a group like the Cohasset Conservation Trust had not yet been established. Therefore, the Society accepted the property, and Gruber said it remained under private ownership, as it was when Pratt owned it.

"The society has always been worried about liability," said Gruber, which is one of the reasons it decided to sell the land. While he said the society understands it is a beautiful piece of property which beckons residents to climb the rocks and enjoy the beach, if anyone was ever hurt on the property, the society could be liable which is a huge burden. Gruber said over the years, the society has put up "no trespassing" signs, but they continue to disappear.

However, this spring, "one abutter gave a firm offer for what we thought was a nice sum," said Gruber, and the society agreed to the sale. Not only will it no longer have to worry about the potential for lawsuits, it will have some additional money to work with to help further its mission.

According to the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, the property was sold for $75,000 to Donald and Patricia Ranney of Jerusalem Road. The town's 2005 assessment on the property was $482,300.

When the property was originally given to the society, Pratt made sure a no-build covenant was signed which would prohibit development for 50 years. However, that agreement ran out in 1999 and was not immediately reinstated. Gruber said abutters to the property tried to reinstate the covenant, but there has been some difference in legal opinion as to whether they have the right to reinstate it without owning the property.

However, with the recent sale of the property, the society reinstated the agreement which will protect it from development for another 30 years. Gruber said it is his understanding that now, under Massachusetts state law, covenants are limited to 30 years. However, in the future, he believes either the society, or the original grantor, are the only two who could reinstate the covenant. In either case, "There is more protection for it to not be built on now than before we sold it," Gruber said.

Historical society focuses on Cohasset fishing heritage model replicas of mackerel schooners, and a full-size dory, which is a small boat used to catch mackerel.

Cohasset resident Steve Bobo has been working with the historical society to bring the exhibit to fruition. For many years he has been building boats of his own, and with an interest in all things maritime, has studied Cohasset's fishing history. He has become quite familiar with the kinds of boats which were prevalent in Cohasset's past and the important role the fishing industry played.

"It was the leading industry in Cohasset for roughly 200 years," he said, adding mackerel fishing supported not only fishermen, but shipbuilders, sail makers, rope makers, and other maritime trades. He said the ancestors of many families in town today were sailors who came to Cohasset to reap the benefits of its waters.

"As the industry grew, a trade route developed between the Azores and Cohasset leading to the emigration of a substantial number of Azoreans seeking adventure and employment in the fishing industry," he said.

To keep the fishermen in business, ship builders came to town as well, and Bobo said there were roughly 160 ships built in Cohasset during the height of the industry. Photos and paintings as well as smaller replicas of the boats which used to sail into Cohasset harbor will be on display during the exhibit.

David Wadsworth, historian, stands by a 19th-century dory used as a smaller fishing vessel that would have been launched from the main boat. The dory is part of an exhibit at the Cohasset Historical Society.

"It is a very old trade," Bobo said of shipbuilding, adding in the 1800s, models of ships were built first, then the larger boats were built to scale. But for Bobo, who has built eight boats in his own workshop, some as large as 32-feet long, the full-size boat comes first, followed by a model replica. Bobo has replicas of every boat he has ever built, which have taken up residence in his son's home.

One of the models featured in the exhibit was built by Bobo's father many years ago. The boat, a Chesapeake Bay Bugeye, was at one time displayed in the Smithsonian as part of its watercraft collection. Bobo's father was a developer in Baltimore and also worked with children through the Junior Achievement Society. The children helped him build the model.

In addition to models, there is a full-size dory in the exhibit which depicts the kind of small boat many mackerel fishermen would have used.

"This has tongue and groove construction," said Bobo, which is a method of shipbuilding he said is "Absolutely ancient."

"This speaks of a heritage that goes back thousands of years," he said.

Fishermen could not have done their job properly without rope, and the exhibit has a rope-making machine that used to twist yarn together to make rope for the boats. The machine was found when it floated up on Bassing Beach years ago.

"I checked it, and it's like you could start making rope today," said Bobo.

In addition, the exhibit features a foghorn, which Bobo explained fills with air and when stepped on blows a whistle. A compass which would have guided mackerel boats back to shore is on display as well.

In addition to the exhibit, Bobo is working on another project with the museum. He will be building a new weathervane to sit atop the roof of the Paul Pratt Building, which will likely be the shape of mackerel schooner. The mackerel weathervane which stood atop the building when it was the library, has moved to the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Ripley Road.

The Cohasset Maritime Museum will also begin a new maritime initiative through its program "In Port." The museum is seeking loans of boat models, nautical artifacts, pictures and memorabilia relating to the town's history. The museum will provide a cleaning and restoration service for selected items, as well as and establishment of provenance and historical data. The items will be on display at the museum for a period, then returned to their owners.

The Louis H. Story will be available for boarding Friday June 17 through Sunday June 19. Visiting hours will begin at roughly noon Friday and will continue from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Depending on the tide, the boat will either be tied to the town dock, located near the Atlantica restaurant on Border Street, or the Cohasset Yacht Club. A small donation is requested upon boarding. The Cohasset Maritime Museum and Cohasset Historical Society buildings will be open during the weekend's events as well from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please contact the Cohasset Historical Society at (781) 383-1434.

The Lewis H. Story, the 30-foot flagship Chebacco boat of the Essex Shipbuilding Museum, will be making a trip to Cohasset Friday June 17 and will be docked for visitors to come aboard until Sunday June 19. The boat is coming to Cohasset as part of a joint effort between the Essex Shipbuilding Museum, Hull Lifesaving Museum, and Cohasset Historical Society to help educate the community about the town's long fishing heritage.

Scott Esposito reposes in one of the new spacious seats at the Music Circus before Cohasset High's graduation. His daughter, Kerri-Anne, was in the ceremony.

Fans are sure to like new lighting, seats at Music Circus

But that's mainly for the performers. How about something for the fans?

The Music Circus will reveal plenty for its seasonal patrons on opening night, when it kicks off the summer schedule with the already sold-out concert by Lynyrd Skynyrd. Brand new remodeling features at multiple levels inside the theatre promise concert-goers a more comfortable, enjoyable experience for this season and beyond

"The whole theatre has all new seats," declared Paula Gates, Director of Marketing and Public Relations at the Music Circus. "The new seats also have all new designs. They're wider and more comfortable, with different armrest configurations that allow for more room getting into and out of rows."

There are lots of other renovations new for this season. The Music Circus has raised the height of the last rows all around the outer perimeter of the theatre-in-the-round, not only to increase visibility of the stage but also allow more room for dancing. The theatre also has a new handicapped seating section that allows for seats to be removed and wheelchairs moved into their place in the row.

"Wheelchair customers can now feel like they're right there in the row with the rest of the audience, not set back like before," Gates said. Other features unveiled for this year include all new carpeting throughout the aisles and outside the theatre tent. Plus, new aisle lights just beneath the armrests of the aisle seats, which when illuminated might make the theatre light up like a giant electronic birthday cake, or a flying saucer, during evening shows.

The house lighting system has in fact been given an overall makeover. In addition to the stationary lights already a fixture for years, the Music Circus has added a new intelligent lighting system in which lights move by remote control. The new system has 8 Claypacky lights that are connected to a high-tech, digitally computerized light board, providing more flexibility to do special effects, including synchronizing the lights to the music

"The new lighting system has more capability to light the performers, the venue and music, or all at once if necessary. It can also synchronize with the music, and can adapt to each show," said Music Circus stage manager Adam Thibault, of Hingham, who's spent much of the last few weeks overseeing the installation of the new system.

"A good lighting system is an essential part of the concert experience. The way I look at it is, a concert without lighting, it's called radio," Thibault added.

"With the new seating design, concert audiences can maneuver and saunter in and out of the rows and aisles a lot more easily. Everything all over the theatre is more free-flowing," said Music Circus production manager Dave Wentling, of Hull.

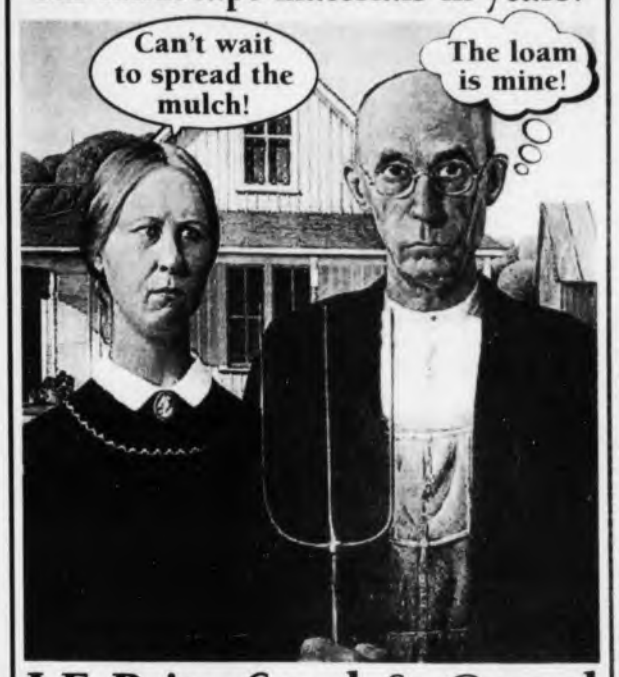
"Overall, it's a more comfortable experience for concert-goers at the Music Circus this year, and more exciting with the new lighting," Wentling said.

Public comment period stays the same

In light of a barrage of negative feedback about changing the way public comment is handled, selectmen will keep things the way they are during their meetings.

Public comment period will remain at the beginning of the agenda. If an issue is raised that will require more discussion, it will be put on the agenda for an upcoming meeting.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil had suggested moving public comment to the end of the meeting to allow the board to conduct its business first. Some meetings were being taken over by angry residents venting their concerns and even verbally attacking selectmen, causing the agenda to veer off course.



Selectman sought feedback on how best to handle public comment from interested citizens.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he received phone calls voicing opposition and had had conversations with residents who were also opposed to any change.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he received a call at the selectmen's office from a resident who was opposed to changing the public comment period.

Vanderweil said he too had received a verbal negative, and had read in the Mariner a negative letter-to-the-editor. He agreed the best way to handle the situation is to keep the public comment the way it is, but leave it up to Chairman Fred Koed to keep comments to an appropriate time limit.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

OH BOY!

Mark and Jamey Kupsc of Cohasset had a baby boy, Mark Leonard Kupsc Jr., on June 3,2005 at 3:19p.m. Mark weighed in at 6 lbs. 11oz. and measured 19 inches long! Needless to say, the whole family is thrilled, especially grandparents Karla and Jim Watts and Lis Kupsc, all of Cohasset.

Congratulations to all on the birth of this bouncing, baby boy

YOUTH LEADER

Miss Callie Ernst of Cohasset has recently been recommended by faculty at Thayer Academy for the National Youth Leadership Forum on Medicine, taking place in Washington, D.C. from June 19-28. Callie will join 350 other high school students from around the country who demonstrate academic excellence, leadership potential and an interest in a career in medicine. What an experience.

LEHIGH GRAD

Lehigh University recently held its137th commencement ceremony and Daniel Morse of Cohasset was awarded a B.A. with a major in English . Congratulations.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations to Laura Marks, daughter of Dave and Kathy Marks, for being named to the Emmanuel College dean's list for her freshman year with a 3.7 GPA. Her family is so proud. Great work, Laura!

STUDIED ABROAD

On May 15th Naomi Alexandra Ansbergs received a B.A. in psychology from Smith College. While at Smith Naomi earned dean's list status. In her junior year she took part in the study abroad program which took her to the University of Canterbury in Christchurch, New Zealand. During the three-week semester break there she went to New South Wales, Australia to work on an organic farm and ended up managing the farm alone for two weeks. For the summer following junior year Naomi interned at a progressive organic farm and healing center in Poland.

Your family and friends are all very proud of you, Naomi!

STONEHILL GRADUATE

Congratulations to Craig Edward Davis who recently graduated from Stonehill College.

HATS OFF

Hats off to Elyse Portanova of Cohasset on her graduation from South Shore Vo-Tech in Hanover. All the best for a great future, Elyse!

ASP (FUN)DRAISER

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will hold a fundraiser on June 11 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. This will be a Yard Sale/ Flea Market/ Craft fair in the Super Stop & Shop parking lot on Route 3A. There will be fun for the whole family, including face painting, food and lots of interesting items to peruse. You might even find a great present for Father's Day! All proceeds will go to the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project that annually takes approximately 200 volunteers to the Appalachian region to do home repair for impoverished families

BACHELOR'S DEGREES

Congratulations to Maureen Equi and Andi M. Shaughnessy, who were awarded bachelor's degrees at Manhattan College's 163rd Undergraduate Commencement.

YEARBOOKS SOUGHT

Do you have old Cohasset yearbooks in your attic? The Cohasset Historical Society is looking for a few volumes in order to complete their archives. If any one has a yearbook from 1962, 1980, 1983, 1988, 1998, 2002 or 2003 and would be willing to donate it, the Society would be grateful. The Society actively maintains and collects Cohasset memorabilia so please think of them before discarding your treasures. Call (781) 383-1434 or stop by 106 S. Main St.

ARTS FESTIVAL

The 50th annual South Shore Art Center Arts Festival will be held Father's Day Weekend, June 17-19! This year promises to be better than ever with great music, food, art and over 90 craft exhibitors. The Art Center needs volunteers throughout the day on Sunday and particularly are in need of volunteers during Saturday's 3:30-5:30 and 5:30-7:30 shifts. For more information contact Diane Kennedy at 781-383-2787 or email festival@ssac.org

STRAWBERRY FEST

Got a sweet tooth? Cohasset's Second Congregational Church will host its annual Strawberry Festival alongside the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common, Friday, June 17 through Sunday, June 19. The church's brick courtyard (next to Town Hall) will be transformed into an outdoor café where visitors can sit and relax, and enjoy a snack, lunch or dinner brought to their table by friendly wait staff. (Indoor tables are also available.) Festival fare includes grilled burgers and hotdogs, cold drinks and SCC's very popular strawberry shortcakes. Shortcakes and more will also be available "to go" for those who wish to enjoy there treats as they explore the exhibits and attractions at the Arts Festival on the Common. As always, proceeds support local charities in need including the Social Service League of Cohasset, the Martha Learning Center and Wellspring in Hull. Strawberry Festival hours are Friday afternoon, June 17, from 2 to 7 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 6 p.m

SCHOOLS TAKE PART

In honor of the South Shore Art Center's 50th anniversary year, the South Shore Art Center has invited 15 area schools to participate in a collaborative project. Each school received a 4 ft. x 5 ft. canvas and paints to produce a piece based on the theme: Our Town - Outside the Frame. These 15 works will be installed as one collaborative piece which will be featured in its own tent at the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival.

The official unveiling of the project will take place on Friday, June 17 at 6 p.m. on Cohasset Common. Musical entertainment will be provided by the Cohasset Middle/High School Jazz Ensemble.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by noon. I will no longer be accepting items that are phoned in.

All items need to be emailed or mailed to me to be included in the column.

Rusty Skippers have more polish but still have fun

Band celebrates its first 10 years

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

In 10 years, the Rusty Skippers Band has gone from being a hastily assembled marching band for one occasion to an accomplished, full-repertoire concert band for many occasions.

Or as long-running original member and trombonist Rob Hillman of Cohasset, puts it, "We've gone from being a marching band that plays an occasional concert to a concert band that occasionally marches."

For the Rusty Skippers, the noteworthy musical progress over the last decade is as much cause for celebration as having lasted long enough for a 10th anniversary. And the Rusty Skippers indeed plan to celebrate a decade together as a band throughout this month with a series of local concerts the band calls its Spring Tour, beginning this Sunday with a show at Sunrise Assisted Living off King Street.

Other concerts to follow include Friday, June 17 at the Relay For Life, a fundraising walkathon for the American Cancer Society, and Saturday, June 18 at the South Shore Arts Festival. Both events take place in town.

"What started out as a band put together on very short notice to play two songs for the Cohasset Harborfest one year is now a legitimate concert band with an hour-long musical program containing a wide variety of material," said Betts Murray of Cohasset, another original member and one of the Rusty Skippers' two flutists, along with Kitty Whitley, also an original and a Cohasset resident.

The Cohasset Harborfest where the Rusty Skippers made its debut almost by accident was in 1995. The band was formed for the occasion at the enthusiastic suggestion of the late Rev. Edward T. Atkinson of the First Parish Church. Atkinson passed away only two months later in August of that year but the band continued, always maintaining a connection with First Parish.

"We've gone from being a marching band that plays an occasional concert to a concert band that occasionally marches."
— Rob Hillman, trombonist

The Rusty Skippers chose their name "Skippers" after the name of the Cohasset High School teams, and "Rusty" based on the open membership of any brass, woodwind and drum musicians high school age and up. Or as Murray puts it, "Even if you haven't played music for a long time, you're always welcome, no matter how rusty you are."

The open membership has made the Skippers a diverse group over its first decade, with the current band members ranging in age from college age to 85. Much of the membership has consisted of former high school and college band musicians and, notably, many of the current bandmates are also originals.

The band plays what its members themselves describe as classic marching band songs (John Philip Sousa, George M. Cohan), show music and Dixieland jazz. The typical set repertoire includes everything from known brass-band standards such as "76 Trombones" and "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" to obscurities like "Black Cat Rag" and "Radetsky March" and even a modern pop standard like the Beatles' "When I'm Sixty-Four."

All of the band members, usually numbering around 20 at any given point, have or have had regular jobs. Murray and Hillman are both attorneys and Whitley is a retired schoolteacher. Other members have professions in the health, banking, timber and antiques fields and come from a range of towns including Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Marshfield and Plymouth as well as Cohasset

Flutist and original member of the band, Betts Murray marches down Elm Street with the rest of the Rusty Skippers.

Murray shares some favorite memories of playing with the Rusty Skippers in the band's first 10 years. Among them, she names "always the warm greetings of the crowds along Main Street and the rest of the parade route" for the Harborfest Parade, which the band played from 1995 until Harborfest disbanded in '99. Also, she recalled, "playing the Star Spangled Banner with the Cohasset Middle High School band."

Most amusingly, Murray remembers the Skippers playing the Harborfest Parade during the thunderstorm in 1997, "with only a few members (smart ones) dropping out."

Regarding the Skippers most recent musical progress and success, Murray gives most of the due credit to the band's musical director, Steve Biagini, who is also the instrumental music director at the Deer Hill School

"Steve (Biagini) is the one who has found most of our music, and organizes our rehearsals," she says. "He has an enthusiasm that's very contagious, and uses e-mail very effectively to any number of up to 40 musicians who've played with us over time. He generally has a very can-do attitude."

The Rusty Skippers play their aforementioned Spring Tour each June as part of the band's annual concert schedule. The Skippers have also played the Cohasset Memorial Day Parade each year since 1999. Also, the band is a regular during the holiday season for Cohasset's Tree-Lighting and Jingle Bell Walk, as well as its free concert on the date of the Village Fair, taking collection for the Cohasset Food Pantry.

We'll make you smile.

'Classy class' looks to the future

be showcased in the years to come and said 10 years from now, she would imagine some could be seen editing the Boston Globe, playing with the Boston Pops, or in the top 10 video countdown on MTV.

Over their six-year career together at the combined middle-high school, Rizzotti said the class has become close and has survived all the drama that comes with living in a small town, "Where everyone knows not only your name, but your latest crush."

As they venture out into the unknown, Rizzotti encouraged the group to "Keep an open mind," and take advantage of talking to new people and experiencing new things outside the walls of their small town.

Although only in her first year at the helm of the district, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said looking at the class profile, it is easy to see, "You have accomplished much in the past four years."

Walsh remarked on their achievements in sports, noting there were 26 members of the senior class who served as captain of a sports team this year alone. "This is a credit to your leadership," she said.

She mentioned the various awards in the arts students have received at both the local and state level, as well as the volunteer work the students have participated in.

"Today you receive your diploma, your ticket to your next adventure."
— Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh

Walsh said their outstanding achievements will lead 92 percent of the class to pursue degrees from four-year colleges. She said acceptances have been granted from top schools including Brown University, Harvard University, Syracuse University, Boston College, and Worcester Polytechnic Institute.

"You are prepared to enter the next phase in your life," she said, and reminded students, "Wherever you travel, don't forget where you came from."

"Today you receive your diploma, your ticket to your next adventure," she said.

In a town like Cohasset, many children go throughout their entire school career together. Salutatorian Jon Grimm recalled times spent with classmates on the Osgood Elementary School playground roughly 13 years ago. Now, ready to receive their diplomas, Grimm said they are each faced with a "Vast ocean of opportunities."

Grimm noted the many ways in which the class excels including the arts, on the sports fields, and academically, and encouraged them to make use of their talents and make a difference moving forward.

"Be the change you wish to see in the world," he said.

"Congratulations to the class of '05. Stay classy — I know you will."

As class valedictorian, Toby Norman joked, "I was tempted to fail a few classes just so I wouldn't have to make a speech."

However, Norman brought the class back to the fall of 2001 and the way it felt to enter high school, only to have their perceptions of the world change drastically a few days later as a result of September 11.

Norman also noted the advances which have been made in science and technology, bringing about some "Serious ethical questions," for which their generation will be responsible for providing many of the answers.

"We won't always have the wisdom of teachers or parents, we can only bring what we have learned from them," he said.

Norman said while they may take different paths, they will move forward together, and looking out at the faces of his classmates said, "I truly believe the future is in good hands."

Cohasset High School Principal Jack DeLorenzo, choking back tears, presented the class for graduation, and said, "I will always remember you in my heart and in my memory." Pausing to collect himself before handing over their diplomas, he gave them one last bit of advice.

"Remember these three things: who loves you, who's proud of you, and make good choices."

Girl Scout signups June 13 at Town Hall

Cohasset Girl Scouts will hold a new scout registration at the town hall on Monday, June 13, 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Registration is open to all Cohasset girls entering kindergarten this fall through grade 12.

Registration is $10. Parents interested in serving as troop leaders are encouraged to also sign up at registration. After June 13, registration forms will be available from the Cohasset Recreation Dept.

Girls already in scouting will get registration forms from troop leaders and do not need to register at town hall.

Special honors at graduation for friends of the senior class

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While graduation day is a time for the senior class to shine, this year's ceremony held Saturday June 4 at the South Shore Music Circus, honored some adults who have helped make Cohasset High School a better place.

A very touching tribute was paid to longtime custodian William "Bill" McArthur, who passed away this March of a heart attack after using the snow blower at the school.

Cohasset Principal Jack DeLorenzo said McArthur will be greatly missed by both students and staff.

"He was very well respected and we would like to recognize him for his more than 35 years of dedicated service," he said, holding up a wooden plaque in McArthur's honor.

McArthur's wife Rebecca Bates-McArthur and one of their sons came up on the stage to accept the plaque on Bill's behalf. While tears welled up in the eyes of many, the audience rose from their chairs to give Bill's family a standing ovation.

But after DeLorenzo's presentation, Assistant Principal Michael Gill asked him to step aside from the podium, as it was DeLorenzo's turn to accept a plaque for the many roles he has played in the school over his 19 years of service. DeLorenzo, the assistant principal at the school for many years, served as interim principal this year. He will hand over the reins to Holbrook Junior Senior High School Principal Joel Antolini.

Gill said there is no way to measure the hours DeLorenzo has put in at the school, as he has always been accessible no matter the time, day or night. A Cohasset resident, who sent his own children through the town's school system, DeLorenzo has always been available at a moment's notice to come to the school for anything, whether it be pipes bursting in the middle of a cold winter's night, or simply a student forgetting a book in their locker, he said.

> "I can't imagine anyone more dedicated than Jack."
> — Assistant Principal Mike Gill

"I can't imagine anyone more dedicated than Jack," Gill said.

A very emotional DeLorenzo accepted his plaque, but was even more surprised with what the PSO then presented.

Linda Bolster of the middle-high school PSO said because DeLorenzo has done so much for so many over his 19 years at the school, they wanted to give him something special — a 10-day trip to Italy for two.

Wiping the tears away from his eyes , DeLorenzo, dressed in white pants, a blue shirt suit jacket and blue and white striped tie — Cohasset's colors — stood on the stage and smiled at the audience, once again on their feet giving a loud round of applause. He then gave a waive to graduates, who shouted "Mr. D!" from their seats.

"Now I'm supposed to continue?" joked a very emotional DeLorenzo, coming back to the microphone to present the students for graduation. For a moment, he turned his back to the crowd and took a deep breath, before thanking everyone for his very generous gift, thanking Gill for his continuing dedication at the school, and the students "For making this the most memorable of all my years in education."

Also recognized that afternoon were Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey for her 11 years of service to the town. She will be returning to her former profession in the publishing industry.

Math teacher Maura Devin was recognized for her 18 years in the district and her service in the Cohasset Teachers' Association. Devin served as an executive board member on the CTA and was also a middle-school team leader.

Genevieve "Gene" Brown was recognized for her 36-years of service as a special education teacher, primarily at Deer Hill School.

English teacher Marie Schleiff was recognized for 35 years of service both as a teacher and as a member of the Cohasset Teachers' Association, including her service as past president.

Math teacher Elizabeth "Betty" Beatson was recognized for 36 years of teaching including her longtime membership on the Executive Board of the Cohasset Teachers' Association.

William Kite, who was not able to attend graduation due to his son's wedding, was also recognized for three decades of service in the English department, including several years as its chairman.

DeLorenzo thanked the teachers for their years of service adding, "The success of our seniors is an individual accomplishment achieved only with the help and support of a caring community."

Finally ... success! Every time I walk in the door at Fitness Together I feel energized. When I walk out, I just feel good. It doesn't get any better than that! It did not over-sell - it did not make a promise. But it did offer me an opportunity to work with someone to create the personalized program that I had always tried to create on my own. Sure, I went to the gym, and I also have a shelf of books and videos with all the promises that scream from every headline... you know the ones I am talking about. I felt that I must be the only person who failed at all these self-structured programs. The one dimensional approach never worked beyond a week. I realized that if I was going to win at this game, it would take a plan.

CMI fund-raiser party at River Club

The Cohasset Maritime Institute launches its 10th season with a Texas hold-'em, Stroke of Luck party on Friday, June 24, 7:30 p.m., at the River Club on Border St., in Scituate. Tickets are $25 per person, with an additional $25 tournament fee for those players wanting to try their luck at the cards.

Rowing into this spring, CMI is embarking on a major capital campaign to fund the purchase and construction of three ocean-going Gigs - four-man slide seat boats. The three new boats will replace those leased boats that have been the anchors of both the youth and adult CMI programs.

Seating is limited. To make reservations call Lisa Hewitt Dick 781-383-0204, or Susan Galligan 781-383-0765, or email LMH@comcast.net

Farmer's Market season opener

Opening day for the 2005 season of Cohasset Farmer's Market is Thursday, June 16 on Cohasset Common. The Cow Bell Rings at 2:30 p.m. In keeping with tradition, the season opener will be dedicated to the town's civil servants, who will be on hand with police cars and fire trucks for the dedication ceremony at 4 p.m.

For all those driving in front of our police and fire stations on opening day, please give two honks for "thank you," and let's overwhelm them with appreciation. We don't need a crisis to remember how lucky we are to have such dedicated men and women keeping us safe in our community.

Music Circus for kids

Cohasset Recreation offers registration for the Music Circus Children's Show open to children in the playground programs. Children will attend the 10:30 a.m. performances on Thursdays at a group rate. Registrations must be made two weeks prior to the show date as indicated below. No late registrations can be accepted. Payments must be made at the Recreation office at Town Hall, Tuesdays between 9 a.m. and noon, or between 5 and 7 p.m. in the evening on the dates, indicted on the far right column below. Payment for "Snow White" (show date July 7) is due June 14. Tickets are $6.50.

Lobster roll orders now being taken

Lobster lovers will thrill to hear that First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church on Cohasset Common will again hold its lobster roll sale June17, June 18 and June 19, at the South Shore Arts Center's Festival on the Common.

Rolls will be made fresh and sold all day. The price is $12 for an all-meat lobster roll and a bag of potato chips.

Committee co-chairman Lucia Woods says, "It's the perfect June meal. Have a lobster roll with us and then a strawberry shortcake dessert across the common at the Second Congregational Church. It's a truly delicious experience."

Pre-orders are encouraged. Co-chairman Betsy Millard reports that in previous years the supply sold out each day. Mail orders must be sent by June 14 to the Parish House, 23 N. Main St., Cohasset, MA, 02025. Checks should be made out to First Parish Cohasset. Telephone orders may be placed by calling Woods at 781-383-1555.

Orders may be picked up at the parish house Friday and Saturday, 11a.m. to 2 p.m. and 4 to 7 p.m., and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. A pick-up parking area will be available in front of the building.

First Parish is all set to take orders for yummy lobster rolls.

Shortcake delivery to local businesses

As part of its 17th annual Strawberry Festival, Cohasset's Second Congregational Church will offer free shortcake delivery on Friday afternoon, June 17th to local businesses ordering five or more fresh strawberry shortcakes. The church hopes to sell more than 2,500 shortcakes during this annual fundraiser supporting local charities including the Social Service League of Cohasset, Mary Martha's Learning Center and Wellspring in Hull.

Strawberry Shortcakes are just $4 each and are made with fresh buttermilk biscuits, local strawberries and mounds of whipped cream. Call the Church at (781) 383-0345 and place your order by noon on Thursday, June 16th.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A message to graduates

You undoubtedly began your senior year of high school with mixed feelings. For some of you, your graduation day is coming too soon or not quickly enough. The future may seem foreboding or exciting.

These hopes and uncertainties are natural. Until now, you have been largely responsible for attending class, working a part time job, enjoying co-curricular activities, friends, dating, etc. Your world will soon require you to accept more responsibility for financial decisions, academic choices and social behavior.

The decisions you make in these areas during the next few years will have implications for your future. In some instances you will strike out or succeed beyond your wildest dreams. Don't be afraid of failure.

Life is full of examples about individuals who experienced the agony of defeat before they enjoyed the thrill of victory.

Abraham Lincoln lost an election bid to Congress and the Senate prior to being elected president in 1860. During the years that followed his major decisions were often criticized by nay-sayers and political opportunists. History reveals Lincoln is responsible for preserving a nation that is currently the world's sole super power.

"There are only three types of people in this world," President Theodore Roosevelt once stated. "One that knows victory, one that knows defeat and one that knows neither."

Success is more than just getting a college education so you can find a lucrative paying job. The lifestyle you live will be defined by future generations of family members.

Confederate Army General Robert E. Lee was left nearly penniless after the southern armies he commanded were defeated during the Civil War. Shortly after the war ended, an insurance company asked Lee if they could use his name to sell policies for $50,000. This amount would equal close to $1 million in today's dollars. Lee refused the offer despite being in debt by saying, "my name is not for sale."

He also urged his fellow southerners to accept the outcome of the war and to be responsible citizens of the reunited stated.

Lee's stances won the admiration of Americans in the northern states that he fought against. Historians credit Lee with helping to heal a nation that was severely broken by the war.

When Lee died in 1870, his funeral was packed by scores of U.S. military leaders and soldiers he fought against. Many of the children of these veterans eventually attended Jefferson University where Lee served as president in the years that followed the war. Lee continues to be widely admired to this day by Americans in the northern and southern states because of his integrity.

In the years ahead, financial and career opportunities will loom that appear to offer a shortcut to riches. Don't be taken in. Give all prospects careful thought and heed the Biblical admonitions to, "beware of the deceit fullness of riches and to seek treasures that won't rust or wither away."

Place a premium on cultivating meaningful relationships with family and friends. The rewards from these connections can't be purchased or valued by the dollar bill.

The Mariner staff congratulates all high school graduates on their academic success and wishes them the best in the years to follow.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Cohasset seniors bid a fond adieu to Jack DeLorenzo

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Hats off to everyone!

TO THE EDITOR:

To begin, hats off to Chairman Koed and newly elected Selectman Vanderweil for taking a daring stand on the issue of the vacant property adjacent to Fairoaks Lane. Both individuals stood up for what they thought and knew was best for the "entire town," not just a chosen few. Their two to three votes which would decide to build or not to build on the vacant Sohier Street property sure took a lot of guts on the part of these two guys. Voting in a hostile environment, they voted to build on the vacant property and save the town money in its quest to establish senior housing, sure made sense to me. How could they have voted any other way?

Also, hats off to our three remaining selectmen, Spofford, Sullivan and Dormitzo for siding with their supporters who have strength in numbers, as the Fairoaks Lane gang had. I don't blame you guys a bit for your decision. I'm assuming the Fairoaks Lane gang supported all of you in past elections and will in future elections. Good Vote! These three selectmen must have remembered that the town had voted to leave the property vacant at town meeting. How could they have voted any other way?

Last but not least, hats off to the Fairoaks Lane gang. I don't want anyone to think I'm using the work "gang" in a demeaning sense, I don't mean it to be. I feel it just kind of fits, and did what any other concerned property owner would do to protect your property and privacy. After all, who wants to look out the window and see more houses, kids, and cars when you can look out and see the woods and wild animals. Makes sense to me! So, the political process is alive and well, even in our little town of Cohasset. What a great place to live!

Joseph A. Rosano
48 Howe Road

The right decision

TO THE EDITOR:

As a family who has lived in Cohasset for generations and loves the town, I applaud the outcome of the recent override election.

First, let me share my perspective. I am a life-long resident with a modest home at 52 Mill Lane. No mortgage. Yearly gross income: $17,450. Real estate taxes: $4,034. Work history: former 25-year employee in town treasurer's office with fixed income town pension. Final Town salary was $14/hr. Deceased husband's social security based on 1964 earnings.

• Solutions offered by the town: a. deferred tax(at 8.5 percent) which leaves a burden for your family, b. Reverse mortgage for which most people are not eligible., c. Lack of affordable housing and nothing accomplished as yet.

• Some solutions for town budget: There needs to be some work done with both municipal and school unions on step raises.

In conclusion, the Beechwood area stands a virtually no chance of getting central sewage or other meaningful relief. A family at 48 Mill Lane replaced its septic system at a cost of $30,000(lower than average) with no help from the town.

Nancy Snowdale
52 Mill Lane

Used soccer gear sought

TO THE EDITOR:

A wonderful organization called Eurosport Passback is seeking donations of gently used and clean soccer clothing and equipment to distribute to needy kids.

Now that our town soccer program has ended for the year, we have a great opportunity to contribute to this program. I am gathering jerseys, shorts, cleats, socks, shin pads and balls.

Please look for my balloon-festooned van prominently parked at the Little League cookout at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday at the Little League field complex off North Main Street.

You will find a bin in which to drop off items and a jar for spare change to fund postage. I will also leave the bin on my front steps for another week for additional drop-offs. I know we can make a difference in a child's life. Thanks for your help.

Barbara Buckley
272 N Main St.

Some comment on public comment

TO THE EDITOR:

The Mariner editorial of June 3 wisely recommends retention of a public comment period early in each meeting. The editorial also decries the uncivilized behavior of some commentators, with good reason.

People who can't keep their cool, are angrily argumentative, people who infer dishonesty or cover-up by the selectmen and similar loutish behavior should be gaveled into silence — and ejected if the behavior persists.

It is in the voters interests that the selectmen, who we have elected to conduct the town's business on our behalf, retain firm control of the meeting, while allowing reasonable and reasoned comment, mostly confined to the allotted period, from those interested enough to attend. Not many do attend, but many watch on TV and so form their opinions not only of the selectmen but of those who testify — and of those who disrupt.

The chairman of the selectmen (and the moderator at town meeting) should not tolerate intemperate behavior (or time-wasting irrelevancy). The interest of the majority is best served if civilized rules are followed.

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer Library Hours - Closed Sundays through Labor Day. Summer hours: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Middle East Lecture - Professor Lincoln P. Bloomfield of Cohasset will speak at the library on Thursday, June 16 at 10 a.m. on "The Middle East and the U.S." In his dual career as professor and government official, Professor Bloomfield has had many contacts with this region and with U.S. Middle East policies. He has been involved as a negotiator, a lecturer throughout the region, and teacher of an MIT seminar on Middle East politics. His forthcoming book, "Accidental Encounters with History: And Some Lessons Learned," will be published by Hot House Press in September.

South Shore Caregiving Collaborative - "Reminiscence: the Power and Promise of Remembering," presented by Karen Flood on Thursday, June 16 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., is a presentation for family caregivers to explore the many reasons, ways and occasions to capture memories. Participants will leave with tips for sparking meaningful memories, knowledge of their own style of recollecting and making room for new memories. A light dinner will be served. Seating is limited. Call Donna Ciappina 781-848-3910 ext. 335.

Author Event - Author Margaret McLean will discuss her book "Under Oath," a swiftly paced first degree murder and conspiracy trial set in Charlestown, Massachusetts, on Tuesday, June 21 at 10 a.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Upcoming Author Event - Nancy Geary will sign and discuss her new book, set on Cape Cod, "Being Mrs. Alcott," on Friday, August 12 at 10 a.m. in the Meeting Room.

Book Discussion Group - Join us on Friday, June 24 at 10 a.m. for coffee and discussion of "Purple Hibiscus," by Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie. Registration in advance is required. Call Judy Simons 781-383-1348.

Artist Exhibit - Pembroke artist Becky Haletky celebrates 25 years as a professional artist with a retrospective exhibit at the library through June 30. Known primarily for her realistic watercolors, Haletky has also worked in several other media over the years. The show will include hand tinted photographs, photo collages, acrylics and watercolors.

Upcoming Artist Exhibit - Brooks Kelly, a Pembroke artist, will display his works at the library from July 1 through August 31. Working in acrylic and collage, his bold, colorful style is often tinged with humor. An opening reception will be held on Thursday, July 7 from 7 to 9 p.m. All are welcome.

Single track, double track

MAKING TRACK

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

By the time you read this, the MBTA will have started clearing the area south of Sohier Street. If you have been following the clearing, you have seen that the incredible machines readily chew through all trees and undergrowth, from the largest to the smallest, at incredible rates. We do agree that when the clearing is near or behind your house it is very noisy. But, this will pass shortly, as they move on to other locations down the line.

As we mentioned in our last article, when the MBTA gets to the area about four houses south of Rocky Lane, they will clear from the right of way to North Main Street. This summer, after the clearing is completed, construction will start on a new Rocky Lane bridge. You may ask, why a bridge in Cohasset to access a small street such as Rocky Lane? Like a lot of things, there is more to this than readily meets the eye. Let's explain.

The rail system on the entire Greenbush will be a single track system. Theoretically, southbound and northbound trains cannot travel at the same time. However, if we include two parallel tracks periodically along the right of way, the trains will be able to pass. There will be four passing tracks spaced 5 to 6 miles apart, located in Braintree, Hingham, Cohasset, and Scituate. Thus when a passing situation occurs, one train will be traveling on the main line and one will be waiting on the passing track.

In Cohasset, the passing track will be between Sohier Street and lower King Street. Should an emergency happen on Rocky Lane, emergency vehicles would be blocked from access to Rocky Lane until both trains move out of the way. In the event that one of the trains is delayed or has a malfunction, this could block emergency access for a prolonged time, endangering personal property and/or life on Rocky Lane. A number of alternate access methods were looked at, but in the final analysis, there were no other reasonable access paths for emergency vehicles to get quick access. Thus, the present Rocky Lane will be closed at the railroad tracks and a new bridge will provide the sole access safely over the railroad tracks and any stopped trains.

Lastly, another comment about safety. As the MBTA's work progresses it is very important for all to stay away from the right of way and the attending construction. This is very dangerous stuff and parents need to emphasize to their children that it is no longer safe to walk on or across the rail right of way. The MBTA will be posting warning signs for trespassers at the crossings. It is in our collective best interest to heed this as a safety practice.

Safer, gentler way for a green lawn

COMMENTARY

SANDY DURANT

Do you remember lying in the grass with your childhood friends on a warm summer day chatting, trying to find recognizable shapes in the clouds, and discovering, when you rolled over on your stomach, all the tiny insects that were so amazingly busy? Some were carrying bits of soil, dead bugs or leaves hundreds of times bigger than they were? Plump earthworms? Seemingly frantic insects were racing along looking like tightrope artists disguised as dirt clumps, while others were marching in a row upside down on a fallen blade of grass. And the grasshoppers? Endless grasshoppers. I particularly remember an annoying little boy who loved to show us all the grasshoppers he had stuffed into a large Mason jar. Looking back on it, I must admit he had an amazing collection of all sizes and colors.

And if we could have looked through a high-powered microscope, we would have seen hair-like fungi woven around plant roots, torpedo-shaped Nematodes grazing on that fungi, and springtails being eaten by mites. Life underground was as busy as it was above ground. All of this "eat and be eaten" activity is essential to the health and nutrition of the very plants (millions and millions of grass plants) under and around which they lived. It's a perfect cycle: grass plants not only take up nutrients, but exude through their roots carbohydrates that feed the bacteria and fungi that break down the nitrogen, phosphorous, protein, and other elements the plants need. This symbiotic relationship took eons to evolve and never needed man to come along and add fertilizer, sprinkler systems, and chemicals to keep it going.

Think about this: the aggregate American lawn is approximately 30 million acres. When did this cultivation of the formal lawn begin? In the 1920s, there was a surge in suburban development. Starting the trend, wealthy homeowners surrounded their homes with the look of the newly popular golf links. Then after WWII, the big wave of middle-class home development and rising affluence solidly established the suburban lawn. People finally had the time, desire, and ability to work on their lawns.

Enter the lawn care chemical industry, which has pushed, over the past five decades, the standards for lawns to new heights — standards that ballooning lawn-care advertising budgets have convinced us we need to adopt. Unfortunately, as we have found new activities for our spare time, we have turned to their chemical shortcuts — packages of fertilizer and pesticides or long and short acting herbicides

Fortunately, we are all beginning to wake up and realize that we can't be killing life under our feet without having an effect on our health and well being.

that will help us achieve those industry-driven standards. We've hired and given lawn services complete freedom to use whatever is necessary to keep our lawns uniformly green and "weed" free. We've installed automatic sprinkler systems. We have kept our children and pets off the lawns when the flags go up and the chemicals have been applied to kill not only all the wonderful life we used to see but also all the life we could have seen underground with a microscope.

Fortunately, we are all beginning to wake up and realize that we can't be killing life under our feet without having an effect on our health and well being. We are realizing that we have essentially become lawn "terrorists", chemically wiping out the "good guys", the incredible, living symbiotic infrastructure of the soil while leaving it open to the "looters", the pillaging grubs and invasive weeds, etc. that only repeated applications of chemicals can keep under control.

So what to do? What is the easier, safer, and gentler way to achieve a naturally green lawn? It's very simple: test your soil, sharpen your mower blades frequently, learn about weeds and alternative ways to deal with them, and get down on your hands and knees, once in awhile to look at your lawn and the soil under it before watering it. Most importantly, bring back the life: top dress and rake in an inch of balanced, nutritious compost each spring and fall. Use organic fertilizer that can be broken down and naturally fed to grass plants. Reintroduce Nematodes, microscopic worm-like animals that cause disease in insects, particularly white grubs, sod webworms, and chinch bugs. Add grass seed mixes in the fall (you don't have to start from scratch) that naturally crowd out unwanted weeds and don't need endless watering. To speed up the soil building process you may want to add microbial innoculants, "good" bacteria and fungi that support beneficial microbes and earthworms.

Let's talk about testing. For about $9, UMass at Amherst Extension will tell you exactly what your soil needs — and doesn't need — to support a healthy lawn. www.umass.edu/plsoils/soiltest/ But remember to ask for a complete textural and nutrient analysis, which will tell you the percentage of silt, clay, and sand and how well your soil drains. The nutrient analysis will reveal both deficiencies and excesses: an excess of calcium will inhibit the uptake of such crucial plant nutrients as magnesium, boron and potassium. As an example, the browning of grass leaves isn't an indication of a deficiency, but an indication of an excess of magnesium.

Now, let's talk about grass seed. For a truly carefree lawn, plant a superior variety of hard fescue (Festuca longifolia) such as "Nordic," "Discovery," or "Oxford," bred from grass plants that survive without pampering. It is recommended that you mix fescues with perennial rye grass (avoid annual rye grass) and Dutch white clover and some bluegrass seeds for superior vigor, insect and drought resistance. These mixtures are readily available. For the first few years, re-seed annually. Cost? Seeds of premium species and cultivars are worth the extra cost as bargain seed mixes are often adulterated with weed seed.

Mowing

When you mow, set your blade height at 3 inches as taller grass will crowd out weeds, shade its own roots, and better withstand drought conditions. Leave the lawn clippings as they return nutrients to the soil. Clippings do not create thatch buildup unless you overwater causing clippings to rot instead of breaking down naturally. In the fall, mowing leaves with mulching blades or mowing twice and leaving the chopped leaves on the lawn will cut fertilizer need by 50 percent.

You can water less if you water more deeply and in the early morning. Depending on rainfall, healthy lawns need 1 to 1-1/2 ins. (collected water under the sprinkler) of overhead watering once a week if there has not been an inch of rain within the past seven days.

If you want to give your lawn an extra boost of fertilizer in the spring, choose a low nitrogen organic fertilizer with an NPK (nitrogen-phosphorous-potassium) ratio of approximately 3-1-2. Never use more than 1 pound per 1,000 square feet.

Digging out weeds is best, but remember to fill the hole you have created with some compost (if the area is large) and grass seed. Keep moist until grass sprouts. Weeds will return only if their seeds are the only ones available to fill empty areas. For spot weed control, use a vinegar or vinegar combination product and for larger areas use an organic corn-gluten product that prevents weed seeds from germinating.

Once again you will be able to let your children and pets roll around in your grass and discover the intricate and very happy life of a natural lawn.

How do you spell 'fun?'

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

We had another demonstration last week of a contest that is a useless as . . . . well, you dairy farmers among us know what I mean.

I speak of the 78th annual Scripps National Spelling Bee, which drew 146 boys and 127 girls ages 9 to 14 to Washington to show off how well they learned words like "radicchio" (an Italian chicory) while the rest of us were lighting up and learning to yell, "Beat it, the fuzz!" down by the tennis courts.

The winner was Anurag Kashyap, an eighth grader from Poway, Calif., and an Indian, or a Native Asian as it's probably PC to say, who won $28,000 in cash, scholarships and bonds, not to mention the envy of every mom and dad of Anglo Saxon origin whose offspring has trouble with words longer than "cat" (a feline animal).

Fear not.

At 14, Anurag has a long life ahead of him, but what are the chances he will ever use the word "appoggiatura" in a sentence?

It's not that the kids of Chinese and Indian descent dominate the spelling bees at all levels means they're any smarter than the Smiths, the DiBonas and the Schmidts. If the first words I had to learn to spell were "anurag" and "kashyap" I wouldn't be intimidated by the dictionary either. After nearly 60 years of associating with words of all types and meanings, I consider myself a pretty good speller, for an Anglo Saxon, that is, but I still haven't come to terms with Yaz . . . Yaste . . . you know, the guy that used to play left field for the Sox. No, not Jim Rice. I can handle that.

The word that brought the shower of goodies down on little Anurag was "appoggiatura" (an ornamental musical note), which I had never seen or heard before, not even when I was playing clarinet in Arthur Hauck's band at Braintree High. I was having trouble with plain old eighth notes at the time, I recall.

At 14, Anurag has a long life ahead of him, but what are the chances he will ever use the word "appoggiatura" in a sentence? Unless he becomes a classical musician, I'd say the chances are slim and none. I'm not sure that even Keith Lockhart and more than one member of the Boston Pops can define it much less spell it.

Or maybe he could become like the jockey that the humorist H. Allen Smith wrote about who memorized the spelling of Tchaikovsky (a Russian composer) so he would have something to talk about at cocktail parties and the chicks wouldn't think he was just another dumb jock.

As Victor Wang of Camarillo, Calif, who won in 1988 after misspelling "passementerie," "buddleia," and "balmacaan," said plaintively: "Who makes up these words, anyway?"

Anurag finished 47th in last year's National Spelling Bee and it took a year of hard study to lift him up to first. Our own representative, Akshat Shekhar of Quincy, is only 9 so he'll probably be back after his year of hard study.

Doesn't anyone know how to spell "fun" (something that kids have), anymore?

HEALTH NOTES

'Nature has a way of handling things'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

A while ago, Health Notes featured an item recounting the benefits of artificial turf. The tongue-in-cheek article went on to say that some forms of artificial turf are more economical and better for the environment than real grass. The purpose of this article is to expand on that point.

3 Jerusalem Lane has long been on environmentalists and others list of things wrong with Cohasset. Aside from poor taste, disturbance of the neighborhood, ugly structure and details, to mention a few things, the uninhabited building and the lot on which it is inappropriately placed are causing no appreciable damage to the environment. Despite the result that poor stormwater planning for the lot has created, the water that leaks off the lot and runs down Jerusalem lane is as pure as most spring water. It has no pathogens, no nutrients, no chlorine or evidence of human activity, and it tastes pretty good. The rains that fall on the yards of roof, drain into the thin soil layer which removes any evidence of acid rain, and proceeds as pure fresh water into upper Little Harbor.

The point is that if people don't actively harm the environment by their actions, nature has a way of handling things. One of the principal harmful directions modern US citizens are taking is connected with the concept that if a little is good, more is better. It certainly applies to fertilizer, food portions, houses on small lots, talk and advertising.

The point is that it's difficult to judge where to slow down or stop. In 1994, I summered in Longport, N.J., and became familiar with the town. In many ways, it was like Cohasset. It had been a haven for the rich for a hundred years, and gradually became less rural and gentrified. Then as Atlantic City, directly up the beach from Longport, took on gambling, the process went into fast forward. One-half acre lots were selling for a million dollars and enormous houses were being built onto such lots with three foot setbacks. From above, all was roofs and roads. Longport had few problems. Its waste went to sewers, the betterments were trivial compared to the price of houses, there were no lawns to speak of, and stormwater drains were all connected to ocean outfalls.

For Cohasset, the problems are much more complicated. But, except for lawn nutrients, we have been doing well. There are no egregious violations of wastewater policy either in sewering or on septic. The modest stormwater system is, at least, coping. But we are on the cusp of a change. Hopefully, there is a burgeoning understanding that, in spite of our wishes, our population, because of the proximity to Boston and the pressures of housing starts and low money cost, will increase substantially. Duxbury's population more than doubled in 15 years.

Nature is changing the environment to cope. With the increase of impervious surface; more and larger roofs, driveways, and roads, more surface water is draining into our outfalls. Some ponds have gone from salty tidal estuaries to fresh water tributaries.

And Cohasset Cove is changing. This topic has increasingly become a topic for discussion. The selectmen have been presented with a host of reports about the changes in our harbor. There is one incontrovertible fact: more fresh water is going into the cove and nature is reacting.

Thanks to several environmental groups, such as the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) and the Gulf River Watershed Association, there is a pretty good data set for the Harbor and its major tributaries. These are not perfect data, and they are certainly not complete, but the quality is good and they can tell us much. A better organized program could tell us even more. So far, what they tell us is that there are several factors affecting the environment of Cohasset Cove. The first is that its 5 or so tributaries are putting more fresh water into the Cove. According to Cove watchers, the Gulf is prospering thereby, and the Cove is losing much of its benthic or underwater habitat. In addition, the moorings are being converted into red rust at a greater rate than ever before observed. The two above phenomena are related to the presence of new fresh water in the bottom layer of water in the Cove. Some of these changes can be explained. In a future article, we will look into these occurrences and make comments on possible long term impact of such changes.

In summary, we all know the saying about the appropriate response to an inevitable unwanted act. We might as well be prepared to live with it as nature does.

Steve Bobo is a long time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Psychologist speaks about youth violence

Clinical psychologist Dr. David Shumaker will discuss "What Parents Need to Know About Youth Violence," at 7 p.m., June 12, in the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist of Cohasset. Dr. Shumaker's remarks will focus on the risk factors and underlying dynamics of youth violence. There will be ample time for questions and commentary. The program will conclude by 9 p.m.. It is an evening open to the public and sponsored by First Parish Unitarian Universalist, located on Cohasset Common. The purpose is to help prevent youth initiated violence through parent awareness.

A licensed psychologist in Massachusetts, Dr. Shumaker received his Ph.D. in clinical-community psychology from the University of South Carolina. He has done post-doctoral training in pediatric forensic psychology in Massachusetts General Hospital's Children and the Law Program. His publications include "Children Who Murder: A Psychological Perspective," which he co-authored. Dr. Shumaker is currently on the staff at Massachusetts General Hospital, teaches at Harvard Medical School, and is a Lecturer on Education at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. Locally he maintains a part-time private practice with Mar Vista Psychological Associates in Cohasset. A graduate of Cohasset High School and Harvard College, Dr. Shumaker lives in Cohasset with his wife, Tricia, and their two young sons.

For more information about this evening of lecture and discussion, please phone First Parish Unitarian Universalist, Cohasset, at 781-383-1100. For directions, visit www.first-parishcohasset.org.

Some insight into the House budget

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

I wanted to take a moment to update you on various aspects of the House budget. Every year the Governor submits his budget and it is then debated and amended in both branches and sent back for his review. The House completed its work on the budget bill a few weeks back and then the Senate undertook he task. It is our hope to have the budget to the Governor by the end of June. The total cost will be approximately $23.7 billion. When we began the process, we in the House faced a structural deficit of approximately $600 million. Also, although the forecast has improved, we are not completely out of this recession. In fact, our costs have increased every year but our annual revenue is only back to 2001 levels.

LOCAL AID — This year's budget increased local aid by over $100 million dollars to assist communities with costs of police, fire and other essential municipal services. This represents an increase, albeit minor, to our community. However, given the past several years of cuts, it is the first positive step forward in several years.

_CHAPTER 70 EDUCATION FUNDING — We increased education funding to communities by $105 million. Also, I supported an amendment which increased per pupil spending by at least $50. These funds are targeted to communities, such as ours, that have been disproportionately reduced over the past several years. If the Senate concurs, and the Governor does not veto it, this means an increase of $178,150 for the Town of Hingham. This amendment lays an important foundation as we move into the next phase of education reform funding.

SPECIAL EDUCATION CIRCUIT BREAKER —This law states that after a community pays three times the foundation amount (this is what the state says it costs to educate a child per year) of approximately $8,000, the state will pay 75 percent of the balance of all special education costs. Given the price of out of district placements, this law has been critical to assisting communities in preparing and paying for special education students. An example would be if it costs $100,000 a year to educate a special education student, the Town would pick up the first $24,000 (3 x $8,000 per student per year cost), then the state would pay $57,000 of the remaining $76,000. Many local officials have indicated to me that maintaining funding for this law is a top priority. The House budget does just that.

HOSPITALS —Federal law requires all hospitals to treat any patient that enters regardless of that person's ability to pay for the care they receive. The state, many years ago, established a fund to help hospitals meet this un-funded federal mandate. It is critical to community hospitals to help them offset these costs. We passed an amendment that added $86 million to this fund to be certain hospitals such as South Shore Hospital and Quincy Hospital have the resources they need to care for all of us.

ILLEGAL IMMIGRANT TUITION — You may have read recently that included in the first draft of the House budget was language that allowed illegal or undocumented immigrants, residing in this state, to take advantage of the lower resident tuition rate at our public colleges. These are individuals, who came to this country legally, but the document that allowed their entry (such as a travel visa, work visa, school visa) has expired and they are currently in the country illegally with no intention of leaving. I supported the amendment which struck this language and it passed overwhelmingly. My belief is we do not reward illegal behavior. Furthermore, if there is additional money available it should be utilized to reduce tuition and fees.

FORE RIVER BRIDGE E-MAIL NOTIFICATION — Last year I, along with other legislators, established an email notification system to warn residents when the Fore River Bridge is scheduled to be raised. Unfortunately, Federal law does not allow us at the state level to restrict access during peak traffic times. Please email me should you wish to be added to this system. Also, please understand that the times are subject to change on occasion because of weather and tides.

As always, I look forward to your input. It is important for legislators to hear from the people they represent. If you have a concern, comment or suggestion, please email me at Rep.GarrettBradley@hou.state.ma.us or call me at the office at (617) 722-2396 or at home (781) 740-3127. Lastly, I have opened a district office above the Son's Of Italy Hall. I hold office hours there about once a week and hope to have it staffed this summer. Please stop by and say hello.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Cohasset.

Highlights from the senate side of the budget

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

Many highlights are notable from the 2006 Senate Budget debates that I want to share, including the restoring of local aid and education funding cuts that have impacted nearly every city and town in the Commonwealth over the last three years.

Local Aid - The Senate budget guarantees every school district receives an increase of at least $50 a student and gives communities $100 million more in lottery payments. This budget also would restore full lottery payments to cities and towns by accelerating the schedule to uncap lottery distributions beginning in FY06 instead of FY07. Additionally, the budget provides $15 million for cutting water and sewer rates for 2.5 million residents and businesses.

Education - The Senate budget dedicates significant resources to build upon the gains of education reform over the last 12 years to provide a seamless education for students from pre-kindergarten through college. Educational appropriations include:

$12-1/2 million for the new Dept. of Early Education and Care to develop standards for all child care services and educational programs so that children are ready to learn when they enter kindergarten.

A 4.7 percent increase in K-12 spending which includes $55 million in reserves to fund future legislation to reform the distribution formula for school aid and help under-performing and at-risk school districts.

Forty five million dollars to offset the cost of regional transportation for local school districts--a $7 million increase over last year's budget.

An additional $18.3 million for University of Massachusetts campuses.

A 7 percent and a 6 percent increase for state and community colleges.

Health Care - Massachusetts is at the crossroads for cutting the cost of medical care while improving quality and access to our medical institutions. Faced with the potential loss of millions in federal Medicaid funds, the Senate budget reaffirms its commitment to the Commonwealth's safety net of caring for the uninsured by:

Investing $7.39 billion in MassHealth programs that will provide coverage for a nearly a million low income residents and help cut the number of uninsured, including 3,500 elderly and disabled legal immigrants.

Fully funding the free care pool at $535 million and increase payments to distressed providers to over $40 million.

Fully funding the Children's Medical Security plan at $21.7 million to provide basic health coverage to every child in the Commonwealth.

Appropriating $2 million to the children's immunization program.

Public Safety - Many communities are still facing severely depleted police and emergency first responder forces. Several of the following proposals in the Senate budget bolster local law enforcement efforts to increase neighborhood patrols and special investigations to protect residents.

Funds two new state police cadet classes at $11.5 million

Provides $1.2 million for state and local patrols targeting gang-related activity.

Doubles funding for the state police crime lab to expand DNA and toxicology testing capacity and better coordinate all forensic science resources.

$2 million in earmarks to track level three sex offenders on probation with global positioning systems bracelets.

5% increase in funding for District Attorneys to help pay for salary increases for assistant district attorneys, whose average salaries are between $32, 000 and $42,000.

A budget Conference Committee is expected to be named in the next week that will begin hammering out differences in the Senate and House budgets.

Local action

Plymouth and Brockton Bus Service Line - Termination of the Plymouth and Brockton Bus Service line was prevented after I secured funding in the Senate budget for this program. Facing a $10 million deficit, the MBTA Board of Directors voted to eliminate the subsidy for the Inter-district Bus Program. This expenditure provides direct financial assistance to private bus companies who run service during commuting hours along the South Shore. The inter-district bus service gives thousands of commuters a cost effective and convenient form of transportation into Boston and other areas of the state. In 2004, over 330,000 riders used the bus lines to travel to work, access health care, and go to school. The P & B service line is the primary transportation service for many of the disabled and poor and the elimination of the subsidy would have jeopardized transportation access for thousands of commuters. This service was a needed expenditure. Funding secured for continuation of P & B Bus Service at $2 million.

Land Transfer to Bare Cove Park - My amendment to the budget that transfers 15 acres of property from Massachusetts Highway Department to the town of Hingham was accepted by the Senate. I worked over a year with Hingham Town Officials and the Bare Cove Park Committee to make this area as part of the park. Hingham's Bare Cove Park Committee unanimously endorses the transfer of the parcel which will be incorporated into Bare Cove Park. Hingham has undertaken significant improvements in its holdings along the Back River and has indicated an interest to demolish the unsightly buildings that are covered with graffiti. I am working with Town Administrator Charles Christello and state agencies on a plan to demolish and remove abandoned bunkers in the 15 acre parcel.

Fifteen acre transfer to town of Hingham.

Maritime Trail - The Hull Lifesaving Museum expressed an interest in developing a new program known to be called the Maritime Trail. The purpose of the trail will be to link all of the coastal museums in Massachusetts. I was able to lobby for funding for this new program that will provide for another tourist activity for our region.

Twenty five thousand dollars for planning of new Maritime Trail.

Norwell Friendship Home - The Friendship Home provides quality care services to individuals with developmental disabilities. The community home gives respite to children and adults alike and works to improve the lives of those with disabilities and to the lives of their families. The Norwell Friendship Home assists more than 1200 families in South Coastal Region of the State. The home is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and offers educational, social, and recreational activities. Also, the home aids families in emergency situations, overnight care, and is a social network for others in the community. I am proud that I was able to secure funding for this organization that truly is a public service to many.

Fifty thousand dollars for Norwell Friendship Home

Other Noteworthy Items

Chapter 70 Reform - Senate Republicans attempted to reform Chapter 70 Education and Equalization but this failed.

The Senate again refused to debate the voter approved income tax rollback or even phase down income tax after the Senate President ruled the measure out of order. Republican attempts to debate the Senate President's ruling were stifled by parliamentary maneuvering by the majority party.

The Senate did not include a provision providing in state tuition rates for illegal aliens. This passed the Senate last year as I was the only Senator offering an amendment to prevent this. Fortunately, Governor Romney vetoed this measure last year.

State Senator Robert Hedlund represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

Reunion of Commuter Boat Ancient Mariners

The Commuter Boat Ancient Mariners, a collection of hardy souls who rode the commuter boat from Hingham to Boston in the 1970s and 1980s, are planning a jovial get-together aboard Massachusetts Bay Lines' "MV Massachusetts" on Tuesday evening, June 21.

The gathering is planning to welcome back Charles and Marion Bush, long-time commuter boat friends now living in California, and to see friends old and new from Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Weymouth. Former commuter boat captains Norm Rogers and Roger Concannon are also expected to join the reunion. A number of the Ancient Mariners have retired, but many, who are not so ancient, are still commuting to Boston on the ferries.

A number of the Ancient Mariners have retired, but many, who are not so ancient, are still commuting to Boston on the ferries.

Chaired by Jim Pilalas of Hingham and Norma Springer of Weymouth, the Commuter Boat Ancient Mariners, and friends old and new, are invited to join the crew and festivities for the evening.

Also in the works, and to be announced on June 21, are the details of a festive 30th Hingham Commuter Boat anniversary event, planned for later in the year. This will celebrate both the beginning of the ferry service to Hingham in 1975, and those captains, crew members, vessels and individuals who have helped the commuter boat succeed over the years.

The cost for the Commuter Boat Ancient Mariners' evening aboard the "MV Massachusetts" is $25 per person. A light buffet is planned and there will be a cash bar. Vessel boarding time at the Hingham Commuter Boat pier, also known as the "Visser Pier," at Hewitt's Cove in the Hingham Shipyard is 6:30 p.m. and departure is scheduled for 7 p.m. sharp. The "MV Massachusetts" will be back at the dock at 10 p.m.

Confirmed reservations are due by June 10. Mail your check and reservation to Jim Pilalas (check payable to Jim Pilalas) at 32 Lincoln Street, Hingham, MA 02043. For information or reservations, call Jim Pilalas at 781-749-2027 or Norma Springer at 781-335-1079.

OBITUARIES

Lois Weltman

Founded first shelter for homeless families

Effervescence personified has passed away. Lois Weltman, 70, longtime resident of Cohasset and Newton, volunteer and gardener extraordinaire, and the best party thrower on the South Shore, died Monday, June 6, 2005, in her sleep.

Famous for her Fourth of July bashes, she was the Pied Piper. Lobster and clams steamed on seaweed-covered rocks were followed by the piece de resistance — Lois riding in on the window of the old-fashioned ice cream truck with 30 children surrounding her.

Her signal achievement was in the area of Boston's homeless community, serving as president of Shelter, Inc., organizing and founding the first family shelter in Massachusetts, for which she received the Distinguished Service Award. Thereafter she founded the Commonwealth Fund for the Homeless of Massachusetts and served on the Governor's Advisory Committee on the Homeless.

She was president of Boston Children's Theatre. She was a director of the United Community Planning Corporation before it merged into United Way. A long time trustee of Combined Jewish Philanthropies, she helped found the Young Women's Division and was the recipient of CJP's Young Leadership Award in 1964.

Born in Louisville, Kentucky, she came to Massachusetts in 1952 to attend Wellesley College, from which she graduated as a Wellesley Scholar in 1956. She attended the Harvard Graduate School of Education, Bentley College and Wellesley College for accounting, finance and business management courses.

It was when she was at Wellesley that she met the near 50-year love of her life, David. Abe Sachar, then president of Brandeis, and his wife, had teas to introduce eligible Jewish singles to each other. As Lois was leaving the tea with her sister, David noticed how well Lois's sister Bonnie recovered herself after falling on the stairs and he turned to Mrs. Sachar and asked, who is that beautiful girl? Mrs. Sachar, thinking that the older daughter had to be married off first, responded quickly, "Oh you don't want her, you want to meet her sister, Lois." So David arranged for a foursome with his friend Tom, making Tom promise that if David didn't like Lois, Tom would switch. They never switched. It was love at first sight that lasted until their last day together, Sunday, when they shared a boat ride through the gulf in Cohasset and a salad picnic on Bassing beach.

She leaves her husband, David, senior partner at Foley, Hoag, LLC; four children, John of Milton, Elizabeth of St. Petersburg, Fla., Herman of Manhattan Beach, Calif., and Sally of Marshfield. She also leaves her sister Bonnie Ulin of West Newton and three grandchildren, Zachary, Kyle and Eli.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday, June 8, 11 a.m., at Temple Emanuel, 385 Ward St., Newton.

Memorial observance will be at her late home in Cohasset (today) Friday, June 10, 2 to 4 p.m. Lois loved flowers, so flowers are fine. In lieu of flowers, donations to the Boston Children's Theatre will also be greatly appreciated.

Rev. John M. Gallop

World War II Navy veteran

Rev. John Morton Gallop, 90, of Cohasset, formerly of Hingham, died June 7 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Rev. Gallop was born, raised and educated in Eureka, Calif. He was a 1937 graduate of Humboldt College in California and a 1941 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley. He then served with the U.S. Navy during World War II. In 1949, he graduated from the Church Divinity School of the Pacific in Berkeley, Calif., and was ordained on June 11 of that year. From 1949 to 1950 he served as vicar of the Church of the Good Shepherd in Berkeley, Calif. He then came east to Quincy where he served as vicar of Christ's Church from 1950 to 1951. During that time, he attended Harvard University. Rev. Gallop came to Hingham in 1951 where he became the rector of the Church of St. John the Evangelist for 29 years. Following his retirement from St. John's, he moved to Cohasset at which time he became the associate rector of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Scituate, a position he held for 23 years, retiring last year.

Rev. Gallop was past president of the Hingham Historical Society and a member of the Cohasset Historical Society. He also served as chaplain for the Hingham militia. He was past president and present clerk of the Margaret Coffin Prayer Book Society of Boston, a group that provides prayer books for needy churches. A published author, he wrote a book about Margaret Coffin entitled, "A Revolution: A Lady and a Book." He also authored the "Centennial History of the Church of St. John the Evangelist," church in Hingham. He and his wife were world travelers and went on numerous trips and voyages together.

He leaves his wife of 33 years, Helen (James) Arnold Gallop of Cohasset; four children, Johanna Gallop of Quincy, Elizabeth Loughran of Ft. Myers Shell Island, Fla., David Arnold of Hingham, and Patricia Delano of Naperville, Ill.; five grandchildren; and four great-grandchildren. He was also the husband of the late Grace (Baker) Gallop.

A funeral service will be conducted on Saturday, June 11 at 11 a.m., at the Church of St. John the Evangelist, 172 Main St., Hingham, MA 02043. Visitation is at the church Friday, June 10, from 6 to 9 p.m.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in his memory to St. John's Church or to St. Luke's Episcopal Church, 465 Paris Road, Scituate, MA 02066.

Interment is private. Arrangements are by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham.

Laxers hoping to continue their run

Cohasset in semifinal showdown today at Dover-Sherborn

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Two weeks ago, not many would have envisioned this story.

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team had just lost to archrival Scituate, and were on the tournament bubble at 7-7 with four games to play.

Something clicked in at that point, however, and the players and fans have been reaping the benefits ever since.

The Skippers won three of their last four regular season games, finished at 10-8 and earning themselves a 6-seed in the Div. 3 EMass tournament.

The blue and white have continued their roll, dominating Wayland by a 14-4 score in the first round and third-seed Austin Prep (12-3 score) in the second round.

The journey continues today with a road trip to number-two seed Dover-Sherborn, who advanced by way of a hard-fought 10-8 win over those Scituate Sailors in the quarterfinals.

Cohasset head coach Stu Curran admitted Wednesday night to being nervous about the game. Then again, he was nervous about Wayland and Austin Prep too.

The coach has been preaching his usual philosophy to his team in this week's practices leading up to what could be a classic encounter with D-S.

"We are two really evenly matched teams," Curran said. "As I say all the time, we have to do the simple things better than our opponent on each and every shift. If we do that, we'll win the game."

Today, 5 p.m.

Against Wayland and Austin Prep, there were two common threads in Cohasset's favor: a fast start on offense and dominance from the defense and goaltending.

Cohasset 14, Wayland 4

The visiting Wayland club scored the first goal of the game three minutes in. Within two minutes after that, however, the Skippers would be ahead to stay.

Aidan Buick and Sam Steele scored quick back-to-back goals for Cohasset to give them a 2-1 lead. Before the first period was out, Jon Grimm scored and Buick found the back of the cage again, as the Skippers had a 4-1 lead after one.

At that point, as Curran says, "the horse was let out of the barn."

Cohasset played some of their best lacrosse of the season in the second period, scoring four more times and allowing none to give themselves a commanding 8-1 halftime advantage. In order, Grimm, Joe Durkin, Buick and Jake Previte scored for the Skippers.

Buick was the star of the day on offense, amassing five goals and four assists.

"He just turned the defense inside-out," Curran said of his junior attacker. "Those four assists were really crucial to our offense. Most of our plays come from behind net with either him or Previte, and usually, very good things happen."

Steele also had himself a nice game with two goals and two assists.

"Sam is a real steadying influence on that second line," Curran said. "He is a real asset to our offense, and he did a very good job for us against Wayland."

Freshman Mike Grimm (24) and his teammates have outscored their first two tournament opponents 26-7. Things figure to be far different today when the Skippers travel to second-seed Dover-Sherborn for the Div. 3 East boys lacrosse semifinals.

Boys tennis bounced in quarterfinals

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For the first two rounds of the Div. 2 South boys tennis tournament, Chris Pescatore and Chris Donze were as clutch as it gets.

The Cohasset first doubles team controlled their team's destiny against both Martha's Vineyard and Walpole, as both matches were tied 2-2 with first doubles as the last point to be decided.

And in both cases, Pescatore and Donze came through with the win and game-deciding third point for the Skippers.

In last Thursday's preliminary round affair with Martha's Vineyard, first singles Nils Sceery and the second doubles duo of Josh Dupre and Owen Stevenson both won easily in straight sets, setting the stage for Pescatore and Donze to work their magic.

Cohasset had to come right back the next day to host Walpole. Sceery again won convincingly, 6-4, 6-0. At second singles, Dan Sullivan bounced back in a big way from his defeat the previous day to record a critical team point by a 2 and 1 score.

In Monday's quarterfinal, Cohasset ran into a veritable buzzsaw in second-seeded Wellesley. Wellesley features three singles players ranked in the top-100 in New England, and two doubles teams that made the finals and semifinals of the state individual tournament.

Sceery, Blain Morin and Kyle Dattola-Harris competed well in singles, but were simply overmatched by their opponents.

"We went into that match realizing we had made it further than any Cohasset team since coach Kent Parrot started coaching here," said Sceery, a junior co-captain. "We were happy to make it that far."

Next year, the Skippers (who finished the season with a 17-6 record) return all seven regulars that were playing at the end of this season.

"We have a young team, and we know we have an opportunity to make it even further next year," Sceery said.

For next year, Sullivan, Sceery and Pescatore have been named co-captains. Cohasset's South Shore League All-Stars this season are Sceery, Sullivan, and the Pescatore/Donze combo.

Three-peat not in the cards for girls tennis

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The way they had been playing through the first two rounds, Cohasset looked like a good bet to win their third straight Div. 2 South sectional championship.

Medfield, however, had other ideas.

The Tri-Valley Conference champions showed on Tuesday why they are undefeated (going into yesterday's sectional final against Norwell), topping the Skippers 3-2.

Cohasset finishes their season with a 19-4 record, giving them over 60 wins in the last three years.

The Skippers came into the Medfield match on the heels of a solid 4-1 win over Westwood the day before. Senior Elizabeth Stone and junior Chelsea Grossman won at first and third singles, respectively, both in straight sets. The doubles teams of Meg Anderson/Sally Meehan and Rachel Garber/Emilie Shea also both won in straight sets.

The facilities at Norwood's Coakley Middle School had only four courts, so Garber and Shea had to sit and watch the first 45 minutes of the match. When they finally took to the court, the match appeared to be well in hand thanks to a close first set victory from Anderson and Meehan.

With Stone and Grossman in control of their matches, a lot of attention went toward the first doubles court, where Cohasset's freshmen duo were in a dogfight with the Westwood team of Roanna Ruiz and Liz Chen. With Westwood's tandem stalling often between points (at one stage discussing Christina Aguilera, according to Meehan), the Skippers team had trouble getting into a rhythm.

The result was a first-set tiebreaker that would likely determine the momentum of the match. The Skippers took it, 7-5, with both Meehan and Anderson ripping great winners at the net. The match was pretty much over at that point, as they went on to dominate the second set, 6-1.

After the match, Cohasset head coach Gigi Meehan (Sally's mother, or sister in the eyes of another reporter) discussed her first doubles team's first set struggles.

It all started two summers ago when my brother A.J. and I decided to attend our first professional soccer match.

It was a mid-July exhibition between FC Barcelona and Juventus of Turin, two world-class clubs featuring several of the best players on the planet.

It may have been a meaningless exhibition played in front of a half-full Gillette Stadium in Foxboro, but we were hooked. Our section was full of supporters of both teams, chanting back and forth throughout the entire match to create an atmosphere unlike

Clark's Run tomorrow

The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund presents the fourth annual "Clark's Fund Run" on Saturday, June 11.

The race starts and ends at the South Shore Music Circus at 10 a.m. The course is a challenging but scenic 3.5 mile loop including the Cohasset Common, Sandy Beach and Red Gate Lane (Clark's neighborhood).

The course is a challenging but scenic 3.5 mile loop including the Cohasset Common, Sandy Beach and Red Gate Lane .

At 9 a.m. there will be the children's fun run, which is about a mile in length. This is a fun run and there will be no awards ceremony. Each child participant will be given a medal at the completion of the run.

The 3.5 mile walk begins at 9:30 a.m. Registration is $18 and includes a t-shirt. Refreshments and ice cream will be served at the postrace party.

There will be raffle tickets on sale for four Red Sox tickets to the Sunday, July 17 game against the New York Yankees. The seats are in the .406 club and include a parking pass. They are available at one for $5 or five for $20. The proceeds will benefit the Cohasset High School Tennis Program. Tickets will be available at the road race or you can contact coach Gigi Meehan at 781-383-9017.

If you would like to make a tax deductible donation to The Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund or would like to be a sponsor of the road race please contact Debbie Beal at 781-383-6100, ext. 148 or via email at dbeal@cohassetk12.org.

The season ended on a sour note for Cecelia Chapman (shown here taking one for the team in a regular season game against Holbrook) and her CHS softball teammates, but their qualifying for the state tournament serves as a big step in the right direction for the program.

Magic runs out for softball team

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset varsity softball team has just completed their most successful season in 16 years. After many years of inactivity, the team resurfaced three years ago.

The team qualified for the state tournament, but knew the tremendous 2005 season had to end somewhere. That somewhere was Hollis Field in Braintree on June 2.

The Skippers knew the odds were stacked against them. The seasoned Archbishop Williams squad quickly capitalized upon the Skippers' inexperience.

To put it bluntly, Archies controlled the game from the first pitch to the last out. They froze up the Cohasset bats like a January blizzard. Aside from a Christina Pinkus hit and a Casey Anderson walk, the Skipper offense fell completely silent.

> "This season has set the bar for the years to come."
> Junior Melissa Crowley-Buck

Not much could be said for Cohasset's defense either. While effort was not an issue, the Skipper's errors did them in. A 15-0 Archies victory resulted.

"Archbishop Williams is a well-coached, talented squad," said head coach Deb Bostwick. "They've had a lot of tournament experience and it showed in their play. They capitalized on all our errors. That's what made the difference in the game. At the same time, I give my players a lot of credit for making it this far."

Junior Melissa Crowley-Buck also reflected on the match-up.

"We were very nervous coming into this game," she said. "Our anxiety and inexperience caused us to commit a lot of errors. On the positive side, this season has set the bar for the years to come."

Bostwick wants her players to enjoy the season dinner and reflect on their extremely successful season. She made this final comment, "Life is good, but softball is even better!"

Tracksters end season on the right foot

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Several members of the Cohasset High School track team ended the season on a high note at the State Class D Relays.

Leading the way was freshman standout Corinna Durham, who finished 10th overall in the 300-hurdles with a time of 49-flat. That time broke the school record for that event, a record that was about 20 years old.

Durham was also part of the 4x400 relay team that set a personal record of 4:20. The other athletes on that team were Sarah Malone, Lindsay Kennedy and Nicole Whitney.

Whitney and Kennedy, both seniors, ended their high school careers with solid runs in the 800m and 100m events, respectively. Also faring well for the girls team was the 4x100 relay of Alyssa Hinman, Shalea Daly, Flossie Clougherty and Olivia Kimla.

The boys' top performer on the day was sophomore Brent Daly, who ran the 200m dash in 24.42 and missed qualifying for the semifinals by four-tenths of a second.

With the exception of Whitney and Kennedy, all of these athletes will be back next year, something that has coach Al LaFountain looking ahead to '06.

"Most of our team is made up of ninth or 10th graders," he said. "We should be pretty strong next year if we can get a few more kids out for the team."

Increased participation in spring track is one of the goals as LaFountain prepares for next season.

"We need more athletes to build upon what the girls accomplished this year, and we need to get some runners to surround Brent and our throwers," he said.

The coach says he is hopeful that he can recruit some talented incoming freshmen athletes to come out for the team.

"Track is one of the few sports where those kids can make a tremendous impact right away," LaFountain said.

Cohasset, as could be expected, had success at the Freshmen/Sophomore meet as well. On the boys side, Daly was second in the 100-meter dash with an 11.6, while Reed Wendorf-French finished fifth in the 300-hurdles. Also having a good day for the Skippers was Paul St. Pierre, placing sixth in the discus.

As for the girls, Durham finished third in the 300-hurdles, while Lauren Strazzula had a high jump of 4'6" to take fourth place.

South Shore League meet

Durham and Kennedy starred in the league meet, winning the 300-hurdles and 100m dash, respectively. The 4x4 relay team finished second, while Whitney took fourth in the 800m competition.

Anthony DiPaolo and Daly were the big winners on the boys side, finishing at the top of the class in the discus and 200m, respectively.

All of these performances had LaFountain encouraged at season's end, as he gave a lot of the credit to his assistant coaches.

"It was a pretty successful year," LaFountain said. "[Assistant coach] Lisa Mullen does a fantastic job with the kids. She is just an unbelievable coach who adds a lot to the program.

"Craig Davis and Craig Parker are both very good throw coaches, and they allowed Lisa and I to do more things with other kids."

The coaching of Davis and Parker could be seen in the success throughout the season of athletes like DiPaolo, St. Pierre and sophomore Justin Alexander.

FROM BOYS LAX, PAGE 17

The long-sticks took care of business from there. The usual senior-laden crew of Crandon Leahy, Casey Coleman and Kevin Dinsmore played most of the game, with sophomores Jeff Brown and Ryan Kacynski rotating in and out.

Curran said Leahy played a particularly strong game, and the coach also liked what he saw from Kacynski.

"He's not as flashy as a guy like Jeff Brown, but Ryan is always pretty steady out there," said the coach. "With those two guys constantly rotating, they stayed really fresh and created a lot of mismatches."

Rounding out the list of strong performances for Cohasset was junior goalie Ben Libby, who made 11 saves in place of an ill Chris Simms.

Cohasset 12, Austin Prep 3

AP came into this game with an 18-1 record, and had beaten a decent Canton team 13-8 in the first round.

The Skippers, however, again just took it to their opponent from the opening face-off.

Buick put his team on the board three minutes in. Just three minutes later, the Grimm brothers - senior Jon and freshman Mike - combined on a beautiful give-and-go, with Mike scoring to give Cohasset a 2-0 lead.

Buick and Mike Grimm would both score again before the end of the first period, which ended with the Skippers once again out in front by a 4-1 score. Grimm's second goal was assisted by junior Trevor Brady.

After going into the half with a 5-2 lead, the Skippers exploded for four more goals in the third. Those scores came from, in order: Durkin, Buick, Steele and Previte.

Previte, despite being closely marked throughout the game, finished with three goals and three assists. Buick had three goals and one assist, with Mike Grimm and Durkin scoring two goals apiece.

Leahy again starred on defense, earning the praise of AP Athletic Director (and former lacrosse player) Dave Johnson afterward. Brown continued "rounding into form," in the words of Curran, and Libby made 16 saves in net.

The lopsided game gave Curran a chance to play some of his reserves, and he got some good games from the likes of sophomore Chris Davis (who scored Cohasset's last goal, on a feed from Jon Grimm) and Charlie Czerkawski, who fared well on the face-offs to give Durkin a break in that department.

Three-peat not in the cards

FROM GIRLS TENNIS, PAGE 17

"They are freshmen, and right now they're feeling a bit of pressure," she said. "One thing they have in their favor is they both know how to win. They both have very good ability to kick it up a notch when they need to, and that's what they did in the second set."

Not to be outdone, Garber/Shea did not let the delay phase them, as they won their point in dominant fashion, 6-0, 6-1. Both girls hit solid winners from all over the court, with Shea particularly dominant at net.

Garber and Shea were so good, in fact, they almost got off the court before first doubles did, despite starting almost an hour later.

Cohasset 4, Dedham 1

In the first round, the Skippers defeated a game team from Dedham, who had beaten Abington the day before in the preliminary round.

Stone was typically dominant at first singles, winning her match without losing a game. Both she and coach Meehan were impressed, however, by the feistiness of Dedham's Jenni Hubbard, who made Stone work for every point up until the end.

The story of this day for Cohasset was the play of Grossman at third singles. In her first match of the year (due to a car accident that also caused her to miss the second half of the basketball season), the Skippers junior looked impressive in dispatching Dedham's Margaret Regan, 0 and 3.

"I thought she played great," said Meehan afterward. "You could tell at times she was a little rusty. But tennis is so mental, and that's Chelsea's biggest strength.

Both doubles teams also won in straight sets, with Garber and Shea again dominating, losing only one game. Anderson and Meehan were victorious 6-1, 7-5.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

Youth girls win in Norwell, fall in Scituate

The Cohasset youth lacrosse girls program enjoyed the best weather of the season on June 5, traveling to Norwell and Scituate. The road proved as hospitable as the weather in Norwell, but wasn't quite as nice in Scituate.

The day opened with the Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) squaring off against Norwell, and jumping out to an early lead despite squandering numerous scoring opportunities to poor shooting. Lindsay MacNaught finally broke the seal on the game, and then fed Olivia Murphy, before a Whitney Jaffe goal put Cohasset in charge at 3-0.

After Norwell converted a bang-bang play on an indirect-free position, Christina Healy answered with a goal. Norwell notched a second goal with seconds remaining in the half, and the game went to the break with Cohasset on top at 4-2.

In the second half, Cohasset started nailing down the types of scoring chances that went awry in the first half. Katherine Brown fed Olivia Murphy to stretch the lead, and Whitney Jaffe answered another nifty Norwell indirect-free postion goal with two scores, to stretch the lead to 7-3. Sarah Evans fed Murphy, who finished her first career hat trick, and the teams traded goals from there, with MacNaught and Anna Michalowski answering Norwell's efforts.

Kathleen Kelly and Abby Brown did not notch score in the 10-5 win, but led a solid overall midfield effort throughout the warm afternoon. The win raised the 13-U Blue team's record to 6-2-1 on the year.

The Cohasset Blue 15-and-Under squad (grades 7-8) upped its record to 7-1 by rolling over Norwell 1 in a game that was an obvious rout from the very first shift. Kaley Madge scored a first-half hat trick, and Caitlin Mahoney and Gabriella Flibotte added two goals each, as Cohasset rolled to a big lead.

Lindsey Allard assisted on one of Madge's goals, and then scored off a feed from Isabelle Franklin. Flibotte also picked up an assist to Madge, as Cohasset gained an 8-0 halftime edge in which Norwell's only shot on goal was an accident that rolled into the crease.

In the second half, Cohasset tried to beat the heat, and moved most of its defensive players forward. Katelyn Ryan scored the only goal of the second half, although Thomson Jaffe – the team's regular goaltender – Dominique Rioux and Natalie Hunt all saw outstanding scoring chances thwarted by Norwell's goaltender.

Norwell snuck a goal past Gabriella Flibotte in the game's closing seconds to make the final 9-1.

The Cohasset White 15-U team was scheduled to square off against Norwell 2, but the home team did not adjust to a timing change and failed to show up, giving the Cohasset girls the afternoon off.

The action then moved to Scituate, where the Cohasset White 13-U team started off playing "sloppishly," an ugly combination of sloppily and foolishly, to fall behind 5-0 less than eight minutes into the contest. From there, however, the team regrouped slowly, getting solid midfield play from Michelle Berube and Moira Donohue to start taking care of the ball and to gain control of the action.

Alison Whelan finally broke the ice for Cohasset, and Lindsay MacNaught followed less than a minute later, and while Scituate scored again before the break, it looked like Cohasset had the chance to get back in the game.

Indeed, Cohasset controlled the action for most of the final stanza. Berube's hard work paid off with her first goal, to cut the deficit to three, before two Scituate scores set up by Cohasset miscues. But as the game headed down the stretch, Whelan scored again and Cohasset's energy returned.

Lauren Hayes scooped a loose ball, and moved it to Paide DeSisto, who found Anna Michalowski, who hit Eliza Kinnealey streaking down the center of the field for an easy score. Whelan completed a hat trick on the next possession, and the deficit was back to two.

From there, however, Scituate was able to kill off the clock, glad to escape with an 8-6 win that might have turned around had the game gone on much longer. Ellie Tedeschi and Molly McElgunn combined to make four saves in the net for Cohasset.

Cohasset's 11-and-Under girls (grades 3 and 4) have played in an intra-town clinic all season, but they took the field for their first game against a Scituate squad that has played games throughout the year.

Lexa Grasz was outstanding on defense, stopping several Scituate scoring chances and bringing the ball into the offensive zone. Emily Robbins and Annie Robinson also played well defensively to disrupt Scituate's attack, while goaltenders Molly Fitzgerald and Christina Tedeschi split halves in the net, each coming up with key saves to keep the home team from running away with the game.

At the offensive end of the field, Kate Bodner dominated the draws and ground balls, and started several of Cohasset's scoring chances. Maria Buckley, Eliza Murphy and Victoria Bryan played well on attack and just missed netting multiple scoring chances. Midfielders Hope Kissick and Maddie Curley played strong at both ends of the field to help Cohasset maintain possession.

Throughout the game, the Cohasset girls continued to improve and pick up more of the nuances of the game. They left the field down by a final score of 4-0, but will look to secure their first victory in Duxbury on Sunday, June 12.

Boys have mixed results

The Cohasset Blue 11-and-Under (grades 3 and 4) Blue squad squared off on June 5 against a strong Hingham team. Despite a week's layoff due to the holiday, the boys managed a solid victory in a game that stayed tight to the very end.

Anchoring the competition for the home team were Evan Yeager, Nick Tanglerini, and Mats Nelson, who all took turns in the goal and all produced key saves to keep Hingham from mounting a charge. Mark Brown, John Mills, Robbie Hillman, and Christian Davis steadied the defense and produced turnovers that started key offensive transitions to produce fast-break scores.

Axel Seppala, Zach Coggins, John Leahy and the O'Brien Brothers also contributed on attack, ensuring that Cohasset took full advantage of every scoring chance to put the ball in the net. Sarah Brown rallied at the midfield with seemingly unlimited energy on a very hot day, while Chandler Skolnick, Connor Green, and Chris Silvia provided much needed reinforcements to a slightly depleted roster. The squad continued to showcase its superb team play and consistent improvement in all areas.

The Cohasset White 11-U team showed continued improvement in a game on the road in Pembroke, as evidenced by both the number of shots on goal and defensive saves at this week's game against Pembroke. The dry, hot weather and hard-pack field conditions played to Pembroke's advantage, as the home team capitalized on turnovers and ground balls.

Cohasset's goalies did a great job at holding Pembroke to seven goals, with crease newcomer Tommy Powers making a number of sparkling stops. Defenders Jack McElgunn and Will Golden played well in protecting the crease and during clears.

Midfielders Colin Whelan and Ryan McGovern pushed the transition, where attackmen Anthony Nahill, Max Montgomery and Mark McKenna all created quality shots. Montgomery and McKenna were the only players to dent the net, but Andrew Fontaine and Henry Brown were also very strong offensively.

Perhaps most important, the Cohasset team showed character when tempers flared near the game's end, keeping their heads and not being pulled down by Pembroke's rough play.

At the 13-and-Under level (grades 5 and 6), the White team put out tremendous effort, playing without any subs for the entire game. Cohasset's players routinely switched positions and gamely tried to stay with a Pembroke squad that had more than double the roster, and that had no regard for a staffing disadvantage.

Derek Youngman and Kyle Healy notched the goals for White as Charlie Coffman played an outstanding game as team energizer, seeming to be everywhere all day despite the conditions. John Collins played a strong game until he was "sandwiched" by multiple Pembroke players on a nice breakaway play feed by Derek Youngman.

Kyle Healy and Brennan Bukowski stood tall in this pressure cooker, tossing away many shots (and pebbles) in the net. Pete McKenna, Charlie Neaves and Danny Barnes worked tirelessly at middie for Cohasset and should be commended for their stamina against such odds. Pat Kearney, Geoff Swain and Coleman Hernon headed a defense that was constantly under siege, yet created many transition plays.

The 15-and-Under (grades 7 and 8) Blue team hosted Hingham and, again, faced a significant numbers crunch, lining up with just 15 players.

Up by a score of 2-1 at the half, Cohasset had Hingham on the run, making smart and aggressive double teams to cause key turnovers. Failing to execute a few clears proved costly, however, as Hingham was able to tie the score at 3-all by the end of the third quarter.

The fourth quarter was controlled by Cohasset, but the scoring was not. While Cohasset was winning the ground ball war and getting quality looks at the net, it did not score until there were two minutes left in the contest. Still, that was enough for a 4-3 lead, until Hingham broke free and scored twice, winning the game 5-4 with just seconds remaining.

Conor Queenan had two goals at crease attack. Andrew Smith had one goal and an assist, Andrew DiPaolo scored once and Connor Murphy picked up two assists. Cohasset's coaches were proud of the players, noting that many put in their best personal efforts of the season in the areas of lacrosse that matter most: ground balls, positioning, effort, and stamina.

An excellent Spanish adventure anything we had experienced at a sporting event before.

Fast forward to May 22, 2005. It is 6:30 p.m., Barcelona time; A.J. and I are on the city Metro, on our way to Camp Nou, one of the world's most famous soccer stadiums. As an aside: for what it's worth, the trains in Barcelona are incredibly timely, and there are even clocks to tell you when the next train is arriving —two concepts the T may or may not want to consider.

We got to the stadium just before 7 for a 9 p.m. match. The atmosphere outside the stadium was calmer than I would have expected, but there were still plenty of horns and noise-makers creating a ruckus, in combination with all the cars driving by and beeping their horns.

After entering the stadium, which required climbing up about 15 flights worth of stairs, I finally got to the entrance of my section and peered out onto the field ... and was totally blown away. Seeing 98,000 seats colored in a sea of blue and burgundy, and knowing most of them would be full in about two hours, was amazing.

The stadium food, weirdly enough, consisted of hot dogs and sausages, at least for those of us in the nosebleed sections. I thought it would be different in Spain, and as I found out in a subsequent tour of the stadium, the culinary selection was slightly more imaginative in the lower sections.

Rather than a rendition of the national anthem, the pregame festivities included the singing of the team anthem, with 84,527 people holding colored signs and singing in unison. It was unreal, much like the sound of those same people exclaiming "Oooooooo!!" simultaneously at a missed goal opportunity.

The only moment of silence came when Samuel Eto missed a penalty kick for Barcelona ... and that was more than made up for by the roar that came after each of Barcelona's three goals.

We witnessed a hat trick by Villarreal's Diego Forlan, the Spanish league championship trophy hoisted by Barca captain Carles Puyol (the team clinched the championship the week before), and a positively enthralling 3-3 game.

Being part of one of the two chants we could understand (Campeones, campeones, olé olé olé!!) and an 84,527-person Wave (they do them in Spain, too) just added to it all.

I would mention the other chant we could make out, but it involved a nasty word regarding Barcelona's archrival, Real Madrid — even in a different language, we will not print it here.

That kind of strong passion speaks toward the sporting culture in Europe that we thought we understood — until we were actually there. With the home team leading 3-2 with 30 minutes left in the game, I looked down to the most vociferous fans in the end zone below us, and saw a group of four people hugging one another, jumping and chanting at the same time. I was in awe to see that kind of emotion.

But when one considers the roots and history of the team, that kind of display is put into some context. When Francisco Franco took control of Spain in 1939, the Catalan (Barcelona's) culture and language was more or less outlawed. Over the years, Franco, himself a football fan, personally saw to it that Real Madrid became the powerhouse team in the country.

The only place where Catalan could be spoken in public with fear of retribution? The stadium of FC Barcelona.

After the game (which included 20 minutes of pounding rain, thunder and lightning that deterred absolutely no one from being crazy fans), AJ and I couldn't leave. How many times are we going to be in the biggest football stadium in Europe? We stayed for about half an hour as the stadium emptied ... taking it all in, the echoes of the chants, the empty seats where fans hugged and jumped around just minutes before, realizing we had just watched Ronaldinho (generally regarded as the best player in the world) in person...we couldn't leave until the stadium crew turned off the lights, providing a subtle hint that it was time to go.

We hung around outside for a little bit, near what we suspected was the gate from which the Villarreal team bus would exit. One player came out to talk to what appeared to be family, and gave one of them his jersey. We didn't know who it was, couldn't understand what anyone was saying, and it was raining again — yet we didn't care.

On the list of things I want to do in life, attending a major soccer match in Europe was pretty high. And I can now say it was even above and beyond what I expected.

Cohasset Recreation Department to offer Boot Camp Fitness Training

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for Boot Camp Fitness Training to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4, on Cohasset Commons, front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for both men and women for all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardio-vascular training format, inclusive will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump roping, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit-ups, etc. etc. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardio-vascular endurance and strength.

Dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring water bottle and jump rope to class and wear running shoes.

Success in this class is based upon your individual personal best not as competition with others. To register call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Cohasset Recreation Department Youth Tennis Lessons Ages 7 and over

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be offering Youth Tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven week program starts on Tuesday, July 5, with one hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Various levels of instruction are available. The cost of the program is $80 per participant.

Registration will be held the week of Monday, June 13, through Thursday, June 16, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p.m., as well as Tuesday, June 14, from 5 to 7 p.m., at the Town Hall Auditorium.

You must register in person during the times listed above. If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for Tennis, it will be helpful as we have more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Cohasset Recreation Summer Wrestling Clinic Grades 3-12

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be accepted for a summer Wrestling Clinic to be held at Cohasset High School starting Tuesday, July 26, through Friday, July 29.

The Clinic will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. for grades 7-12 and cost $125 per wrestler. Grades 3-6 will meet from 1 to 2:30 p.m. and cost $55 per wrestler.

This unique wrestling opportunity will be run by CHS wrestling Coach Torin Sweeney.

Registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall. Space is limited - early registration is advised.

Cohasset Recreation South Shore Basketball School Basketball Clinic Ages 8-11 and 12-15

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be accepted for South Shore Basketball School's week long Basketball Clinic.

The Clinic will be held the week of Monday, July 11, through Friday, July 15, and will meet each day, from 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. for ages 8-11, and from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. for ages 12-15.

The fee for each age group is $120 per player. This program will be run by CHS Athletic Director Ron Fore and will be held at the Cohasset High School Gym.

Complete the application form in the brochure at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall to register. Space is limited - early registration is advised.

Cohasset Recreation South Shore Soccer Camp Soccer Squirts Ages 4 and 5

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be on going at the Town Hall for South Shore Soccer Camp's week long Soccer Squirts Clinic which begins Monday, Aug. 1, through Friday, Aug. 5.

Soccer ABC's for ages 4 and 5 will meet each day from 8 to 9:30 a.m. and the fee is $85 per participant. The fee includes a camp shirt and appropriated-size soccer ball for each participant, both available the first day of camp.

Complete the application form at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall to register. Space is limited - early registration is advised.

Cohasset Recreation Boys & Girls Lacrosse Clinics Grades 3-6

The Cohasset Recreation Department will soon be taking registrations for both Boy's and Girl's Lacrosse Clinics.

The Clinics will be held the week of Monday, July 18, through Friday, July 22, for grades 3-6 from 8 to 10 a.m. at Milliken Field. The fee per participant will be $85, and checks may be payable to Town of Cohasset. A few days will run longer then 10 a.m., however, we will advise you of which days.

Chuck Jaffe will direct this opportunity to learn and develop the basic skills and concepts of lacrosse.

Registration forms can be obtained at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall in early May.

Cohasset Recreation South Shore Soccer Camp Boys and Girls Ages 6-18

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be accepted for South Shore Soccer Camp's 1-week long Soccer Clinics which will be held starting Monday, Aug. 1, through Friday, Aug. 5.

The Camp will meet each day from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., for boys and girls ages 6 to 18, and the fee for the one week session is $245 per participant with a $20 discount for 2nd child. Fee includes a camp shirt and appropriate-size ball for each participant, both available the first day of camp.

A fond farewell to Lou

FROM THE SIDELINES

JULIE ANN NEVERO

There haven't been many like Lou Molinari.

A freelance writer for my Mariner sports pages throughout my five-year career, Lou had many qualities I admired. He was reliable, he was hungry, and he always went the extra mile. Working primarily in Hanover and Marshfield, one of Lou's best traits was his uncanny ability to get the story.

When we knew a coach was tough to get, we got Lou on him/her because the guy just never gave up. He'd call and call until his fingers could barely dial, and then he'd call again. And he'd get it.

He had a unique and quirky writing style that some of our readers didn't fully appreciate. They were perhaps looking more for scores, records, and stats in his pieces, but his witty and humorous approach to writing sports added diversity to my pages.

Before he got a computer, Lou, then in his 60s, used to type his stories on a word processor and fax them into us. He purchased the computer to make things easier on himself, but more so for us. I can remember trying to guide him through the process of writing and e-mailing a file. He couldn't quite grasp the meaning of the computer terms "copy and paste", but he eventually figured it out and was always amazed when we actually got the file.

Whatever I needed, Lou was always ready and willing. On long notice, short notice, or a minute's notice, Lou would always come through. Baseball, lacrosse, basketball, football, tennis. You name the sport, he covered it. If he found something out over the weekend and couldn't get a hold of me, he'd just do the story. Didn't want us to get scooped.

He was an editor's dream, but so much more.

Things tend to be unfortunately a bit impersonal with our freelancers, as we generally communicate solely on e-mail. But that was never enough for Lou. He or his lovely wife Ginny would routinely call to make sure I received a story or to make sure there were no problems. Lou always kept me informed and gave me regular updates on his progress. If he was in the area, Lou would always stop by our Marshfield offices for a visit, his warm smile instantly lighting up the room.

Ginny was like Lou's co-pilot. She told me once she used to look forward to our conversations every Thursday when I called with story assignments. We'd get the business out of the way and then chit-chat about anything from the weather to the Red Sox. I think of her like a third grandmother. She is truly a gem.

Ginny, my heart and prayers go out to you and to Lou. I have always held you both near and dear to my heart and have loved working with you both. God bless.

About two years ago, I discovered Lou and Ginny were living in the apartment above my Great Uncle Al in Weymouth's Gaslight Village. Like the sweethearts they are, the couple told me they spoke fondly of me on a regular basis and also offered to be of service if he ever needed them. When they hadn't seen him in a while (because he had to be moved to an assisted living facility), they expressed their concern.

It is with a heavy heart that I write this column. Lou passed away this past Friday at the age of 70. He hadn't been working for us for nearly a month after being rushed to the hospital with stomach pains. In typical Lou and Ginny fashion, I was one of the first people they called. Ginny apologized profusely for Lou's inability to write that week. Can you believe that? He's lying in a hospital bed and he felt bad he couldn't help me.

I told Ginny to tell Lou to take as much time as he needed. That this place should be the last thing on their minds. That he could come back whenever he saw fit and if he didn't want to come back, that was fine too. That it was time to look out for himself.

Ginny, my heart and prayers go out to you and to Lou. I have always held you both near and dear to my heart and have loved working with you both. God bless.

Cohasset Arts Festival is right around the corner

High school students' mural to be featured

The 50th South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is almost here. Once again Cohasset's Common will blossom with the individual tents of 90 craft artists, the signature 10-pole white exhibition tent, the festival performance stage and the ever-popular Young Artists Exhibition in the Kids' Tent. This year's Arts Festival, June 17-19, 2005, features all the beloved festival favorites: art exhibitions, plein aire painters, fine art and craft, musical performances, strawberry shortcake, lobster rolls and artist demonstrations.

New artistic endeavors will also make this milestone memorable. An art piece, created for the 50th Festival will be unveiled, Friday, June 17, at 6 p.m. "Our Town: Outside the Frame" is a collaborative piece funded by the art center and created for the celebration by more than 100 South Shore high school students. This exciting installation is comprised of 16 oversized mixed-media paintings created by young artists from 15 area high schools. Each school was given a 4-foot-by-5-foot stretched canvas and paint.

An artisan works on a copper craft at last year's Arts Festival on the Common.

The students were invited to interpret the theme in any way, using their own viewpoint on what is remarkable about their towns. Art center gallery artists visited the schools and worked with each student group. The paintings will be assembled on Cohasset Common. This installation invites the public to walk through and experience the young artists' perspectives on their home towns. Christo and his Central Park "Gates" will have some teenage competition here on the South Shore!

"We have a unique Arts Festival — one that truly does have something for everyone," said Bill Earon, president of the board of directors. "To annually receive the volunteer and financial help of so many South Shore residents and businesses attests to the widespread support of the art center's mission. The South Shore Art Center Arts Festival combines the best traditions of a New England community celebration with the distinct appeal of a fine arts event. Art, music, craft and great food on beautiful Cohasset Common, it's no surprise that we are celebrating our 50th year!"

This exciting installation is comprised of 16 oversized mixed-media paintings created by young artists from 15 area high schools.

Arts festival hours are Friday, June 17, 2-7 p.m.; Saturday, June 18, 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sunday, June 19, noon-6 p.m. South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is held outdoors, rain or shine. A free trolley shuttles visitors from near-by parking. For more information visit www.ssac.org or call the art center, 781-383-2787. The 50th Arts Festival is sponsored in part through the generosity of Rockland Trust.

Experience the Village drawing

Starting with the Art Festival on the Common weekend June 17 to19 and continuing throughout the summer, Experience the Village shopping cards may be picked up from any participating merchant. Bring the card when visiting the village and have it validated for every purchase made at participating shops. A completed card must indicate a validated purchase from each participating merchant. Completed cards will be entered in a drawing held over Labor Day weekend.

The winning entrant receives a collection of gift certificates worth $1,000, redeemable from participating merchants. Gift certificates may be redeemed by the winner, transferred, or given as gifts.

Participants may enter as many times as they wish, as long as each purchase is validated.

Look for "Experience The Village" posters identifying participating merchants offering shopping cards or watch for merchant representatives distributing cards during Art Festival on the Common weekend.

Alcohol involved in accident, police say

A 19-year-old Cohasset man was arraigned in Quincy District Court this week on charges of driving drunk.

Police arrested Michael F. Rasmussen of 33 Tupelo Road on Sunday morning following a single-car accident at the intersection of Blackhorse Road and Summer Street.

Police Chief James Hussey said the 1999 blue Toyota Camry that Rasmussen was driving hit a utility pole on Summer Street at roughly 6:55 a.m. The emergency dispatch center received multiple 9-1-1 calls about the accident.

Hussey said Rasmussen's passenger was transported to South Shore Hospital where he was treated and released. Rasmussen, who was not seriously injured, declined medical help at the scene.

Rasmussen has been charged with operating under the influence of liquor; negligent operation of a motor vehicle; marked lanes violation; and being a minor in possession of alcohol.

There was extensive damage to the front end of the vehicle, Hussey said. He said the air bags were deployed; both men were outside the car when police arrived, so it was not clear if they had been wearing seatbelts.

"Russian American Kids Circus"

Music Circus caters to kids

Children's performances a hot ticket Thursday mornings

The stars may not come out until after sunset at the South Shore Music Circus, but on Thursday mornings in July and August younger audiences can enjoy a slate of children's performances that includes the Cohasset debuts of "Garfield: Happy Birthday to Me" Aug. 11, and of the "Russian American Kids Circus" on July 14.

"Garfield: Happy Birthday to Me"

"Our circus touches the heart with a combination of entertainment and pure fun," explained Regina Berenchtein, president and co-owner of The Russian American Kids Circus On-Stage, Inc., last week by telephone from the company's Brooklyn, N.Y., headquarters. "We present everything from a clown act to pantomime, acrobatics, juggling, rolling globes, and unicycles, all performed by an 11-member troupe of circus professionals between the ages of six and 16."

The performers may still be children, but they were trained by big top veterans including Regina's husband, artistic director Alex Berenchtein, a former star of the world-renowned Moscow Circus. "My husband uses the best traditions of the Moscow Circus to teach not only the art and skill of the circus, but also the importance of teamwork. He nurtures our students and teaches them the uniqueness of the performing arts without stressing the competition. Everyone learns to work together."

Regina and Alex - joined by Regina's mother, former nurse Olga Partigul — opened the nonprofit academy The New Way Circus Center, Inc., 11 years ago in New York. The school teaches artistic self-expression through the circus curriculum. The advanced students form the performing ensemble which tours the U.S. and Canada. "What we do is very different from a traditional circus. As theatrical circus we use no animals. Our kids just love bringing joy and happiness to audiences and self-esteem to themselves," says Berenchtein.

Quincy native the next real Gilligan

Pleasure boat cruisers may want to think twice before booking a three-hour tour out of Marina Bay — especially if the weather starts getting rough. For the second time in as many years, Turner Broadcasting Systems (TBS) has cast the title character on its "The Real Gilligan's Island" reality show at the Quincy waterfront complex. Last year, it was Chris O'Malley of Milton. Beginning this week on TBS, it will be Shawn Manning of Quincy — a former doorman at WaterWorks — who dons the ubiquitous red rugby jersey and white bucket hat first made famous on the 1960s sitcom "Gilligan's Island."

The new series, which has its second season premiere on June 8, was filmed last fall on an island off of Mexico. On the show, two teams of people — playing characters from the show including Gilligan, the Skipper, too, the Millionaire and his wife, a Movie Star, the Professor and Maryann — compete in castaway-themed challenges to be the last one standing and claim the $250,000 grand prize. Manning, a one-time personal assistant to New England Patriots wide receiver David Givens, can't reveal the final outcome but believes he out-Gilliganed even the actor who originated the role of the bumbling "Little Buddy."

"I'm everything Bob Denver wanted to be," explained Manning by cell phone last week while driving to Foxwoods for a charity golf tournament. "I'm better-looking, more articulate and smoother with the ladies."

Manning's self-proclaimed charm makes him a natural to answer the "Ginger or Maryann" question that has long divided fans of the original series. "Tina Louise (Ginger) was the better-looking one for sure," says Manning. "On my show, however, I would have to pick the Maryann from the other team. Maryann Randi from my team just rubbed everybody the wrong way."

Manning, 23, hopes to rub future casting agents the right way now that reality television has given him his show business start. "I'm weighing my career options and definitely looking at acting opportunities. I may do a play in Atlanta. And, I've always wondered what it might be like to be the next Chuck Woolery."

The second season of "The Real Gilligan's Island" premieres on TBS this week. For more information, check your cable guide.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

GETTING IN THE LOOP

To better assist hearing in such controlled environments as lecture halls and houses of worship, the hearing impaired may avail themselves of loop induction systems. Rooms, halls and auditoriums with such systems have a thin wire that is placed around the listening area, a speech amplifier, and microphones. Speech signals are amplified and circulated through the loop wire. The resultant magnetic energy field is detected and amplified by the "telecoil" or telephone switch common to many hearing instruments, cochlear implants, and loop receivers. The result is a high-quality amplified reproduction of the original speech signal. Intelligibility is greatly increased because the distance between the speaker and listener(s) is bridged and background noise is reduced.

There are many tools available today to help the hearing impaired not miss out on life's sounds. Visit FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER to ask questions and get answers. Our staff can bring you up to date on the latest technological advances in the hearing aid industry, from telecoils and other assistive listening devices to virtually invisible in-the-canal instruments, even tiny, powerful batteries. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a comprehensive evaluation, or stop by 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg., in Weymouth. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Induction loop technology is the most popular method for providing assisted listening accommodations in public facilities.

DESTINATIONS

Great dining in New Hampshire!

Third in a series on places to eat and things to do at New England vacation hot spots. On June 30: Maine.

By Barbara Radcliffe Rogers
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

From its tiny seacoast to the White Mountains, New Hampshire is a place where foodies can take comfort, no matter what their style or pocketbook. Travelers heading to the lakes region or White Mountains on I-93 don't have to detour very far from the highway to find good food. Downtown Manchester offers a variety, from fine dining to little ethnic eateries that represent the old mill city's diverse populations. Resort centers such as North Conway and the North Woodstock area have a thick concentration of eating places, but there are plenty of choices throughout the mountains. And Portsmouth has its own special delights. Prices are for a full meal.

1. The Ice House, 112 Wentworth Rd. (New Castle Rd.), Rye; 603-431-3086

The clams and scallops are always perfectly fried, and you can eat them at picnic tables in a shady pine grove. Under $20.

2. The Way We Cook, 1361 Elm St., Manchester; 603-625-5454

Chef/owners here are a physical therapist and a dentist who love to cook, one Greek, the other Italian, so the menu has a mix of influences with recipes they cribbed from their respective grandmothers. The ladies must have been good cooks, because the chewy-tender and subtly flavored braciole is memorable and the Greek dishes are just as successful. No genetically engineered or hormone-fed ingredients are used. $20 to $40.

3. The Upper Crust, 65 Laconia Rd. (Rte. 3, at Exit 20, behind the Exxon station), Tilton; 603-286-3191

Tasty, generously topped pizzas along with pasta putanesca and other traditional southern Italian dishes, including chicken marsalla. The atmosphere is friendly and the staff very patient with children who've been too long in the car. Under $20.

Juliet's, the restaurant at Mountain Grand View in Whitefield, is an elegant setting for relaxed dining.

4. Liliuokalani's Ice Cream & Coffee Bar, 956 Weirs Blvd.; 603-366-9323

Gourmet ice cream and coffee drinks are the specialty at this cute cottage shop. They have non-fat frozen yogurt,too and you can enjoy your treat on the spacious lakeside deck which overlooks Paugus Bay. Under $20.

5. The Inn at Newfound Lake. Rte. 3A (off Exit 23), Bridgewater; 603-744-9111

The chef grows many of the summer vegetables and herbs in his own garden, choosing other ingredients from local producers. The large dining room windows overlook the lake and the setting sun, a view that matches the food. $20 to $40.

6. Cafe Lafayette Dinner Train. Rte 112 (1/4 mile west of Exit 32 off I-93, North Woodstock; 800-699-3501

Dine as you travel in beautifully restored antique rail coaches, enjoying dishes such as chicken Florentine in puff pastry or medallions of pork in Pinot Noir. Unlike many dinner trains, Cafe Lafayette pays real attention to the cuisine. 5-course dinner $60. Over $40.

7. Bishop's Homemade Ice Cream Shoppe, just off I-93 Exit 41, Littleton; 603-444-6039.

So creamy it almost moos, with rich natural flavors, ice cream just doesn't get any better. Under $20.

8. Juliet's. Mountain View Road, Whitefield; 603-837-2100

It takes a fine menu to compete with the view from the large windows in this lovely dining room, but Juliet's chef is up to the challenge. Fresh, seasonal vegetables underlie many of the sauces, especially on the daily "spa" choices. Venison is served with a pleasingly creamy white cheddar polenta and salads are inspired, with such combinations as roasted beets and oranges, over greens with Gorgonzola and toasted walnuts. Over $40.

9. AMC Highland Center at Crawford Notch. Rte 302, Bretton Woods; 603-278-4453

The best deal in the White Mountains may be the excellent dinners served nightly at the new Appalachian Mountain Club center. Everything is made from scratch, even the fresh-baked breads and hearty soups that begin each meal. Expect entrees such as cider-basted turkey breast with a sauce of roasted apples and onions or a vegetarian selection such as strudel of eggplant, spinach and roasted tomatoes served over a medley of beans. Four-course dinners are $20, $18 for AMC members. Under $20/$20 to $40.

10. The 1785 Inn. Route 16 N, North Conway; 800-421-1785

The ambiance is pure old-time New England inn, with a giant fireplace and wood-paneled dining rooms. The menu is a skillful blend of traditional and contemporary, with such dishes as raspberry duckling, smoked salmon ravioli, sherried rabbit and medallions of venison. $20 to $40.

11. Flatbread Company. Route 16 (In the Eastern Slopes Inn), North Conway; 603-356-4470

Pizza takes on a new life as the healthy alternative when it's made from 100 percent organically grown wheat and topped with nitrate-free sausage, free-range chicken and organic vegetables. Best of all, these good-for-you pizzas taste delicious. Under $20.

12. The Yankee Smokehouse. Routes 16 and 25, West Ossipee; 603-539-7427

Bountiful servings of tender, smoky ribs have made this casual restaurant a legend. Don't overlook the award-winning corn chowder, the baked beans or barbecued chicken, either. Under $20.

Staff cuts on the table

School board grapples with budget deficit

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh says cutting positions is the only viable option at this time to make up the budget deficit incurred with the failure of the override vote.

"My goal for July is to start at a level budget."
– Supt. Denise Walsh

"My goal for July is to start at a level budget," Walsh said at last week's school committee meeting.

But what will actually occur to make up the school's portion of the $400,000 gap — roughly $285,000 — is still anyone's guess. School committee chairman Jamie Williams called a special meeting slated for last night (Thursday) to continue the discussion. That meeting took place after the Mariner went to press yesterday morning.

Last week some members of the school committee said with some creative energy, the budgetary problem can be solved with no loss of employees.

At the June 9 meeting, Walsh proposed cutting the two teaching positions which had been paid for by private donations last year, at $45,000 each. When the school committee voted to accept the funding from the committee to save three teachers during last year's budget cycle, it was well aware the funding was a one-time opportunity, and the school department was lucky to keep those teachers — whose positions were slated to be cut —

'Fantastic' 50th festival to open

'Our Town' being unveiled

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

What better way to celebrate a half-century of the past than with a glimpse of the future?

The South Shore Art Center will do just that as it opens the 50th Arts Festival that will again grace Cohasset Common over the weekend (Friday-Sunday, June 17-19).

For this year's golden anniversary, the Art Center has also collaborated with the South Shore high school community. The Art Center will introduce a new creative endeavor, which is sure to add another dimension to the festival.

A work of art — "Our Town: Outside the Frame" — is a collaborative piece funded by the Art Center and created for the 50th Festival celebration by nearly 200 high school students from across the South Shore.

The Outside the Frame installation is comprised of 16 oversized mixed-media paintings created in group efforts by young artists from 15 area high schools. The students were invited to find an artistic theme for each of their towns and interpret the theme in any way, using their own viewpoint on what is remarkable about their towns.

The collective work will be unveiled tomorrow (Friday) at 6 p.m. on the Common.

"Last fall, we compiled a list of 55 high schools south of Boston and sent out letters for them to be introduced to the Outside the Frame art project to each one," said South Shore Art Center Coordinator Kim Canney.

"15 schools altogether responded positively. The South Shore Art Center then provided each school with paints and a 4-ft. by 5-ft. stretched canvas. And gallery artists from the Art Center visited classrooms at the different schools to conduct workshops and demonstrations on the artistic process," Canney explained.

Gallery artists, who made in-class visits, include Page Railsback, of Hingham, Dianne Panarelli Miller of Rockland, and Donna Rossetti-Bailey of Marshfield, all of whom will have numerous paintings and artworks on display at the Festival.

'Big home' bylaw is blasted

Deep Run house passes muster

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Six Deep Run may be one of the most important Large Home Site Plan Reviews to ever come before the planning board — and it's not because of its size. While most neighbors would prefer to see a smaller structure built that would better preserve their ocean views, the overwhelming concern is the potential for damage due to blasting ledge during construction.

In addition, the public hearing for the project has raised questions as to why the bylaw exists at all, as abutters have said it provides an outlet for concerns to be raised, but does not provide any solutions.

Michael and Kristyn Stevens have plans to tear down their single-family home, located on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Deep Run, and build a new shingle-style home with a wrap around porch and three-car garage. The couple would like a new basement that will require blasting to clear out rock underneath the home. Some neighbors sustained damage during blasting at a nearby Jerusalem Road home in the 1990s, and they do not want a repeat performance.

Beverly Koswick, 25 Deep Run, said even though the state requires a 250-foot buffer between the blast site and other residences, her home was more than 400 feet away from the blasting when it took place in 1992. Her ceiling cracked, her mantle fell off the wall, and a pipe burst.

"There was so much damage," she said, adding she does not want to have to go through that again. Other residents echoed her sentiments.

However, Ken Smith of Atlantic Blasting, the company which will be working with the Stevens couple, tried to allay the concerns of abutters and said the regulations for blasting have changed since

A whole lot of flushing going on

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Flushing could be a daily occurrence at all three Cohasset schools, as a means of lowering contaminants in school drinking water. Facilities Manager Brian Adams said there are 21 sites throughout the schools which have high levels of either lead or copper, and for now, running the water in fountains for 5-minutes every day is one of the solutions on the table.

Drinking fountains have been shut off in some areas of all three buildings since April. The contaminated water is coming from within the school, and not the public water supply, and therefore, it is the responsibility of the school department and not the water department to fix the problem.

Adams said in the latest round of testing, for which results were received last week, flushing was done in both two and five minute intervals, and then samples were taken. Adams said some of the tests have indicated the problem might be in some of the actual bubbler mechanisms, as at least one of the new "double-bubblers," which have one side lower than the other, but are one fountain, is showing different readings on both sides. The bubbler is fed by one school pipe. In light of the recent tests, he said the manufacturer of the fountain will be contacted, and parts will be replaced if needed. He said he will be looking into warranty agreements for the new fountain.

Water Department Chairman Glenn Pratt said drinking water fountains or "bubblers" are the biggest culprit for copper leaching, as it typically occurs in pipes where the water is not constantly moving. Copper leaching is more prevalent in new pipes which do not have the buildup of a protective film on the inside, and new copper pipes were installed at the middle-high school and Deer Hill school during their renovations. Flushing the pipes gets the water moving, and is usually the best way to bring elevated levels of contaminants down.

But the new pipes aren't totally to blame for the problems as Pratt said lead can get into in the water from the solder which holds the old pipes together, or brass fixtures. At the middle-high school, not all pipes were replaced with the renovations, and some older pipes still exist.

Health Board Chairman Peggy Chapman said contamination of school drinking fountains is no surprise to the board of health, as Deer Hill has historically had problems with its bubblers. She added she wonders if flushing every day in 21 areas is fiscally healthy for the schools. Not only that, she said she wonders what will happen on the weekends, or when buildings are used during the summer.

"Your flushing plan should be extremely short term," she said.

One year ago, the water department conducted tests which are required by the Department of Environmental Protection. Results showed elevated levels of both lead and copper in the drinking fountains throughout all three school buildings. The results were forwarded to then Supt. Edward Malvey, but apparently nothing was done to remedy the situation.

This spring, with no notice of progress being made on the situation, the DEP required additional and more extensive tests be conducted, and this time results once again showed elevated levels. When Walsh found out about the problem, fountains were immediately shut off and a letter was sent home informing parents of the situation.

Adams said the tests which were conducted at the schools were barely over the allowed levels but were enough to require taking action. He said there were roughly 120 samples taken from different areas throughout all three schools.

For more information, please contact Facilities Manager Brian Adams at (781) 383-3031, the Water Department at (781) 383-0057, or the Board of Health at (781) 383-4116.

School 'water letter' faulted

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Neither the board of health nor the water commission were happy about a school department letter sent home to parents about elevated levels of lead and copper in school drinking water.

Those boards scolded Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh for putting the water piped into homes into the same kettle, so to speak, as the school water.

Walsh, who was using a template provided by the state Department of Environmental Protection, apologized for the confusion, noting she doesn't like surprises either.

In the April 25 letter Walsh states, "the water system at the school is not unlike that found in area homes. Please consider having your home tested if you are using a private well. If you are receiving water from a public water system (i.e. if you pay a water bill) you can call your local water department for information."

Water Department Chairman Glenn Pratt said the school-related problem does not occur in homes and therefore homeowners do not need to test their water.

"It pointed a finger at the water department and there was no tip off given to the board of health they would be getting calls," Pratt said at last week's school committee meeting. "We need to work together to provide one correct unified answer."

Health board member Steve Bobo added if the contamination in the school water had been the result of a town-wide problem, the board of health and/or water department would need to send out a blanket letter to all affected homeowners and shut off their water. That simply wasn't the case, he said.

Walsh said she was following the advice of the Department of Environmental Protection, which provided the template for the school to use.

She explained when tests were originally conducted roughly one year ago by the water department and the schools were informed about their high levels, she was not superintendent. The schools should have taken action, but after receiving nothing for roughly a year, the DEP asked that further testing in more areas be conducted. Walsh said when she found out about the situation, she considered getting information to parents a top priority.

She said she should have informed the other boards. "I do not like surprises either," Walsh said. "You should have had a copy of the letter and I accept full responsibility."

Health board chairman Peggy Chapman said it wasn't as much that the board didn't receive a copy of letter prior to it being sent out, but the letter had "several major inaccuracies, suggesting some problems were occurring in the community. That is false."

"It's a letter about a public health hazard and it doesn't reflect the truth of the picture," Chapman said.

Chapman said there will be other health-related issues that will come up. She mentioned a bacterial meningitis death a couple of years ago.

"All the boards got together and it was a wonderfully cooperative effort," she said about the school committee, health board, board of selectmen, and fire and police officials.

In the future, the state Department of Health or Department of Environmental Protection may send templates for the schools to use, but it is important for other pertinent boards to provide input, Chapman said.

Proposed DEP penalty fees have selectmen seeing red

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectman Gary Vanderweil may have said what is on the minds of many Cohasset residents.

The former sewer commissioner would like to see the court order — dubbed the Second Amended Judgement — that for a quarter century has acted like a cudgel over the town's head regarding wastewater issues, relegated to the annals of history once and for all.

"I'd like to put the amended judgment to bed," he said at last week's selectmen's meeting about the legal agreement that had its genesis back in 1979.

Vanderweil may get his wish but not before negotiations take place with the state Department of Environmental Protection, over an amendment to the judgement. Negotiations are scheduled to get underway June 23.

The DEP sent the town an updated draft, which, among other things, includes a schedule for sewering the Little Harbor district and fees for non-compliance. Town Meeting voted in December 2004 to incorporate the schedule into the judgment to solidify for homeowners the town's commitment to the project.

That vote may have opened the proverbial "Pandora's box."

Draft wording over potential fees has selectmen hopping mad and Town Counsel Paul DeRensis crying foul. They stressed the town has satisfied the judgment by extending sewers to problem areas and creating a voluntary Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan for homes that will continue to have on-site systems.

"We've complied with the original (Second Amended Judgment). We have a wastewater management plan. No one took advantage of it, but that's not our fault," DeRensis said.

A copy of the DEP draft was not provided to the press and public because it contained information to be discussed in executive session, officials said.

The Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan would charge fees to homeowners who opt into the program and have Title 5 systems. The town would then be responsible for the system's maintenance. No one has signed up for the program.

"I'd like to put the amended judgment to bed."
— Selectman Gary Vanderweil

DeRensis said if the town agreed to paying fees in any amount, it would essentially be admitting wrongdoing. "They say we failed, but we had a plan," DeRensis said.

The news also did not sit well with town officials.

"I totally agree, it's morally objectionable. We've been making steady progress," said Vanderweil.

Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz didn't mince words.

"They should be ashamed. They're not talking to safe crackers or rapists, this is a town that has spent a lot of time on this," he said.

There was also some discussion regarding whether the town could meet the schedule currently included in the draft judgment, which was provided by Tutela Engineering Associates, the town's current consulting engineers on sewer projects. But town officials want some flexibility built in.

Kasperowicz said sometimes problems arise and many are beyond the town's control. He said if a contractor went bankrupt or any other similar "monkey wrench" was thrown into the mix, the town should have an ability to veer from the schedule which has been set.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he was also concerned if the town doesn't meet the schedule just because things take longer than they should, the state could impose fees.

"We need to build in the best protection we can get in the event we don't meet the deadlines," he said.

But Town Manager Bill Griffin said the board should take the discussion one step at a time. The first area of business is to make their concerns known to the DEP.

Tutela engineer Daniel Coughlin said he feels comfortable in saying the town can meet the schedule, whether Tutela is chosen during the bidding process or not. Tutela has worked with the town on the Central and North Cohasset sewer projects.

Selectmen will take up the matter again Tuesday June 21.

Flash back: The Second Amended Final Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, which could have cost the town $10,000 per day in fines. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment.

As a result, the town embarked on two sewer projects, including an expansion of the Central Sewer District and the North Cohasset sewer project, which allowed residents to tie-in to capacity at the Hull treatment facility. The town also has a voluntary Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan for those on septic systems.

Which deficit plan makes the cut is still up in the air

for one more year.

The new grade one teacher that had been proposed and the new English teaching position will not be added to the staff this year. Both positions have been estimated at $45,000 each.

By taking those four teachers out of the equation, it will free up $180,000. When added to the roughly $105,000 anticipated circuit breaker funding increase, Walsh expects it will yield the $285,000 the schools need. Circuit breaker money is reimbursement from the state for out of district special education charges.

A majority of voters turned down a $400,000 operating budget override at a special election held this May. The override would have increased taxes more than the 2-1/2 percent allowed annually. The budget presented to Town Meeting prior to the election included the $400,000 figure, and therefore a new balanced budget will need to be presented and voted on at a Special Town Meeting to take place before the new tax rate is set in September.

Walsh said the town has agreed to split the $400,000.

In a telephone interview, Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained the town is expecting to receive $70,000 more than originally projected in local aid reimbursement, and a $15,000 reduction in the town's charter school assessment. With those additional funds, the $400,000 gap has been reduced to $315,000. With the schools picking up $285,000, the town is left to come up with $30,000, and Buckley along with Town Manager Bill Griffin will decide where to make those cuts.

On the school side, Williams said she does not want to see any faculty members let go and "compromise the education of Cohasset students." She said the school department needs to examine its options and "dig deeper" to see where money can be found.

"We need to create new ways to solve the problem," she said, adding she believes by implementing a $1 increase in the school lunch program, the two teaching positions which were privately funded and would have been eliminated, can be saved.

Williams said she has been gathering information during the past few weeks and has learned the Cohasset schools serve 9,700 lunches per month on average. Taking out the supplemented lunches, she estimated roughly 8,000 full-price lunches are served per month. Williams did not include breakfast sales in her calculations.

If the lunch charge is raised by $1, that would yield $8,000 per month, which could in turn raise $80,000 throughout the course of the school year, she said.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz agreed with Williams. "Before we cut teachers, we should explore all options," he said.

Walsh said she had not heard about implementing higher lunch fees until the meeting and therefore did not have figures before her so she could not comment on the matter. She also said it is very uncommon to discuss changing food services without its coordinator present. She said in almost every school district, food services is a self-supporting endeavor and the program is not the money-maker Williams made it out to be.

Walsh said usually, any funds made by the lunch program go back into the program, often as a contingency fund. If a stove needs repairs or if raises need to be given to cafeteria employees, that is where the profit money goes, not to support teacher salaries.

"I've never heard of anything like it," she said.

Slanetz said he too has been investigating creative ways to raise more money for the schools and said he has been looking at implementing fees for transportation. In addition, he said the school department should begin looking at its transportation program as a whole, and consider potentially "car-pooling" with Scituate special education students who might be attending the same out-of-district schools. He also said the issue of maintenance could be looked into, and potentially, the town and schools could use the same mechanics and perhaps save money.

Walsh said the issue of a joint contract for special education transportation may not be legal.

School committee member Rick Flynn said while he appreciates the efforts being put forth by Williams and Slanetz, they are too late.

"With all due respect, we've been living with a budget since October. It's been scrubbed from the bottom up. We felt comfortable presenting it at lengthy public meetings and two Town Meetings," he said.

Flynn added the school department has already raised fees for the athletic program and said, "To try to balance the school budget on the school lunch program is like Russian roulette. What if they don't want to buy anymore?"

Flynn said raising lunch fees is essentially a tax on families with schoolchildren. He said the town has already spoken that it does not want to increase its taxes, and that is what an increase in lunch fees would be.

Flynn said the voters were given a choice to choose to fund the services they want, and it was said if the override did not pass, teaching positions would be cut. The town chose not to support it, and Flynn said the committee should do what it said would be done, or risk its credibility, which could result in overrides not being passed in the future.

"I think we have to deal with the money we have right now. What are we going to do if everyone decides to boycott lunches in 2006," he said.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy agreed and said there is a perception in the community that every year, a teaching position is held out to persuade voters to support the override, but in the end, positions are never really lost.

"I don't want to see two teachers let go," she said, but agreed with Flynn that the board's credibility is on the line.

School committee member Pam Wilson asked whether they could somehow survey parents to see if they would be willing to pay the extra dollar if they know it will be used to save teaching positions.

However, Flynn said with the end of the fiscal year in two weeks, the school committee does not have the kind of time it would need to properly investigate raising lunch fees. He said the time to bring new ideas to the forefront has long since passed.

But Williams said she doesn't think the message voters wanted to send when they did not approve the override was that they wanted to cut teachers.

Williams then suggested the schools begin implementing a "service bank" which would have parents volunteering their time to clean or make improvements to the school buildings. She said if parents could be counted on to make repairs or paint or clean, it could save the town money.

However, Flynn reminded Williams of the plan at the Deer Hill school where aides were cut from the budget, with the anticipation parents would come forward to help out, and that assumption ended in disaster.

"These are all great ideas, but maybe they're 2007 ideas. We're dealing with 2006 and it's one month away," he said.

The school committee met Thursday to discuss creative alternatives to raise money after the Mariner went to press. The board will meet again June 23 at 7 p.m. in the community meeting room near the superintendent's office at Cohasset High School. All are welcome to attend.

Teachers show solidarity over contract negotiations

Turned out in force last week

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With contracts expiring Aug. 31, a zero percent increase currently plugged into the school budget, and a failed $400,000 override — money is tight and school employees are concerned about what the future holds.

So it was no surprise there was standing-room only at last week's (June 9) school committee meeting, where teachers and nurses — wearing symbolic red buttons displaying their unity — came to show their concerns over contract negotiations.

What looked like picket signs lining the doorway leading to the meeting room spoke to the quality of education in Cohasset schools and the commitment teachers have to making that happen.

Members of the Cohasset Teachers Association asked to be put on the June 9 school committee agenda to present their concerns.

Cohasset Middle School language teacher Heidi Olson read a statement on behalf of the CTS, outlining its position.

"As the current school year draws to a close, the Cohasset Teachers Association is concerned that our present three-year contract is expiring in August of 2005. Negotiations began in November of 2004 and very little progress has been made since that time," she said.

Olson then handed school committee chairman Jamie Williams numerous letters in support of the negotiations team that were signed by teachers and nurses.

Olson also pointed out the many achievements of Cohasset students, making special note of this year's graduating seniors.

"Ninety-two percent of our graduating seniors will attend four-year colleges and universities in the fall," she said. "Our graduates have been admitted to prestigious colleges, such as Oxford, Harvard, Dartmouth, Georgetown, and Middlebury, just to name a few.

"For the fifth year in a row, a student at our high school has been awarded the distinguished Henry David Thoreau Scholarship…In a small school system like ours, these accomplishments just could not happen without the skill, dedication, and commitment of the teachers of the Cohasset Public Schools in partnership with the parents and the community."

To retain and attract the kinds of teachers the Cohasset community expects, Olson said competitive salaries need to be offered. In addition, she said all teachers and nurses need to have the opportunity and financial support to take graduate courses to further their professional growth.

"Let us work together now to reach this goal so that no further job actions will be necessary," she said.

In an interview after the meeting, school committee member Alfred Slanetz said he was very happy to see the number of people in the audience during last week's meeting, as more participation is always welcome. He said he would love teachers to become a bigger part of the decision-making process and "Help us make good decisions to optimize the classroom experience for children."

He said for some time now, he has been putting out the idea to the committee of having a regular "Coffee with the Committee," during which teachers would meet with a member or two from the school committee and get to know each other on a more informal basis and share ideas for an hour or so before school. He said he would like coffees to happen at all three schools on either a monthly or bi-monthly basis.

"I hope it'll get to a vote," he said.

"Teachers and the classroom experience are the most valuable part of education," he said, adding even though there is a limited budget this year, his mission has been to enhance the classroom experience.

"Teachers are at the heart of our schools and we're very fortunate to have an excellent and very qualified staff," he said. "I want them to know they are respected as professionals and individuals and we very much appreciate their many contributions."

Summer theater camp puts kids in the limelight

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

'TIS THE SEASON

Summer is coming(I think, depending on the day) and with it are all of the tell-tale signs like the Art Festival on the Common, Strawberry Festival, Relay For Life and the many graduations all over.

Congratulations to all students from pre-school to adult who have graduated and are ready to head into a new phase in their lives.

A special wish goes out this weekend to fathers everywhere as they celebrate Fathers Day on Sunday. Have a super day.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Happy Birthday wishes to a few young men here in town.

Our son, Daniel turned 15 this past Wednesday and enjoyed his day. Daniel, we all wish you the best in the upcoming year and are all very proud of you and all of your accomplishments, we love you!

Also celebrating a very special birthday was Mister David Burke Jr. who turned a whole handful(5 years old) last Sunday! Davie, your mom, dad, sisters Kyle and Bridget, brother Joshua and dog pal Kacy, along with your extended family and friends all wish you a fun-filled and exciting year ahead! You are loved by all.

REC REGISTRATION

As everyone is finally beginning to get into the swing of summer coming, several programs are having ongoing registration at the Cohasset Recreation Department. The summer recreation program for children ages 3-12, tennis programs and assorted sports programs are available and more information is available at the Cohasset Town Hall and by calling 781-383-4109.

THEATER CAMP

The Cohasset Dramatic Club in conjunction with the Cohasset Recreation Department is also holding registration for the summer theater camp production of, "Alice in Wonderland." Their will be three evening rehearsals the week of June 27, with the day program beginning the week of July 4. Rehearsals are scheduled for Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 1 to 3:30 p.m. at Town Hall. On each Wednesday of the program their will be theatrical workshops which will include: theatrical makeup, special effect lighting, improvisation, and a basic overview of theatrical terminology and a behind-the-curtain look at how sets are transformed from one scene to another and what it takes to make it all come together. The program will end on the weekend of August 5 with four performances.

Lisa Pratt will be directing this production with musical direction from Mark Bono, Onsite/program coordinator by yours truly (Jen Piepenbrink), musical and production help from Susan Jaffe and Cee Cee Chapman and producer Jean DiGiacomondrea to round out the staff. It is going to be a fantastic, fun-filled and exciting program for boys and girls from ages 6-16!

This year the cost of the program includes T-shirts, cast party entertainment and refreshments, and all other events that pertain to the program. The registration fee is $350 per child, but the experience will undoubtedly be priceless. Please come on down to Town Hall to register, come to auditions on Tuesday, June 21 at the Town Hall auditorium at 6 p.m. or call Jean D. at 617-750-8987, Lisa Pratt at 781-383-1387 or Jen Piepenbrink at 781-383-0143 with any questions you may have.

NU DEAN'S LIST

Northeastern University is pleased to recognize those students who distinguish themselves academically during the course of the school year. Local residents were recently named to the University's dean's list for the spring semester 2005, which ended in May 2005. Cohasset resident, Barry Tufts, who is majoring in political science was among those recognized. Great job Barry.

The following Cohasset residents received degrees during UMass Boston's 37th commencement, held on June 4. Undergraduate degree recipients include: Jeffrey Edgar Flanagan, economics; and John R. Whitehouse, nursing. Graduate degree recipients are: Bonnie Carraher, master of business administration. Congratulations to all.

WALLY FEVER

Joseph Protulis poses with Wally the Green Monster at the Hanover Mall for a special kids' event celebrating the naming of the new kids' play area. Families enjoyed music by Radio Disney and free tickets to a movie screening of "Herbie: Fully Loaded" at Patriot Cinema on June 20.

SO GOOD!

Don't forget to stop by the Second Congregational Church this weekend while attending the South Shore Art Center's Festival on the Common for delicious Strawberry Shortcakes and more! Grilled foods, cold drinks and fresh strawberry shortcakes will be sold this Friday afternoon from 2 to 7 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday, noon to 6 p.m. Visitors can sit and enjoy their treats at tables inside or outside the Church. As always, proceeds help to support local charities in need including the Social Service League, the Mary Martha Learning Center in Hingham and Wellspring in Hull

BC GRADUATES

Boston College had several Cohasset 2005 graduates. Emily Coyne earned a bachelor of arts degree in elementary education and human development.

John R. Crowley-Buck graduated with a bachelor of arts degree in theology and English.

And Kristen L. Devine graduated with a bachelor of science degree in finance.

All the best for great futures!

RELAY FOR LIFE

The American Cancer Society's Relay For Life this weekend.. Area residents will have the opportunity to sample food from local restaurants and caterers including: The Red Parrot, Atlantica, Red Lion Inn, Salsa's, Starbucks, Windsor Tea Shop, Pizza Zone, Laura Atherton, and cookies from Sunrise. Tickets to Taste of the Relay, which is open to the public are $5 and can be purchased at the door. Admission for cancer survivors is free.

This event is something that is for the whole family and until you have experienced it, you will not be able to see or feel the scope of the event. It is truly a team effort to help raise money for such an important cause.

BC HIGH SCHOLARSHIP

Based on his fine performance on the entrance examination, Kyle DeSisto, son of Todd and Laura DeSisto, was recently named a Freshman Scholar at Boston College High School. Kyle was awarded a scholarship for this achievement and will join the freshman class of 2009 this coming fall. Congratulations, Kyle!

ROCKLAND TRUST SCHOLARSHIP

Rockland Trust awarded Elyse Portanova, a senior at South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School, with the Rockland Trust Company Charitable Foundation Scholarship. The scholarship was presented during graduation ceremonies at the school on June 5. Congratulations Elyse.

CHARTER SCHOOL GRAD

Congratulations are going out to Brian Christopher Pratt who graduated June 4 from South Shore Charter Public School in Norwell. Brian received the Barbara Pape Memorial Scholarship given by the Boy Scout Troop 28 in Cohasset and the scholarship Award for Citizenship from the South Shore Charter Public School Parents Association. Brian will be heading off to Daniel Webster College in Nashua, N.H. in the fall. Congratulations, and good luck.

SYRACUSE STANDOUT

Evan McCaffrey was named to the dean's list for the Spring 2005 semester at Syracuse University College of Arts and Science. Evan is a senior majoring in psychology. Super job Evan.

EMMANUEL GRAD

Emmanuel College in Boston held its 83rd Commencement exercises on May 14. Jennifer S. Meehan graduated with a BA in liberal studies. Congratulations Jennifer.

GEORGETOWN GRADUATE

Benjamin David Bixby graduated from Georgetown University last month. Benjamin earned a bachelor's degree from the School of Foreign Service.

That is all for this week. Send in all of your news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by noon. I will no longer be accepting items that are phoned in.

All items need to be emailed or mailed to me to be included in the column.

Chris Golden recognized at Harvard

Harvard University senior Christopher D. Golden, of Cohasset, an environmental conservation concentrator, was a winner of the 2005 Captain Jonathan Fay Prize, which is awarded by the Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study at Harvard University. Radcliffe Institute Dean Drew Gilpin Faust announced the winners — who graduated from Harvard with bachelor's degrees on June 9 — at the Radcliffe Institute's annual Strawberry Tea on Wednesday, June 1. The other winners were Liora Russman Halperin and Peter McMurray.

The Fay Prize honors members of Harvard's graduating class who have produced the most outstanding imaginative work or piece of original research in any field, which can take the form of a thesis, class research or creative arts project. Candidates for the Fay Prize are chosen from among the nominees for Harvard College's Thomas T. Hoopes Prize, awarded annually for outstanding scholarly work or research.

"Chris's research is an immediate contribution to the applied field of conservation biology."
— Glenn Adelson, teaching fellow

Golden's winning thesis, "Eaten to Endangerment: Mammal Hunting and the Bushmeat Trade in Madagascar's Makira Forest," discussed the impact of bushmeat hunting on biodiversity in Madagascar. He spent the summer after his sophomore year working as a research assistant in Ankarafantsika National Park and implementing an environmental education project in Andranofasika. While there, he learned and made connections to the local community that proved valuable when he returned to Madagascar the following Malagasy summer under the auspices of the Wildlife Conservation Society to spend three months in the Makira rainforest conducting research on bushmeat hunting. Golden has since been flown to Madagascar by Conservation International to present his thesis, which was hailed as one of the largest new assets to conservation management.

Glenn Adelson, a teaching fellow in the biology department, nominated Golden's thesis and said, "Chris's research is an immediate contribution to the applied field of conservation biology" that takes an interdisciplinary approach, "embodying a new paradigm for the discipline." Golden is a native of Cohasset and after graduation will spend nine months in Madagascar working as a researcher with the Wildlife Conservation Society.

The Captain Jonathan Fay Prize was established in 1907 by Joseph Storey Fay in memory of his great-grandfather, Captain Jonathan Fay. An interdisciplinary committee, convened by the Radcliffe Institute, made the final selection.

The Radcliffe Institute for Advanced Study at Harvard University is a scholarly community where individuals pursue advanced work across a wide range of academic disciplines, professions and creative arts.

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer Library Hours - Closed Sundays through Labor Day. Summer hours: Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Upcoming Author Event - Author Margaret McLean will discuss her book "Under Oath," a swiftly paced first degree murder and conspiracy trial set in Charlestown, Massachusetts, on Tuesday, June 21 at 10 a.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Knitting Group - Come join our new knitting group Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the library's Historical Room. This is a fun group for all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and visit with like-minded friends at the library. For more information call Mary Coughlin 781-383-1348.

Museum Passes - Check out the museum passes available to you at the library, compliments of the Friends of the Cohasset Library. Reserve the John F. Kennedy Library and Museum pass which admits four, free of charge. To mark the 60th anniversary of the end of World War II, the museum is featuring a special exhibit on John F. Kennedy's military service in the Navy and the rescue of the PT 109 crew. To reserve the pass call the library 781-383-1348. To book passes online visit www.cohassetlibrary.org and choose Using the Library. Click on Museum Passes for a list of passes, dates available for each pass, and specific features of each pass.

Book Discussion Group - Join us on Friday, June 24 at 10 a.m. for coffee and discussion of "Purple Hibiscus," by Chimamanda Ngozi Adichie. Registration in advance is required. Call Judy Simons 781-383-1348.

Artist Exhibit - Pembroke artist Becky Haletky celebrates 25 years as a professional artist with a retrospective exhibit at the library through June 30. Known primarily for her realistic watercolors, Haletky has also worked in several other media over the years. The show will include hand tinted photographs, photo collages, acrylics and watercolors.

Upcoming Artist Exhibit - Brooks Kelly, a Pembroke artist, will display his works at the library from July 1 through August 31. Working in acrylic and collage, his bold, colorful style is often tinged with humor. An opening reception will be held on Thursday, July 7 from 7 to 9 p.m. All are welcome.

Seaside Adventures accepting applications

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is accepting applications for its Seaside Adventures program. This is the third year for the CSCR camp that was developed as an entry program to introduce and familiarize children with the coastal and ocean environment. The summer camp program is an outdoor activity camp for students ranging from third to sixth grade.

The camp is age-appropriate, exciting, with hands-on projects introducing essential concepts of oceanography, marine biology, and environmental science. Each day students are asked to think of essential questions related to the program's theme. Students are then given opportunities to reflect upon or discuss their understandings based upon their experiences. The camp becomes a forum to learn from experience. Seaside Adventures is based on the belief that important academic understandings can be gained by engaging in "playful" activities. Explorative play gives rise to essential questions — questions that form the basis for constructing knowledge.

Returning to the camp for a third year is Cohasset Middle School science teacher Lisa Mullen who has been modifying and improving the curriculum that she originally developed.

"Seaside Adventures" still combines the fun of being at the beach as well as teaches students about the coastal environment in which they live. "This summer day camp for young students provides a way for kids to get excited about science and finding new ways to explore the environment", says Mullen. "It is a valuable way to concurrently learn and have fun and stimulates an early fascination for local ocean environment"

Interested parents can visit the camp's website at www.cscr.org for additional information on camp activities and to fill out an application. CSCR is located at 40 Parker Ave, last building on the left. Access to CSCR is also convenient from Government Island and the sailing club via a boardwalk that spans the salt marsh.

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research is a nonprofit organization with a central mission to educate students and young adults in the environmental sciences. CSCR conducts a wide range of educational programs to actively educate and involve student candidates in local environmental projects.

Sitting on the corner of Jerusalem Road and Deep Run, this home, located at 6 Deep Run, has caused a stir in the neighborhood. Homeowners have plans to raze and rebuild a new shingle-style home in its place, but neighbors are afraid blasting of ledge during construction will damage their homes.

Neighbors blast planning board over 'big home' bylaw

the 1990s. He assured them the experience would not be the same this time around.

"We keep the charge well below the level that causes damage," he said, explaining he can easily control the intensity of the blast. "I can't promise I can bring the level below the level humans can detect, but I can keep it to a minimum," he said.

However, Anne Montague, 26 Deep Run, was not swayed by Smith and said she is completely against any blasting taking place. She said many of the homes on Deep Run do not have basements because there is so much ledge and she doesn't see why this home needs to be any different.

"We're going to be blasted to smithereens," she said.

The fire department has the blasting reports on file from the project which was completed in the 1990s and Smith agreed to work with the department to compare what took place then with the Stevens' plans. The fire department is notified when any blasting takes place in town. The fire department can order blasting to stop and bring in a state explosives expert to oversee the operation if necessary.

The large home bylaw was passed at the 2004 Annual Town Meeting and serves as a way to prevent "mansionization" as well as insure there is a mechanism for abutters to air concerns when a large home is planned for a neighborhood. It is triggered when plans for a home exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area, up to 6,000 square feet. The Stevens' proposal would increase their home to 4,390 square feet. Square-feet calculations in Cohasset do not include the basement or attic spaces.

Public hearings are conducted by the planning board, which then gives a recommendation to the building inspector on whether a building permit should be issued. The planning board cannot prevent a project from moving forward.

Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said whether the neighbors like the thought of blasting going on in their neighborhood or not, the couple is well within its rights to do so. He said had the home not been a "large home" they could have torn down the existing structure and have completed blasting already, provided they had the permits to do so, and the planning board would never have been notified.

"People do have rights to do what they want to their property," he said. "No one can ever guarantee there won't be any damage."

However, member Peter Pratt said he did not agree with Moore and said when Town Meeting approved the bylaw, it was for the implicit reason that, "Things — no pun intended — were falling through the cracks." Homes were being torn down and much larger homes were being built in their place, and neighbors weren't being notified of the substantial changes which would take place in the neighborhood. He said it is the job of the planning board to ensure neighborhoods are not going to be negatively impacted by development, as the bylaw says new development cannot be injurious to what already exists.

But Moore said the board can only work with the regulations it has, and in his opinion, the Stevenses have complied. He said if the town is unhappy with the protection it has from blasting, zoning changes need to take place.

Ed Lappen, 18 Deep Run, said there must be something the planning board can do to help the abutters. Lappen is the closest abutter to the Stevens and his pool is located in close proximity to where the blasting will occur.

"Everyone on the street is worried about it. You are the only forum we have to discuss this blasting issue. The town has no provisions to protect us," he said.

Malcolm Onwood, 404 Jerusalem Road, said 95 percent of his home rests on ledge, and he worries his home will suffer from blasting as well, as the vibrations are able to travel through rock.

"I need help and support and you are the only forum I know," he said.

However, planning board member Stuart Ivimey said the bylaw as written "has no teeth" and he is required only to abide by what it says. While it shines a light on the project and makes concerns known, "I can't help you." He said voters had the ability to change the bylaw at the Annual Town Meeting this April, and amend it to give the planning board more strict guidelines for large home reviews, but the amended bylaw was voted down, and has left the board without any mechanism to help abutters.

Moore asked abutters if they would still have concerns with the home if blasting were not an issue, and Montague said blasting or not, she did not want to see the home built as planned. She said the new house will not be harmonious with the neighborhood — a requirement under the bylaw — and because it sits at the entrance to the neighborhood, the home will disturb its whole character.

"This house is triple the size of my house," she said. "My whole entire house would fit into that basement."

Robert Leggat, 21 Deep Run, said when he and his wife Sara moved into their home, they knew the day would come when someone would buy the home and want to build up, and it would affect views in the neighborhood. However, while they might like the Stevenses to consider reducing the size of the project a little, if the house meets requirements, they understand there is nothing that can be done.

Elizabeth McQuade, 11 Deep Run, also sympathized with the couple, but said the prospect of damage from blasting is still a huge concern.

"I want these guys to have a nice house, but the blasting really worries me. I think of my house, and my ceiling, and it makes me very nervous," she said.

The planning board voted 2-1 to recommend the building inspector issue a permit for the home, with the conditions that the blasting plan be subjected to a peer review, and a schedule for blasting be agreed upon with the neighborhood. Blasting can currently take place Monday through Saturday from sunrise to sunset, and daylight hours are long during the summer months. In addition, homeowners that are concerned about damage from blasting will be able to take part in a pre-blasting survey, to allow damage to be properly recorded if it occurs.

I just wanted to take a minute and tell you how happy I am with how things are going for me since I started at Fitness Together, Concord. In fact, I have already exceeded my initial expectations.

After a rough year, I had been finding more and more excuses NOT to work out. I usually fell back on the "I'm just too busy" excuse. Being able to make appointments makes it so much easier to fit into my busy schedule.

The experience wouldn't be the same without the staff you have. Frank, Johnny and Tim have given me the perfect mix of encouragement and challenge. I was never a big fan of gyms because I was a bit self-conscious. Having the private room and a trainer I am comfortable with has made all the difference.

Each month brings a new accomplishment. Here's to keeping it going!

Some joint sports teams win approval from school board

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Although they are bitter rivals during the Thanksgiving Day football game, Cohasset and Hull high schools will soon find themselves working toward a common goal when their athletes compete on the same team during the track and wrestling seasons.

There are also plans afoot for Cohasset to have a joint swim team with Scituate High.

In an effort to help boost participation in sports that could otherwise lack enough players and therefore, may not be able to continue, the Cohasset School Committee has agreed to allow cooperative athletic teams, which for now includes teaming up with Hull and Scituate high schools.

Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford said next year, the Hull and Cohasset track and wrestling teams will be combined and there will be a joint Scituate-Cohasset swim team. With combined sports programs, Ford said one school must officially be the "host" school, but in the schedule, both school names will make up the team name.

There will be a two-year commitment for the joint teams, and if at the end the program is a success, Ford said the schools could begin looking into changing logos and uniforms to incorporate both names. For now, teams will compete wearing the uniforms of their sport's host school, which means Hull students will wear Cohasset uniforms for wrestling and track and Cohasset students will swim wearing Scituate bathing suits.

Ford said there have been a few students from Hull interested in wrestling but not enough to constitute an entire team. In light of limited numbers, that school's wrestling program was cancelled. There have also been lower numbers on Cohasset's state-championship winning wrestling team than he would like.

"Kids were wrestling in two weight classes," Ford said about Cohasset. He said having more teammates would be a plus. "It will give us more flexibility."

Without its own track, Hull High School has also had limited participation in track and field. By joining up with Cohasset, Ford hopes participation will grow to the point where the schools could combine to have a 50-member team, which many other single schools already have. Currently, Cohasset has roughly 30 students participating in track, with an even number of boys and girls.

The Cohasset wrestling and track teams are both included in this year's budget. Hull will pick up 50 percent of the cost of the track team even though initially, it won't have the participation numbers that Cohasset will. Hull will also be responsible for transporting its students to Cohasset for practice.

Because the school's numbers will be so small, Hull will only be charged a percentage of the cost associated with the wrestling team relative to the number of students who participate. Ford said perhaps the cost could be picked up by one of the Hull boosters clubs.

While swimming is a popular sport during the summer months, during the school year there is nothing offered. Ford said next year, Cohasset plans to partner with Scituate for a combined swim team. The athletic director from Scituate would be responsible for conducting practice, but Ford said he will work closely with the team.

"There's a lot of interest and excitement," he said, adding he estimates between 10 and 15 students will participate from Cohasset and roughly 20 from Scituate. "It would be a good competitive program," he said.

Ford said the swimming program is currently not in Cohasset's budget, and therefore would need to be funded by parents. However, if things go well, he hopes the program might be considered for inclusion in the budget moving forward. He estimated the combined team will cost $16,000 with the charges for each school based on the percentage of students participating from each town. Ford said there has been talk about holding fund-raisers over the summer to support the program.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said she is excited at the prospect of combining sports teams. "I think it's great for our kids to work with other kids," she said, as it really drives the message of sportsmanship home. Other members of the committee agreed. The joint programs passed unanimously.

Students enjoyed trip to France

Eleven students from Michelle Kelly's French class recently participated in a biannual foreign exchange program, during which time they toured many famous sites in France. Not only did students stay with host-families on their own, as a group they toured Monet's house in Giverny, the beaches at Normandy, and the Loire Valley castles. Students also spent time in Paris, where they ate dinner in the Eiffel Tower and took a trip to its top. They visited the Louvre and the Musée d'Orsay, and also took a boat ride on the Seine River.

"You can be extremely proud, they represented our country well," said Kelly, adding all students spoke French almost the entire length of the trip.

Residents lace up for ninth annual Relay

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the Cohasset community is small in number, it is big in heart, which is evident in the number of charitable events its residents participate in. This year, for the ninth in a row, it is estimated that more than 600 walkers from the community and its surrounding towns, including Hingham and Scituate, will participate in the Relay for Life, raising money to support the American Cancer Society in all its endeavors.

From Friday, June 17 at 6 p.m. to Saturday June 18 at 10 a.m. Relay participants will raise money to benefit the Americal Cancer Society while they walk the track at Cohasset High School in teams, taking turns while trying to keep a presence on the track all night long.

Cohasset Relay Chairman Harry St. Onge said last year, "We raised over $152,000," and this year, Cohasset has set its sights on raising at least that much. Already, preliminary counts on donations show pledges of roughly $40,000 with more than $15,000 raised by the "Springtime for Shelly," team, roughly $8,000 from the "Glastonbury Abby" team, and almost $7,000 raised by the "Happy Kids" team.

To celebrate the strides that have been made in cancer research and the ability to put up a strong battle against the disease, every year the Relay begins with cancer survivors taking a victory lap around the track.

"The involvement of local cancer survivors is proof of the progress that has been made in improving cancer survival rates and the quality of life following cancer treatment," said Holly Grant, area director for development for the American Cancer Society.

St. Onge, a three-time cancer survivor, said last year, 61 survivors walked the first lap. The survivors were spread throughout 37 teams participating in the event.

While the Relay is centered around a serious cause, it is also full of entertainment and celebration for those who participate. There will be music, team fund-raising activities, fun theme laps, and contests going all night long. In addition, to help nourish the appetites of those walking the track, the Taste of the Relay will be held, beginning at roughly 6:40 p.m., just after the survivor's lap.

This year, the Taste will be in its sixth year, and booths featuring area restaurants such as Schooners, the Red Parrot, Atlantica, the Red Lion Inn, Salsa's, Starbucks, the Windsor Tea Shop, the Pizza Zone, and Laura Atherton will be serving their specialties to participants from roughly 6:40p.m.to 8 p.m. in the Cohasset High School cafeteria. All the restaurants have volunteered their time and their food to help benefit the cause.

At roughly 9 p.m., the lighting of the Luminaria will take place, which over the years, participants have said is the most beautiful and memorable part of the night. Candles are placed in bags around the track and lit in memory of loved ones who have passed away from cancer, but also in support of those fighting the disease. Cohasset is one of the few towns which still alphabetizes its luminaria bags, which makes it easier for loved ones to find their memorial.

Kerri Powers of the American Cancer Society said there will be roughly 1500 luminaria lit this year, symbolizing the hope the Relay gives to those who have been affected by the disease.

The Relay for Life is the American Cancer Society's largest signature event, as well as the most successful national fund raiser. It began in 1985 when Dr. Gordon Klatt took the first step of his 24-hour walk around a Tacoma Washington track and raised $27,000 for the American Cancer Society. The following year, 220 supporters on 19 teams joined Klatt and the Relay was born. Ever since, the Relay has continued to grow.

Powers said funds raised during the event help support research, education, advocacy and patient services. In 2004, 3 million people participated nationwide, and 500,000 cancer survivors walked during survivor's laps. The Relay raised $306 million at more than 4,000 sites throughout the United States and the effort has spread to nine other countries, evolving into a worldwide movement to end cancer.

In Massachusetts alone, there were 68 Relay events which took place in 2004, raising $9.2 million. It is anticipated there will be close to 80 Relay events spread throughout Massachusetts this year.

For more information or to volunteer, please contact Relay Coordinator Harry St. Onge at (781) 383-9457 or via e-mail at st.onge@comcast.net, or check-in at the registration tent during the Relay. More information on the Relay can also be found on the American Cancer Society Web site at www.cancer.org.

'Our Town' art shows what makes their town special

"Our goal was 10-to-15 schools out of the 55 invitations sent out altogether. So we felt we got a great response," Canney said.

The 15 area high schools that accepted the offer to participate include Braintree, Cohasset, East Bridgewater, Hingham, Norwell, Plymouth North, Rockland, Scituate, Silver Lake Regional and Walpole, plus Cardinal Spellman High School in Brockton, Sacred Heart High School in Kingston, the South Shore Charter School in Norwell, and South Shore Christian Academy in Weymouth. Students from the Inly School in Scituate also took part.

"196 students took part altogether, some in-class and some after school."

— Kim Canney, South Shore Art Center

Together, the students involved managed to come up with remarkably intriguing and diverse visual-artistic interpretations of their towns, Canney said. Each one also provides a group statement representing their works, describing aspects such as the creative process, varieties of media used and motifs ranging from traditions and pristine natural elements to modernization and commercialization.

The paintings will be assembled in an installation on Cohasset Common. The public will be able to walk through and observe the young artists' perspectives on their hometowns in a way similar to those, who recently strolled and browsed through Christo's Central Park Gates.

"196 students took part altogether, some in-class and some after school. A lot of their teachers said that the art project was very exciting because it gave the students focus," Canney said.

Art Center Executive Director Sarah Hannah gave the project high marks.

"It's extraordinary that 120 high school students from 14 schools tapped their creativity to contribute to this unique piece of art. Our Town – Outside the Frame celebrates the South Shore Art Center's 50-year commitment to art education and artists," she said. "Come walk through this amazing installation on Cohasset Common...don't miss our 50th Arts Festival!"

The Festival also brings back all of its usual, crowd-pleasing attractions: the individual tents with 90 craft artists, the signature 10-pole art exhibition tent, the Festival Performance stage, and the always popular Young Artists Exhibition in the KidsTent.

And within these larger fixtures, the event includes its usual smaller diversions, such as, en plein air painters, fine crafts, musical performances and artist demonstrations.

Strawberry shortcake and lobster rolls are among myriad food offerings over the weekend.

Festival hours are Friday, 2 p.m.-7 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m.-7 p.m. and Sunday, Noon-6 p.m. South Shore Art Center Arts Festival is held outdoors, rain or shine. A free trolley shuttles visitors from near-by parking. For more information visit www.ssac.org or contact the Art Center: 781-383-2787.

Experience the Village drawing

Starting with the Art Festival on the Common weekend June 17 to19 and continuing throughout the summer, Experience the Village shopping cards may be picked up from any participating merchant.

Cohasset Village shops have a lot to offer — from fine dining, to unique home decorating ideas, to natural and organic foods and quality supplements, to a first class hardware store, and more. Now village merchants have teamed up to offer customers a chance to win $1,000 in gift certificates from their shops.

Starting with the Art Festival on the Common weekend June 17 to19 and continuing throughout the summer, Experience the Village shopping cards may be picked up from any participating merchant. Bring the card when visiting the village and have it validated for every purchase made at participating shops. A completed card must indicate a validated purchase from each participating merchant. Completed cards will be entered in a drawing held over Labor Day weekend.

The winning entrant receives a collection of gift certificates worth $1,000, redeemable from participating merchants. Gift certificates may be redeemed by the winner, transferred, or given as gifts.

Participants may enter as many times as they wish, as long as each purchase is validated.

Look for "Experience The Village" posters identifying participating merchants offering shopping cards or watch for merchant representatives distributing cards during Art Festival on the Common weekend.

Help launch CMI's 10th season!

Help launch the Cohasset Maritime Institute's 10th season and capital campaign at a Texas Hold 'em "Stroke of Luck Party" on Friday, June 24, at 7:30 p.m. the River Club, Border Street, North Scituate. Tickets are $25 per person at Buttonwood Books. For those wanting to try their luck at the cards, there is an additional tournament entry fee of $25 per player. First round is at 8p.m. sharp.

Rowing into summer, CMI is embarking on a major capital campaign to fund the construction and purchase of three ocean-going 26 foot Pilot Gigs - four-man sliding seat boats. The three new boats will replace leased boats which have been the anchor of both the youth and adult CMI programs. Join CMI for a fun evening of music, food, poker prizes, and a silent and live auction. Reservations can be made by calling Lisa Hewitt Dick at 383-0204, Susan Galligan at 383-0765, or email LMHewitt@comcast.net.

Tickets at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset and with CMI rowers.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE

Debbie Anderson, Ann Mitchell and Linda Pratt helped to prepare the more than 2500 Strawberry Shortcakes sold last year as part of the Second Congregational Church's annual Strawberry Festival that runs alongside the Arts Festival on the Common every Father's Day weekend. Grilled foods, fresh shortcakes, cold drinks and more will be on sale at the Second Congregational Church (next to Town Hall) this Friday, 2 to 7 p.m., Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and Sunday noon to 6 p.m. Proceeds help to support local charities.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Respect for the flag

Most of us have shed a tear at events when Old Glory is raised or lowered. We place our hand over our heart or salute as the Star Spangled Banner or other patriotic music is played.

Pride in our flag is something most Americans share.

But today with the Stars and Stripes adorning everything from running shorts to plastic cups, most of us have no understanding of how to show respect for our flag on a regular basis.

However, here in Cohasset we can thank the American Legion Post, and in particular the Sons of the American Legion led by Thomas Wigmore, for providing us with the opportunity to properly dispose of old American flags.

Over the past years, hundreds dropped old flags off at the depository in front of the Legion Hall on Summer Street.

On Sunday, the Sons, along with members of the VFW, Legion and Legion Ladies Auxiliary, conducted a flag burning ceremony at Woodside Cemetery — where tattered flags that had served their purpose as symbols of our patriotism — were burned in a dignified manner.

The Sons plan to make the ceremony an annual event around Flag Day, which is the anniversary of the Continental Congress' Flag Resolution on June 14, 1777. The resolution established the flag as having 13 alternating red and white stripes; and the white stars (13 at the time) on a blue field. Flag Day was officially established by the Proclamation of President Woodrow Wilson in 1916. And in 1949, President Harry Truman signed an Act of Congress designating June 14 of each year as National Flag Day.

Most of us mean no harm when we allow our flags displayed on our homes or atop flag poles at our businesses to become worn. But, truthfully, that is a sign of disrespect. We owe it to all those who fought for our flag — which the symbol of the freedom we enjoy — to ensure our old flag is either cleaned and mended, or retired and replaced when it is no longer fit to serve as a symbol of our country.

The red, white and blue of Old Glory, no matter how small or large, should be vibrant — the edges crisp. A bright, fresh flag can shows we continue to renew our belief in all that the Stars and Stripes stand for.

Here are some tips for displaying the flag:

• On a vehicle - Attach the flag to the antenna or clamp the flagstaff to the right fender. Do not lay the flag over the vehicle.

• On a building - Hang the flag on a staff or on a rope over the sidewalk with the stars away from the building.

• Over the street - Hang the flag with the stars to the east on a north- south street or north on an east-west street.

• Above other flags - Hang the flag above any other flag on the same pole

• Other flags, separate poles - Hang all flags on equal poles. Hang the U.S. flag on its own right, hoist it first and lower it last.

• In a window - Hang the flag vertically with the stars to the left of anyone looking at it from the street.

• Half-staff - This is a sign of mourning. Raise the flag to the top of the pole then lower it to the half way point. Before lowering the flag, raise it to the top again at the end of the day.

• Upside down - An upside-down flag is considered a distress signal.

• Multiple staffs - If you display the flag on a staff with other flags around it, place the flag at the center and highest point. Crossed staffs - Keep the flagstaff higher and on its own right.

• In a hall or lobby - Hang the flag vertically across from the main entrance with the stars to the left of anyone coming through the door.

About the Stars and Stripes — Between 1777 and 1960, Congress passed several acts that changed the shape, design and arrangement of the flag and allowed for additional stars and stripes to be added to reflect the admission of each new state.

Today the flag consists of 13 horizontal stripes, seven red alternating with six white. The stripes represent the original 13 colonies, the stars represent the 50 states of the Union. The colors of the flag are symbolic as well; red symbolizes hardiness and valor; white symbolizes purity and innocence and blue represents vigilance, perseverance and justice.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Post-prom party support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR

The 2005 Post Prom Committee would like to thank everyone who helped make this year's Post Prom such a success.

We thank Jack DeLorenzo and Mike Gill, Cohasset High School Principal and Vice Principal; the Cohasset School Committee, especially Adrienne MacCarthy; Cohasset Police Chief Jim Hussey and the police officers, firefighters and custodian who were in attendance that night, for helping us plan and carry out a safe, event-free night for the students.

A huge thank you goes to Joe Campbell of Atlantica Restaurant for donating his time to guide us through the planning and set-up of the food served at the event, and to Joe and Atlantica itself for the very generous donation of much of the food we needed. Thank you also to Bia Restaurant for offering us a discount on additional food and working with us to provide a really wonderful variety of great food for the students.

We also greatly appreciate the donations of money or merchandise and gift certificates for prizes by numerous local businesses and citizens. Contributions were received from Above All Others Hair Salon, the American Legion, The Bag Lady, Buttonwood Books & Toys, Casa del Sole, Cohasset Collision, Cohasset House of Pizza, the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters Club, the Cohasset PSO, Exxon, Fiori & Sons, Mary Foley, Good Fella's Pizza, Good Sport, Hassan Sign, Dave Holway, JJ's Dairy Hut, Karen Elizabeth's Jewelry, KTB Designs, Trisha Leahy, Peggy Lovallo, Nails Essential Spa, Nail Flair, Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, Pizza Zone, Pro Sports, Rudolph Adamo Salons, the Shoe Market, the South Shore Community Center, Shaws, The Sports Closet, Starbucks, Tedeschi's, Victoria's Pizza, and the Village Butcher Shop & Deli. Thank you to all of these local businesses and individuals for their generous support.

For their huge help with the Pre Prom portion of the evening at the Common, a big thank you to Dan Leahy for all the time he spent taking and developing photos of each couple, and to Noble's Camera Shop, which gave us a discount and kept the store open late so the photos could be developed before the seniors arrived back for the Post Prom.

Finally, we could not have run this event without our chaperones, many of whom gave up an entire night of sleep to make sure others' children had a safe place to go after the Prom. Thank you Joan Busk, Bill and Mary Foley, Jay Graham, Mary Granville and Roger Lowe, Bill Grimm, Dick Holway, Ronnie and Dave McMorris, Denny and Susan Meikleham, Rich Ofsthun, Marilee Pestone, Mary Sullivan, Debi Trachtenberg, and Susan and Bob Turgiss for all those sleepless hours!

The entire community came together to help the Class of 2005 enjoy a memorable night, from the Pre Prom on the Common, to the Prom at Venezia, to the Post Prom back in Cohasset. Thank you to all involved and best wishes to the Class of 2005!

Gift donation clarified

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to clarify a point made in Samantha Brown's story about the recognition of Mr. DeLorenzo at last Saturday's high school graduation. Ms. Brown's story states that the PSO presented Mr. DeLorenzo with a 10-day trip to Italy in recognition of his years of service.

While it is true that the presenter, Linda Bolster, is a member of the PSO and that the PSO made a contribution to the gift, as we traditionally do when an administrator leaves, the gift was not funded by the PSO. Ms. Bolster was acting as an individual in organizing this gift and many contributors from the senior class and the community gave generously to her cause.

The PSO was happy to be able to help recognize an individual who has given so much to our schools, but Ms. Brown gives us too much credit for what was truly a community effort.

Fix the budget and live within it

TO THE EDITOR

I watched the School Committee meeting last week, and have concluded the majority of them just don't get it. The No Vote was not just no more money. The No Vote was not fire the teachers.

It was look at your budget, live within it, fix the problem areas — i.e., the lunch program, health benefits, efficiency of staff, vehicle maintenance, utilities, cell phones. Find ways to restructure outside the classroom. Don't threaten/blackmail us with teacher cuts. We know it's not easy, but it's excesses like these that make us think you're not even trying.

Make a good faith effort. Don't just keep saying it's a 'bare-bone' budget. Don't put out information via the Advisory Board using outdated data to support your claims. I have

Sandy Beach to delay seasonal opening

COMMENTARY

ROBIN LAWRENCE

Sandy Beach is a private developed barrier beach, owned and managed by the Sandy Beach Association (SBA) as set forth in a trust established in 1917 for recreational use by Cohasset residents.

Under the sound management of the SBA Board, overseen by the Cohasset Conservation Commission, families have enjoyed the splendor of the wonderful white sand at Sandy Beach for decades. The Town of Cohasset owns the beach parking lot and works collaboratively with the SBA to meet the parking needs of beachgoers.

In June 2004, the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), acting on a complaint from a Cohasset resident, alleged that the SBA and the Town were in violation of the Cohasset Conservation Commission approved beach management plan. The DEP requested the SBA establish a frontal dune (located seaward of the wall separating the beach from the parking lot) and restrict use of "cleaning equipment" on the beach. The DEP further requested the Town reestablish the accumulated sand liming the area between the parking lot and Atlantic Avenue.

Cleaning of the beach and parking lot had to be postponed until this week and will not be completed until Friday, June 24.

The SBA Board and Town management spent a significant amount of time, effort, and financial resources to resolve beach management and parking lot maintenance issues that are of concern to the DEP. After 12 months of threatened daily fines and tense negotiations, the DEP reached a formal agreement with the SBA Board and the Town of Cohasset this week.

The agreement, which includes a beach management and parking lot maintenance plan, establishes height and width parameters for "equipment no touch" sand accumulation areas seaward of the beach rock wall and along the parking lot border with Atlantic Avenue.

While the SBA and the Town are relieved to conclude the negotiations, the delay in reaching consensus has negative consequences. Cleaning of the beach and parking lot had to be postponed until this week and will not be completed until Friday, June 24. For safety purposes, the beach and parking lot will be closed to the public when equipment is operating. The seasonal beach opening, with lifeguard staffing and bathhouse availability, has been rescheduled to Saturday, June 25.

The Association's goal of saving our valuable natural resource while retaining its recreational use continues to be of paramount importance. The SBA Board wishes you a happy and healthy summer at Sandy Beach.

Stumps, wetland replication and safety

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The MBTA clearing operations continue to work their way toward the Hingham line. Mid week they were pulling stumps in the area between Smith Place and Sohier Street. The stumps are yanked out of the ground by a very large power shovel. Another very specialized piece of equipment, called a tub grinder, is used to chew the stumps into tiny bits. Picture a large machine with a diesel engine, on caterpillar type tracks and a large washing machine type tub connected to the back of it. The tub itself is gigantic and is open at the top. Whole stumps are dropped in at the top and chips come out the bottom onto a conveyor. Stump grinding is a very noisy dangerous operation. Fortunately for abutters, the tub grinder does not stay in one place for very long.

Stump grinding is a very noisy dangerous operation. Fortunately for abutters, the tub grinder does not stay in one place for very long.

The MBTA will also begin the work of replacing culverts under the rail bed. Culverts are tunnels designed to permit surface water to flow from one side of the tracks to the other. There are a number of granite culverts that date back over 100 years that are generally in sad repair. They have plugged up and no longer permit the surface water to flow unobstructed. This has allowed wetlands to build up in these areas due to the poor drainage. All of the old culverts along the right of way will eventually be replaced with smooth modern culverts, mostly constructed of reinforced concrete that will allow the water to drain from the track area once more.

In addition to the culverts, the MBTA will be installing open drain ditches and covered pipes that will drain the areas along side the tracks into the streams and ponds where they ultimately flow. This improved drainage will help many areas with localized flooding due to the reduction of drainage capability that has occurred over the years.

However, there is a flip side to this story. This poor drainage has caused wetlands to establish slowly with time. These wetlands are now protected and have developed their own unique plant and animal populations. The MBTA has committed to the Massachusetts Departmental of Environmental Affairs that for every square foot of wetlands they reduce through improved drainage, they will rebuild 2 square feet of new wetlands.

So, as you drive along Route 3A you will see some construction activities behind J J's Dairy Hut. Land that used to be a part of the boatyard and the Barnes landscaping materials business is being used to construct replicated wetlands. The MBTA is replacing each square foot of demolished wetlands with two square feet of new wetlands because not all new wetlands establish themselves and become viable wetlands. Some will revert back to non-wetlands. The 2:1 replication accounts for this possible land reversion. This way we should end up with at least 100 percent wetland replication.

Lastly, what would our update be without the discussion of safety during construction? As we prepare to recess school for the summer, it is very important that parents stress the fact that the Greenbush is off-limits to children who are used to walking and riding their off-road bikes along and across the right of way. All parents of school aged children will be receiving a safety reminder that will be distributed courtesy of the schools. Please let your children know that they cannot use the right of way area safely any more. It is a very hazardous place.

School lunch 'user fees' send wrong message

COMMENTARY

DEBBIE SHADD

I watched the June 9th School Committee meeting on TV and wanted to voice my strong opposition to the Chairman's suggestion that teaching positions could be funded through an increase in lunch fees.

As far as I know, the lunch program has never been viewed as a profit center but rather as a service provided to parents and students, with fees set at a level to cover expenses. Fee issues in the past have focused on keeping fees high enough to prevent the program running in the red and requiring a subsidy. To raise fees beyond what is needed to keep the program in the black in order to fund teachers' salaries is equivalent to asking parents to pay a "user fee", and a disguised one at that, for the educational component of public education.

I think this sends a terrible message to the community at large about who should pay for public education. I also think it demeans teachers to pay for some of their salaries by overcharging parents for their children's lunches.

There are practical objections to the lunch fee proposal as well. I've watched lunch program deficits being discussed for years. It's obvious that the impact on demand of an increase in the charge for lunches is very hard to predict. Sometimes demand for lunches goes down for reasons no one can explain. It's been hard over the years for the lunch program manager to set fees in a way that will cover costs without impacting demand. It would not be wise to try to pay for even a portion of the key part of public education, i.e. teaching staff, with such an unpredictable revenue source.

It would not be wise to try to pay for even a portion of the key part of public education, i.e. teaching staff, with such an unpredictable revenue source.

It is obviously appropriate to charge for school lunches to cover the cost of this service. It is acceptable, though unfortunate, to charge fees for athletics and other co-curricular programs, and for non-mandated transportation. These are programs which, while traditional and valuable in countless ways, are not actually required to be offered. If at least some of the cost of these programs can be covered by user fees, money is freed up for core educational needs, such as teacher salaries and supplies.

I am a strong supporter of the Cohasset Public Schools. I have worked hard on numerous school-related committees and chaired several override campaigns in the past. I voted for this spring's override and urged others to do the same. I feel, however, that the voters have spoken about the amount they are willing to pay this year in taxes. At a minimum, the message is that the voters as a whole want the town and schools to live within the limits of Proposition 2 1/2 this year.

There are also clearly voters who felt that teaching positions could be saved by cutting "waste" from other areas of the school budget. I think the override vote needs to be respected, however much I disagree with it. To add money to the school budget at this point in the process, by charging parents a fee to provide classroom instruction, is to ignore the voters' message. If there are ways to structure our transportation system differently to perhaps save money next year, something the Superintendent seems to already be working on, then that should be pursued now so those changes can be incorporated into the '07 budget, or the '06 budget if it is not too late to make changes in our transportation program for the '05-'06 school year.

We need to move forward by having the School Committee work cooperatively with the superintendent (who did not appear to have been consulted on some of the ideas put forward at the meeting) and others to explore areas for cost savings in the budget. Then we need to do the work needed to educate the voters and convince them of what we need to run the high quality public education system we've enjoyed.

Where are the school priorities?

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

At last week's School Committee meeting, their first since the Special Town Election, Rick Flynn stated that there is not enough time to discuss any alternatives for FY'06 but to cut teachers. With three weeks until the beginning of the new budget, some committee members feel that cutting classroom positions is their only alternative especially if they want to maintain credibility and continue to have overrides pass.

What? The window is too small to determine ways to live within the FY'06 budget without punishing the children in the classroom? With all the months spent on this budget while being fully aware of the town's fiscal problems there was no thought given to choices available other than taxing the residents more and more.

The citizens and voters of Cohasset would like to know what has been happening since the May 21 Override Vote and the June 9 Meeting? Wasn't the vote outcome important enough to warrant a meeting immediately following the election allowing six weeks to deal with the issue rather than waiting almost a month to convene?

The idea spouted at the meeting that "the voters have spoken" and definitely want the teachers cut is ludicrous. Thank goodness Roy Fitzsimmons set the record straight. Roy pointed out that the Cohasset voters and taxpayers want the schools and the town to live within their budgets, to practice accountability and fiscal responsibility and to make certain that the dollars are not deflected from the classroom. He also brought up the hiring of the brand new vice-principal position as the school priority even before the override vote. But the officials double talked that as not being an "addition" or new. Well, if two administrators are now there where there was only one before, then something new was created.

The majority of the school committee plus the superintendent still have not realized that the voters have spoken out against the mismanagement and the total lack of economies that has been plaguing the system.

Only two of the school committee spoke up to at least offer solutions to the fiscal dilemma. Chair Jamie Williams suggested increasing the lunch prices by $1 in order to save two teaching positions. For a family with three students in the school that would mean roughly an additional $12/wk for the convenience of buying lunch in school. It would just be giving up one large pizza a week for only 70 percent of the year to be able to put two teachers in the classrooms according to Jamie's plan. Instead of using this as a revenue source for teaching positions, a price increase should go toward the tens of thousands in prior deficits that was paid by the taxpayers or to cover the total costs of operation. As was pointed out there hasn't been an increase in lunch prices in 2 - 3 years.

We have a golden opportunity now to come together as a town and make a real difference in the way we handle specific non-education areas in this budget that will have a lasting positive economic impact.

On the positive side, Dr.Slanetz has jumped into his position with both feet running. He, of all the members, appears to understand the need to keep the dollars in the classroom without continuing to impact the taxpayers when other options are available. Plus he has done his homework in actively seeking viable alternatives to tax increases and is attempting to perform the fiduciary duties that the voters entrusted him with. It is unfortunate that the majority of his committee do not feel they should be involved in micro-management which has been sorely lacking.

In order to mitigate the impact of the override vote, Dr. Slanetz suggested that we change how we are conducting transportation. His proposal involves adopting bus fees as has been done in many communities (e.g. Duxbury, Norwell, Hanover, Scituate and Weymouth) and also cooperating with Scituate in SPED transportation and total bus maintenance. These options, besides keeping roughly $200K in the classroom for FY'06, will also provide cost savings for many years down the road plus be a means of energy conservation..

It is unfortunate that Superintendent Walsh considers it illegal to work with Scituate in bus transportation when Scituate is willing to work with us but then she sees no legal barrier to cooperating with Scituate and Hull in joint sports teams. This appears a totally incongruous policy meant only to cost taxpayers more and divert money from the children in the classroom.

Even though it appears insignificant, the high cell phones bills didn't even have a chance to come up during the meeting. This continues to be a potential $10K savings in the transportation budget if we just eliminate the10 administrative cell phones that Dr. Walsh added to the plan in December. The school personnel already receive a 15 percent discount on their personal cell phone rates that the rest of the taxpayers can't but the Superintendent in her wisdom decided that a select group of highly paid administrators should have free cell phone service - again taking money away from the children in the classrooms. I also find it curious that these administrative cell phone bills are attached to the transportation budget. It leads me to wonder how much other creative bookkeeping is being done in this transparent, bare bones budget.

To say that I was disappointed with business as usual is such an understatement. We have a golden opportunity now to come together as a town and make a real difference in the way we handle specific non-education areas in this budget that will have a lasting positive economic impact. Instead, at the school committee meeting we witnessed our highly paid new superintendent steam-rolling her agenda and dismissing out of hand any thinking out of the box. It reminded me of the good old days with the Ted Malvey Show.

What we need now instead of arrogance, close mindedness and a decision to ultimately punish the children is for our elected officials to be bold enough to follow these words of FDR: "Take a method and try it. If it fails, admit it frankly and try another. But above all try something."

That official state doohickey

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

While the Big Dig threatens to bankrupt us and illegal aliens storm our colleges and same-sex marriage leads us to the brink of civil war, our State Legislature can be found doing what it does best.

It's trying to decide whether the garter snake should be designated the official state reptile. And why not? Everything in the state seems to have an official something or other from cats (the tabby) to fossils (dinosaur tracks) to butterflies (the great swangled fritillary).

The daily newspaper that is published in a city not far from here carried a list on the front page the other day a list of Massachusetts' official state doodads that have accumulated over the years. The only one that seems to be missing is the official state fugitive (Whitey Bulger).

The only one that seems to be missing is the official state fugitive (Whitey Bulger).

The official state gem is the rhodonite, but try giving your S.O. a rhodonite engagement ring and you'll probably be sleeping on the couch even before you're married.

The official state muffin is the corn muffin, although if I had my druthers it would be the blueberry muffin because the corn tends to get stuck in my teeth and spoil the rest of the breakfast.

The garter snake was proposed as the official state reptile by Darryl "D.J." Sampson and Sam Ballerini, two 9-year-olds from Duxbury, who caught a garter snake in D.D.'s backyard and brought it into the State House to show members of the Joint Committee on State Administration and Regulatory Oversight.

That's only one of many official state committees.

The Bay State also has an official state children's book ("Make Way for Ducklings"), an official state children's author (Theodore Geisel of Springfield, also known as Dr. Seuss), and an official state number (six), for reasons that escape me.

If you think I'm picking on Massachusetts, you're right, but I can just as easily pick on other states, like Hawaii, which has official state colors for each of the eight major islands. Hawaii (the Big Island) in red, Maui pink, Molokai green, Kahoolawe gray, Kauai purple, Niihau white and Oahu and Lanai share yellow.

Arkansas has an official state musical instrument (the fiddle), Arizona an official state tie (the bola), Maryland an official sport (jousting) and Florida an official state play ("Cross and Sword") performed annually in St. Augustine.

Let's hope that Sam and D.J.'s campaign for the garter snake doesn't turn out like Rhode Island's search for an official state drink did a few years ago.

Rep. John Barr, a Democrat from Lincoln, started it all by filing a bill for a constituent naming something called "coffee milk" the official state drink. That raised the hackles on the neck of Rep. Bruce Long, a Republican from Middletown, who operated a lemonade franchise in Cranston. He opted for frozen lemonade.

The argument grew so heated that it called for intervention from the ethics commission, the official state one, that is.

I don't know how it turned out but I really don't care. I've always remembered Narragansett beer as the official state drink of Rhode Island.

"My father was a successful politician and newspaper publisher who accomplished a lot in his lifetime and was active in both up to the day he died. He knew people from all walks of life and was equally at ease with everyone he met, from the most important people of his time to the person who went door-to-door in the downtown business area asking to dust off cars for a few dollars. But he was often fond of saying to us (his four boys):

"'When you look back on your life, you realize that all you're really left with is a bunch of memories. He enjoyed photography, carpentry, masonry, electronics, plumbing, painting, sculpture, gardening, singing, recording, ham radio, woodworking, television making, cooking, rug making, and writing poetry — I'm sure I've forgotten some. THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on two roll calls from prior sessions on the fiscal 2006 state budget. There were no roll calls in the House or Senate last week.

$500,000 FOR SMOKING PREVENTION (S 2100)

Senate 38-0, approved an amendment increasing funding for smoking prevention and tobacco control programs by $500,000 (from $3.75 million to $4.25 million). The amendment also changes language to ensure that some of the funds are used for youth smoking prevention. Amendment supporters said that a few years ago the state funded these important programs to the tune of $48 million but substantially reduced funding during the state's fiscal crisis. They argued that it is time to begin to increase funding for these successful programs that reduce smoking and save countless lives. (A "Yes" vote is for the additional $500,000).

$750,000 FOR ORAL HEALTH (S 2100)

Senate 37-0, approved an amendment providing $750,000 for the Forsyth Institute's Center for Children's Oral Health to fund a school-based project to offer preventive oral health care to children in high need areas. Amendment supporters said that this funding would help Forsyth expand an existing program that works with public schools to offer free oral health exams, care and preventive services to students in underserved areas. They noted that thousands of children have no access to dental care and suffer from oral diseases that affect their health and cause absences from school. (A "Yes" vote is for the $750,000).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

FOOD ALLERGIES (S 513)- Extensive testimony was offered at a Community Development and Small Business Committee hearing on a proposal requiring all restaurants, including take-out facilities and catering businesses, to train their staff about the consequences of food allergies. Other provisions require all establishments to list any food items that contain allergens including tree nuts, nut oils, peanuts, peanut oil, soy beans, milk, wheat, fish, shellfish and eggs. The measure also mandates that there be an on-site person in possession of all food ingredient information and available to answer customers' questions. Supporters said the bill is vital to protect the state's estimated 500,000 consumers who have food allergies. Opponents said the proposal goes too far and would hurt many small shops by imposing cumbersome and expensive regulations.

BAN CIGARETTE VENDING MACHINES (S 178)- The Community Development and Small Business Committee is considering legislation outlawing the sale of cigarettes through vending machines.

MINIMUM WAGE (H 3782)- A Labor and Workforce Development Committee hearing was the scene of heated discussion over a proposal that would raise the state's $6.75 per hour minimum wage to $7.50 in 2006 and to $8.25 in 2007. The measure also provides that the $8.25 wage be automatically raised annually to reflect increases in the consumer price index. Supporters said that the hike would give Massachusetts workers the highest minimum wage of all 50 states and would help many low wage earners. Opponents said that the hike would hurt many small businesses and result in higher prices being passed on to consumers.

BALLOT QUESTIONS (H 78) The Election Laws Committee heard testimony on a measure prohibiting workers from being paid per signature when collecting signatures for an initiative petition to place a question on the state ballot. Supporters said that the measure does not prohibit the workers from being paid but simply eliminates the incentive for these workers to mislead voters in order to increase their salary. Opponents said that the system works fine and argued that the amendment is anti-democratic and is designed to make it more difficult for citizens to place questions on the ballot. The Committee also accepted testimony on several other bills including requiring voters to show a photo identification prior to voting (S 442) and creating a special commission to consider legislation and others methods to "encourage candidate debates and more informed voting" (H 47).

BAN CORPORAL PUNISHMENT (H 1787)- A bill before the Judiciary Committee would outlaw corporal punishment of children including hitting, whipping, slapping, spanking, kicking, biting, pinching, punching, poking eyes, twisting limbs, boxing ears, shaking and hot-saucing or soaping a child's mouth. The measure does not preclude any adult from using incidental or minor physical contact designed to maintain order and control.

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE BILLS- The Judiciary Committee's hearing agenda included legislation banning partial birth abortions (S 962); prohibiting physicians from performing sex selection abortions in which the mother is seeking the abortion solely because of the sex of the unborn child (S 964); permitting adults to petition the probate court for the adoption of an embryo (H 679); permitting breastfeeding in public (H 1745); imposing a mandatory seven day prison sentence on anyone who does not follow a police officer's order to disperse from an unlicensed gathering of more than 50 people two hours prior to or four hours following a professional sporting event (S 1059); creating a special commission to study the institution of slavery including the extent to which Massachusetts' agents, employees and citizens supported slavery and the lingering negative effects of slavery on descendants of slaves (H 1779); and prohibiting a person from being discriminated against because of his or her weight (H 3781).

Y = Yes; N = No; NV = No Vote

Happy Father's Day!

The following essays were written by Lauren Cook's second grade students at the Joseph Osgood School, in honor of their fathers.

With Father's Day on Sunday, Lauren Cook's second graders at Osgood School share their thoughts about their dads.

My dad is a great dad. My dad has dark soft hair. My dad is kind and funny. He has had lots of jobs being a chef. Right now he works at Indian Pond Country Club. My dad helps at home by cleaning the basement when it's messy. He also folds clothes and sometimes he fixes things that are broken. My dad sometimes helps me with my homework. Sometimes he helps me when I can't open a bottle. I like to play catch with him and go to the dump with him. I like when he takes us sledding and to the beach. My dad makes me feel loved when he hugs and kisses me.

I love my dad.

Corianne Ahrens

My dad is the best dad in the world! He is very handsome. My dad has dark, dark, dark, brown hair. It looks like black. He is very funny. My dad works for Fidelity Investments. He helps other companies by loaning them money. My dad does the dirty work at home. He opens the pool, mows the lawn and he digs weeds. He helps me with my homework and he helps me when I'm sad. He also makes awesome hot fudge sauce and the BEST brownies in the world. I like it when he takes our family out for dinner. I like it when he takes me, Emily and Ellie bike riding. He makes me feel loved when he kisses me goodnight. My dad is the coolest dad in the world.

Clara Baumgarten

My dad is very special to me. He has light brown hair and blue eyes. When he was little he looked like me. On the inside he is so nice, kind and helpful to me. My dad works at his office and sometimes at our house. At home he sometimes helps by barbequing dinner and he helps take care of our cat. We're moving to a new house soon and he and I have worked very hard cleaning up the yard. We cut down trees and rake a lot. When my dad is home he helps me with my homework and helps me practice sports. I love to play lots of sports with him. We have fun playing "shark fights." That's a pillow fight but we use a stuffed shark and whale. We also have fun playing rod hockey and air hockey. He mostly wins at both. My dad makes me feel loved by making me laugh. He also makes me feel loved when he snuggles with me and reads with me. My dad is the best dad that I would ever want.

Charlie Blackington

My dad is the nicest man I have ever met. My dad has dark blue eyes like the color of the sky. He has a nice brown fuzzy mustache like a bush. When I hear his voice I glow up. He is so kindhearted inside. His heart is bigger than his hand. He cares for everyone anywhere and anyway. My dad works at John Hancock. He is a commercial real state investor. My dad helps at home by mowing the lawn. He also does all of the dirty work like going to the dump. Sometimes he washes the dishes. My dad helps me when I am sad. He also helps me when I am confused. I like to go skiing with him when my mom doesn't know. That's a "daddy – daughter day." I also like to go on vacations with my dad and I like to go golfing with him. My dad makes me feel loved when he smiles at me. I love my dad and I wouldn't want any other one.

Alexa Bleicken

My dad is very special. My dad has brownish greenish eyes just like me. My dad has grayish brownish hair. My dad has a kindhearted heart. My dad is very nice, cool, playful and fun. My dad is working for bonds but now he is going to teach. My dad helps my mom outside and inside. My dad helps when the stream gets clogged. My dad helps me with my math and homework. My dad helps me when I am sick and when I don't know something. I like when we practice and play games like soccer. I like to run with him and ride bikes together. My dad makes me feel loved when he kisses me goodnight. My dad makes me feel loved when he takes me to work with him and he lets me get a toy in the Disney Store. I like to go to the track and run with him. My dad makes me feel loved when he is with me. My dad makes me feel loved when he kisses me. My dad makes me feel loved when he takes me places. I love my dad so, so, so, so much!

Audrey Brown

My dad is super. My dad has dark brown eyes and he has black hair. My dad is nice and kindhearted. My dad is from Australia and for work he is the boss and he has to travel around the world for his work. He's gone a lot and I miss him. I'm always happy when he comes home. When he is home he does the dirty work and I help him. I like going to the dump with him because it's fun to throw stuff into the big garbage bins. My dad helps me with my homework and he helps me when my dog gets loose. I love to go fishing with him and play games with him. He makes me feel loved by being my dad. I love my dad.

Jordan Bryan

My dad is very special. My dad is sweet. My dad is handsome. My dad works for a fire alarm company and fixes fire boxes. At home he cleans the house and takes care of his ferret and his roommate's cats. When I visit my dad he takes care of me and feeds me. We have fun going on walks and taking the trolley. I like when he takes me to my brother's baseball games. My dad makes me feel loved when he gives me hugs and when he gives me a kiss goodbye when I'm leaving his house. He also makes me feel loved because he always calls me on the phone and he goes on my school field trips. I love my dad and he loves me.

Deirdre Dorian

My dad is awesome. My dad is kindhearted and funny. He has dark green eyes just like me. My dad has two jobs. One is he works for the Hingham Town Hall and the other one is he works for the Hingham Sewer Dept. My dad helps at home by mowing the lawn and he washes the cars. My dad helps me when I have trouble with my homework and he helps me solve problems. I like to go shopping with my dad and I like when we go on bike rides. I also like to go out to dinner with him. My dad makes me feel loved when he snuggles with me and reads me a book at night. My dad is the best dad in the world and always will be!

Christina Dow

My dad is very special. He is tall and has dark blue eyes. He is smart and very kindhearted. He helps make power plants for a company called Azure Dynamics. He has to travel a lot and I always miss him when he's gone. When he's home he helps by cutting the grass and feeding my siblings and me good meals. He helps me with my homework and math. I like to play baseball and basketball with him. He makes me feel loved when he reads to me and snuggles with me. I love my dad!

Patrick Federle

My dad is special. My dad is caring and loving and he is sometimes funny. My dad has brown eyes and a big smile that makes me feel great. He has brown hair. His job is Definity Health Care. Sometimes he has to go away for a long time and I miss him so much! At home he mows the lawn and sometimes feeds our pets. Sometimes he makes breakfast and puts me and my sisters to bed. My dad drives me and my sisters to soccer. He helps me when I'm sick and helps me in soccer because he is my coach. I love going to the Red Sox with him! I love going to run with him! I love reading with him! I feel loved when he reads to me and when we run and when we go to stores together. My dad is the best!

Jacgueline Hart

My dad is super special. He is handsome and he has sparkling blue eyes. My dad has whiskers and he has big muscles in his arms. My dad is cool, nice and fun. My dad is a stockbroker and he has to go to NYC a lot. I miss him when he's away. When he's home he does the dirty work. He goes to the dump and he helps by mowing the lawn. My dad helps me when I am hurt and when I need something. My dad loves sports just like me.

We have fun playing hockey and golfing together. I like to play with my dad a lot. I really, really, really love my dad!

Connor Hayden

My dad is fun to play with. We play games together. He has a nice heart. He is 6 feet tall and he just lost 100 pounds. He went to the gym and ate meat and he got even stronger. He worked really hard and I'm proud of him. His work is plastering houses. At home my dad cleans the dishes and he does the laundry. When I am feeling bored my dad plays with me. I like to play with him because he is fun to play with. I like to play with him because he likes to play. Me and my dad make a good couple. I love my dad.

James Hynes

My dad is very special. My dad has a big mustache and black hair. He is very tall and he is kindhearted and smart. He runs an electrical company. He works a lot. Sometimes he helps around the house by picking up for my baby sister and by washing the dishes. When he comes home for dinner he helps me with my homework and helps put my sister to bed.

I like to help my dad with work and help him entertain my baby sister. I like when he rides the go-cart with me and when he plays catch and rides bikes with me. My dad makes me feel loved by hugging me. I love my dad.

Derek Jamieson

My dad is super awesome. He has blue eyes, dark brown hair and a mustache. He is very tall and strong. My dad is kindhearted, a good sport and smart. My dad is a parole officer in Plymouth. He talks to bad guys to keep them out of trouble. At home he helps by doing outside jobs like grilling and mowing the lawn and he helps take care of us. My dad helps me with my problems and with my homework. I like when my dad plays catch and basketball with me. When my dad comes home from work he gives me a hug and a kiss and that makes me feel loved. My dad is very loveable. I love my dad.

Chris Lydon

My dad is outstanding. He is tall and he has blue eyes and brown hair. He is very nice and he's patient and trustworthy. He is a parole officer. At home he cleans the pool and mows the lawn and makes breakfast. He helps me with my homework and my problems. I like to swim and play catch with him and play games with him. He makes me feel loved when he congratulates me and when he hugs me. I love my dad very, very, very, very, very, very much!!!

Nick Lydon

My dad is very special. My dad is tall and has dark black hair. He has sparkling green eyes and he is kindhearted. He's kind and caring and nice. My dad works for Fidelity Investments in Boston. My dad can make things for us and he mows the lawn and he can cook well. My dad plays lots of games with me and helps me with my homework.

My dad helps me when I am sad and scared. My dad reads books to me and I like it when he pushes me on our swing and when he snuggles with me and tucks me in. My dad makes me feel loved when he kisses me and spends lots of time doing things with me and hugs me. I love my dad!

Lily McCarthy

My dad is super awesome. He has blackish brownish hair. He is medium tall. He is taller than my mom. My dad is awesome at comedy. He makes me laugh all the time. He is nice all of the time. He works for IBM Investments. He is the manager and he has to travel a lot. I feel sad when I don't see him for a week. I'm excited every time he comes home from a business trip. When he's at home he rakes the pinecones and sometimes makes me pancakes for breakfast. My dad helps me problem solve with my brother so we don't fight. He also helps me with my homework and sometimes he helps me clean my room. I like to go on vacations with him and I like when he takes my brother and me bike riding. He makes me feel loved when he tucks me into bed and when he drives me to school. I think my dad is very, very nice. I love my dad.

Alexandra Raymond

My dad is very special. He is very tall and strong. He is nice and funny. My dad works with produce. Sometimes he brings home potatoes and we make homemade fries. He helps at home by mowing the lawn and by taking the trash to the dump. He helps me with my homework and he helps me practice my hitting and catching for baseball. I like to play catch and read with him. I like making tacos and fries with him. My dad makes me feel loved by tucking me into bed and kissing me goodnight. I love my dad.

James Torres

My dad is the kindest dad. Once he went to the Marshfield Fair with me and spent 300 dollars on me but he didn't care. My dad is the best dad in the whole world. He's very kindhearted and a good sport because he's fair. He is a landscaper and once he had to landscape at our house and at his friend's house. My dad helps by cooking and he helps me with my homework and other stuff. He helps me with math and helps me do projects.

I like to wrestle with him and play catch with him. He makes me feel loved by kissing and hugging me before he goes somewhere and when it's time for bed. I love my dad and he loves me.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fix the budget and live within it

yet to see any backup data to show the comparisons are apples to apples. There is no evidence the budgets being compared include or exclude the same budget lines.

Dr. Slanetz proposed some good ideas regarding transportation but they were dismissed out of hand. Why is it a good thing to have cooperative sports programs but not cooperative transportation which would keep money for the classrooms.

The concept of fee based services is fair and equitable because the people who benefit from the services should be assuming all the cost. But these fees should cover all the costs and should not rely on money coming out of the classroom to make up shortfalls.

We also voted NO based on the fact it was the school budget that was the basis for the override. The town side made real cuts and was balanced. Why do you think the town should absorb some of the cuts?

One item that really irritates taxpayers is the concept of raising money privately to cover just the salaries of teachers. The schools consider all their employees to be town employees when it comes to benefit costs and they don't care where the money comes from or what the impact is on the town services.

It's time for the schools to stop being a monolithic institution with no regard for the community. One of the reasons the override didn't pass is this ongoing attitude of the school community that they are 'entitled'; give us our money but don't ask to be accountable; don't expect us to be fiscally responsible.

Lee Jenkins received a lot of votes based on the ideas she brought forth during the campaign. She didn't win, but why not respond to her offer of creative ideas. Good managers surround themselves with people who can make them look good not just people who agree with them.

Just because people don't attend the school committee meetings doesn't mean we haven't been watching, listening, keeping up on the issues. This kind of thinking is another example of the arrogance exhibited by the school community.

As is the superintendent's dismissal of the Board of Health and the Water Commission in reference to the lead in the drinking fountain water in the schools. It would have been the act of a responsible professional to contact these boards before a letter was sent out to parents.

And while I'm on a good rant, our facilities manager has been here long enough to have figured out how to turn off the gym lights! Perhaps having his salary based on a percentage of money saved would provide incentive! And why is he spending so much time in the schools? Isn't he supposed to be working on all the town buildings? Are there some major maintenance issues at our brand-new $52 million dollar facilities that the public isn't being told about?

There is a wonderful opportunity with our new superintendent and new school committee members to really 'think outside the box' and restructure our schools so that our classrooms and curriculum are funded first and foremost. Then we can continue to provide the highest quality education to our young people. I hope the school community will rise to the occasion.

Regionalization should be on the table

TO THE EDITOR:

It was very interesting to hear the discussions and banter at the school committee meeting last week. The theatrics of some of the committee members were almost laughable. They did agree to absorb approximately $285,000 of the $400,000 defeated at the override election. They talked about hypotheticals instead of some real numbers that could be achieved in a few weeks.

They asked questions of Representative Garrett Bradley who addressed the committee regarding the state budget. They didn't request that Representative Bradley introduce legislation to reduce the burden of the special needs costs placed on the cities and towns by the state. I asked that he introduce legislation to bring the base for reimbursement to our average cost per student and eliminate the multiplier of three times the town's base average per pupil cost before the state commences with reimbursement. He said that he would introduce that legislation.

The Superintendent introduced reductions where she saw that the $285,000 could come from. She is looking to eliminate the two teaching positions that were partially privately funded last year, two brand new teaching positions, and she feels that she will be getting approximately $105,000 in special needs funds. Some members of the committee didn't like the idea of eliminating teachers. However, some members stated that they had to do something because the number for the budget had to be presented to the Town soon because the new fiscal year commences on July 1. They started discussing ways to cut transportation costs and how to increase the cost of the school lunches. One member stated that this was good discussion for the 2007 budget but not for the immediate need that had to be met.

I guess that the new assistant principal is necessary because that new position was not introduced to be cut. In fact one member stated that the school administration could not be cut. Our system has three principals and one assistant principal, at this time. On July 1 the new assistant principal will start. We will then have three principals and two assistant principals for approximately 1,500 students. This is an absurd ratio. To start with we should have just two principals and maybe two assistant principals. One principal at the high school/middle school with an assistant principal. One principal for the Osgood/Deer Hill schools with one assistant principal. This should give us quite a savings in that area alone with the elimination of a principal.

The defeat of the override has enhanced the level of discussion going on about the schools and how they are managed. This is good. It has also brought about discussions about other town departments and their levels of funding and how they should be run. When many people discuss ways to address problems many good ideas are put on the table, reviewed, discussed, and hopefully enough survive to improve our systems, cut our costs and control our spending. Regionalization should be considered. There has to be duplication and redundancy occurring in like programs among neighboring towns. Now is the time to reopen discussions about regionalizing programs.

School bus coordinator to step down

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Supt. Denise Walsh announced last Thursday (June 9) that Transportation Coordinator Peggy Litchfield will be resigning at the end of this year after more than 10 years of service to the district.

"I want to thank her for what must have been a Herculean task," said Walsh, as Litchfield helped bring the bus service for Cohasset back in-house.

In a telephone interview, Litchfield said making the decision to leave the district has been extremely tough.

"I'm really invested in these kids and the families I've driven," she said, adding she has come to know many wonderful families over the years. She said she remembers speaking with many pregnant mothers at the bus stop over the years, and now, drives those children to school every day.

"I'm going to miss the kids terribly," she said.

However, Litchfield said the decision is what's best for her, and her family, and while she is unsure what the future holds, she will be taking the summer to spend time with her own children, Tricia and Jamie.

Litchfield said she would like to thank all the people who have been so supportive of her over the years, including all three building principals and their clerical staff, Jean Callahan, secretary to the superintendent; and her drivers, Dama Dow, Kelly Dickson, Bonnie Palm, Jimmy Clark, April Martin, Virginia Clay, Carol Coleman, as well as her mechanic Marty Hale.

"I couldn't do it without them," she said.

Walsh said moving forward, the cost of keeping the bus service in-house may be more than the district can handle, and said she is looking at three scenarios for changing the way the buses are being run.

The first alternative would be to hire a new transportation coordinator and look at how the buses are being maintained. She said the schools could potentially send out a bid to hire a contracted mechanic.

Another option would be to have a hybrid system where the majority of school buses would be out-sourced and maintained by a company, and the schools would retain potentially two school buses and the special education vehicles. The buses the schools retain could be used for field trips and for athletics.

"This would get us out of the major responsibility," she said, adding that is the option she favors.

The third option would be to completely outsource the buses and let someone else handle them.

Walsh said because it is late in the year, it would be impossible to completely outsource the buses at this point in time. However, she said for the 2007 budget, it is an option that will be looked into.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz suggested Cohasset look into overlapping special education van routes with a neighboring town like Scituate, and potentially putting out a joint-bid for a contract.

However, the idea did not sit well with Walsh.

"I wouldn't even want to think of the legality," she said.

Three members voted in favor of advertising for a new transportation coordinator and mechanic, and two abstained, which means the advertisements will be posted in the near future.

Touch-a-truck back in town

The Cohasset Call Firefighters Association will present its third annual "Touch-A-Truck" event Sunday, June 26 from noon to 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Family Health Center, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A. Admission is $5 per person or $20 per family. Bring your camera, as there will be 27 pieces of equipment on display for children to explore.

In addition to the trucks, there will be representatives conducting a childhood identification program, where children will have their fingerprints taken, a DNA swab, and dental impressions completed. Parents can take the information home that day to keep on file.

Ride ends for CHS laxers

After fast start, Skippers fall to Medfield, take second place in Div. 3

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

For a period and a half of Monday's Div. 3 state championship game, the Cohasset boys lacrosse team looked as if it might pull off what few gave them a chance to do.

Early goals from Aidan Buick and Jon Grimm, mixed with some stymieing defense and some big saves by goalie Ben Libby, saw the Skippers holding a 2-0 lead with six minutes to go in the first half.

At that point, Medfield called timeout, and its players came out of it showing why they are the best Div. 3 team in the state.

The home Warriors ran off five goals in as many minutes to end the half, and continued the onslaught in the second half to earn themselves a 14-4 win and the state championship.

For the Cohasset boys, who ended their season with a 13-9 record, it was the end of a great ride that saw them beat 3-seed Austin Prep and 2-seed Dover-Sherborn in the two previous rounds.

Shortly after the game, Cohasset head coach Stu Curran told his players to hold their heads high.

"I'm very happy with the season we had," Curran said. "We made a lot of progress from our first game of the year against Duxbury. I'm proud of these kids and the way they stepped up in the latter half of the season."

Wrigley felt a lot like home

With plenty of time to spare due to a three-hour rain delay, I traveled up to the nosebleed seats at Busch Stadium in St. Louis to snap this shot with the famed Arch in the background. Moments later, the fields crew started removing the tarp so the game could start.

JULIE ANN NEVERO

Different, but familiar.

That's what watching the Red Sox play at Wrigley Field felt like to me. Aside from the fact that Boston fans showed up in droves for the first-ever meeting in Wrigley between the two most "cursed" teams in baseball, there were indeed striking similarities between their fans and their stadiums.

My roommates, Beth and Mare, and I arrived for Friday afternoon's game (yep, the 14-6 loss) about an hour and a half early and if that famed sign outside the stadium didn't say Wrigley Field, I would have thought I was walking down Landsdowne Street. Just people everywhere and all wearing hats, shirts, etc. representing either the Sox or the Cubs. Honestly, it appeared to be a 50/50 split.

Every Wrigleyville watering hole was packed. Some even had signs welcoming Sox fans, like the one outside "Murphy's Bleachers", located behind centerfield that read, "Welcome Red Sox Nation." Another atop a residence on a Miller Lite billboard read, "One curse down... one to go."

We opted to go to "The Cubby Bear" and to our amazement, there was a real Boston street sign just inside the door that read "Landsdowne St." On the TVs, they were showing the Major League Baseball World Series film on the Red Sox's 2004 championship.

It was just so welcoming. I honestly felt like I was inside the Cask 'n Flagon right outside Fenway Park. Aside from the beers in cans and a pre-game band "Curse Killers" playing, it felt like home. We weren't there more than 15 minutes before we started bumping into people from Boston. One Cubs fan tapped me on the shoulder and said, "I can't believe how many Boston fans are here." I replied, "Yeah, we're everywhere. It's kind of obnoxious. I booked this trip in February."

The mood inside the Cubby Bear was that of sheer excitement. There was no trash talk, no cursing the other's team. But why would there have been? There's always seemed to have been an unwritten camaraderie between Sox fans and Cubs

Legions out-dueled

Rennie's solid performance for Post 118 wasted

By Win Bates
CORRESPONDENT

One pitch determined the outcome of Monday night's Zone 6 East American Legion baseball battle between Braintree's Post 86 and Post 118 of Cohasset at Cohasset High School.

Braintree shortstop Anthony Melchionda lined that pitch deep into the left-field corner to send home the only two runs of the game in the second inning, and Post 86 righthander Steve Connors out-dueled Cohasset lefty Mark Rennie to give Braintree its third straight win of the young season, 2-0.

It was an outstanding pitching performance by both hurlers, as neither walked a batter and each gave up just five hits. Connors struck out seven in the third straight route-going performance by a Braintree pitcher (two by Connors) and Rennie struck out four in his complete-game effort. Both were backed by some quality defensive plays and had control of the hitters throughout.

"The thing that impressed me tonight was the fact that we played a ballgame in which there wasn't a walk for either side," said Braintree manager Dan Fabrizio. "How many times do you ever see that at any level? Both pitchers did an outstanding job tonight, and we got the one big hit that we needed from Melchionda, and it made the difference."

Cohasset dropped to 1-2 despite getting the same strong pitching and defense that the winners did, and playing on even terms with the perennial title contenders from Braintree. Braintree had a string of seven straight Zone 6 East championships snapped by Milton, who edged Post 86 by one game for the regular season title last summer.

"It was a well-pitched game on both sides and it was a shame that Rennie had to lose it, because he pitched a very strong game for us," said Cohasset coach Mike O'Brien. "He mixed up his pitches very well all night and we played a strong game behind him in the field. We had chances to score, but we left six men on base. We've lost two tough ones so far: tonight, and to Canton in extra innings. I think we're playing pretty well for the most part."

Melchionda's game-deciding hit came with two outs in that

The Skippers coach said Medfield's depth and overall talent level made the difference in the game.

"In terms of skill level, I don't think anyone can match [Medfield] in Division 3, other than us on a good day," Curran said. "We just didn't have the horses in the middle of the second and third periods to really compete."

The Skippers got off to a dream start, scoring just 37 seconds into the contest. Senior Joe Durkin got the edge in his face-off battle and was able to get the ball in a position where freshman Mike Grimm could pick it up and start the offense.

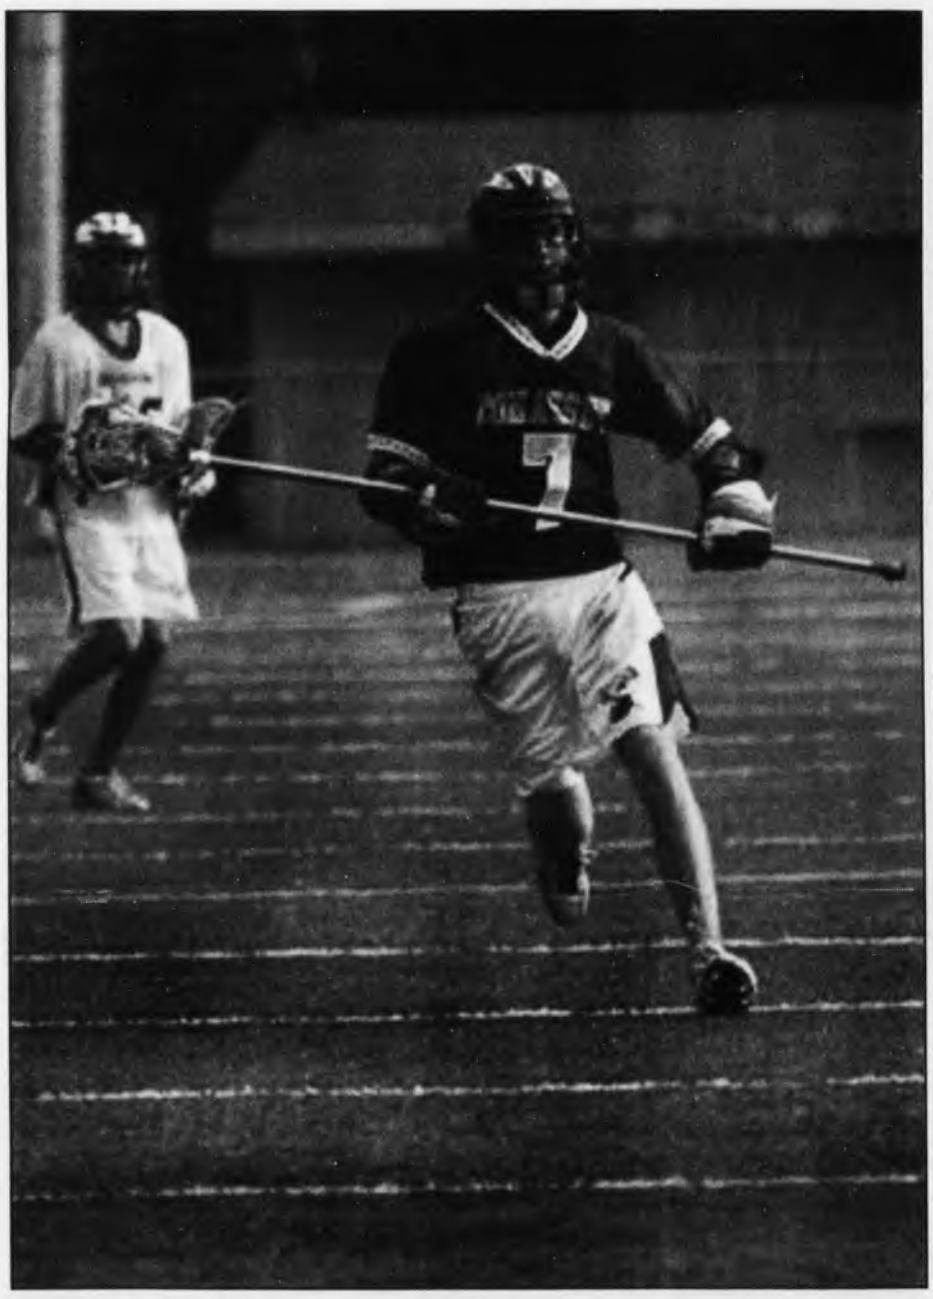
After a few passes, Buick found himself with a shooting lane from the right side of the crease, and the junior attack buried it top shelf for a 1-0 Skippers lead.

The defense, led by seniors Crandon Leahy, Casey Coleman and Kevin Dinsmore, forced Medfield early on into some dropped passes and long shots. When the Warriors' Ben Shannon found himself with a great opportunity from point-blank range seven minutes into the period, Libby was up to the task with a great save.

Just a minute later, Jon Grimm made it 2-0. Leahy set up the play, picking up a ground ball and making a nice run down the left flank into the Medfield defensive zone. Grimm finished off the possession with his goal - one of three for the Grimm brothers on the day - and Cohasset was flying high.

The last four minutes of the first period and first six of the second featured a lot of midfield play and few quality scoring chances for either side. Dinsmore and Leahy seemed to be all over the place on defense, and the hustle of sophomore Mike Bunstein for Cohasset kept the Skippers in possession of the ball on a few occasions.

Eventually, however, the magic ran out for the visitors in blue. After going into the half with a 5-2 lead, Medfield had all the momentum, and Cohasset was held scoreless until the 8:13 mark of the fourth period, when Mike Grimm wheeled around from behind the net to score the first of his two goals on the day.



At that point, however, it was 12-3 in favor of Medfield, and the title was decided. Libby, who starred in net the entire tournament, made 13 saves on the day and played another solid game.

"He's been carrying us to this point," Curran said of Libby after the game.

Wrigley felt a lot like home

fans. After all, until last year, we were in the same boat: Eternally miserable without a championship, us since 1918 when the Sox beat the Cubs, them since 1908. The Sox fans were just so delighted to be there and the Cubs fans seemed happy to see us. I was already having a great time and I hadn't even set foot inside Wrigley.

Walking into the stadium, I could barely breathe. Until only a few days earlier in St. Louis (more on that game later), I had never seen the Red Sox play anywhere but Fenway Park. But unlike in St. Louis, where Sox fans were indeed a minority, there were thousands of us at Wrigley.

We made our way to our seats — behind the Sox dugout about 30 rows up, equal to Upper Box seats at Fenway — and found ourselves sitting next to Cubs fans and in front and behind Sox fans. Enerzo was directly on my left. He was a Cubs fan and was the first to officially welcome us to Wrigley. Like so many of the fans I've seen at Fenway, Enerzo was busy keeping score in his scorebook. He chatted with us about the Cubs, Wrigley, the City of Chicago, and even asked questions about the Sox.

We were both equally confident, him boasting about Greg Maddux, me about Bronson Arroyo. He was actually amazed by how much we knew about the Sox, and I told him, "I wouldn't wear this hat (blue with the red B) if I didn't follow the team."

Watching the game is when I really saw how similar Cubs and Sox fans really are. Like us, they stand and cheer on two strikes, no matter what inning it is. They rise to their feet on every hit or near hit, like we do. They have chants and allegiances to specific players (i.e. fans of the injured Kerry Wood wear shirts that ask, "Got Wood?"). They didn't seem to take it to the extreme that Sox fans do, however, like those wig and beard wearing Disciples of Johnny Damon or the cowboy hat adorning Kevin Millar fans. There was a group of fans recording Maddux's strikeouts with K cards and hanging them on a ledge atop a rooftop stands across the street from the field (an amazingly cool feature), but they weren't like the former Pedro Martinez "K men" who painted their faces and bodies red and had their own web site.

Walking down the stands to exit the Park, some people got a little rowdy and gave Sox fans some grief. When approached by one such fellow, I just politely replied, "We're passing the torch to you guys. It's your turn to make history."

They did have a mascot similar to ours, however. Just as we have Wally the Green Monster, of course a play on the most recognizable feature at Fenway, the Cubs have a similar character dressed in head-to-toe vine leaves like those that cover Wrigley's outfield walls. Didn't catch his name, though. Perhaps, Ferny?

Behind from the start of the game, things started turning a little sour — not between us and Enerzo, but in the stands — once the Cubs started really beating up on us. We could hear random people shouting things like "Sox... well, you know". And to be honest, I couldn't disagree on that day. They must have lived it up the night before because they just didn't show up.

But it was a little tough to take. I'd never been an in environment where the loud cheers weren't for the Sox. It was like watching batting practice during the game. The Cubbies had more than 20 hits in the contest, many of them homeruns. There was a two-inning period when I just said nothing.

At home, I would have yelled at the bums, but not here. Instead, I tried to look on the bright side of things (i.e. being at Wrigley)!! I tried to think about how many other people would have killed to have been in my seat, namely my father, and I snapped out of it. After Maddux hit only the fifth homerun of his career, I joked to Enerzo that the Sox were giving the Cubbies this one because of 1918.

Maddux left the game in the seventh and everyone stood and cheered, myself included. (You have to respect a guy who makes a typically potent Sox lineup look like a bunch of little-leaguers). We stayed until the end and saw David Ortiz and Mark Bellhorn hit homers in the ninth, finally giving Sox fans something to cheer about and Cubs fans an opportunity to throw them back. But the final out was soon recorded and the Sox lost 14-6. I wasn't thrilled — especially after driving four hours from St. Louis to Chicago passing thought nothing but farms in towns called "Normal" and "Funks Grove" — but I wasn't unhappy either. (By the way, this trek should have taken close to five hours to complete, but my lead-foot roommate, Mare, got us there in record time. I still have nightmares about that drive).

Walking down the stands to exit the Park, some people got a little rowdy and gave Sox fans some grief. When approached by one such fellow, I just politely replied, "We're passing the torch to you guys. It's your turn to make history." He stood surprised, but then smiled and said, "Thanks. I hope we do."

And at the place where the Sox made history...

Things got off to a very slow start. Sunny and in the high-80s all day last Wednesday, the sky started getting dark just as we arrived at "Paddy O's", a bar outside Busch Stadium in St. Louis. Minutes later, we got slammed by what seemed like a monsoon. I kept running up to the windows checking the status in the skies and things just didn't look good.

It started clearing up a bit around 7:45 p.m., nearly two hours after the game was supposed to start, so we made our way to the stadium. To our dismay, we arrived to see the tarp was still down as the rains once again picked up. Bummed out about the delay, we decided to take this opportunity to walk around the stadium and have a look at the place where the Red Sox won the 2004 World Series, just a few months before.

Red Sox and Cubs fans turned out in droves for the first-ever regular season meeting between the two "cursed" teams and I was fortunate to be one of them. This is a photo I took from across the street just before entering the stadium for the June 10 contest.

Along the way, Mare and I — both wearing Sox hats — got our share of dirty looks from St. Louis fans, most of whom were decked in head-to-toe Cardinals gear. Some of the 20-somethings fans, more specifically the young men, stopped to chat with us and wished us well. (My other roommate, Beth, is from St. Louis, so people looked kindly on her).

We made our way up to the nosebleeds high atop centerfield and soaked up the beautiful view of the field with the famed Arch in the background. Behind us stood the skeleton of what would become the new Busch Stadium. Seconds later, the field crew ran out and began the process of taking off the tarp as the rains had ceased. All those in the stadium cheered wildly and Mare and I ran back to our seats just before 9:05 when the game finally started.

Back at the bleachers, which were actual benches with no seatbacks unlike those at Fenway, we witnessed the beginnings of a gem. Sox hurler David Wells and Cardinals pitcher Chris Carpenter were both mowing down the competition and the game would remain scoreless until the Sox struck in the sixth in the form of an Ortiz bomb.

After three innings in the bleachers, however, Mare and I noticed a lot of empty seats along the third baseline, which were far closer than the ones we were in at right center. We decided to venture over and see if we could upgrade, assuming many of the Cardinals fans opted not to wait for the delay. We arrived at an area much like the grandstands at Fenway and took a seat in front of a group of Sox and Cardinals fans.

It was here that we met Carl, a middle-aged Cardinal fan attending the game with some friends in town from Boston. I sat there for a minute to took in the size and scope of the stadium before turning to Carl and saying sarcastically, "Boy, this place is a real dump. Good thing you guys are tearing it down and building a new one."

He laughed and attempted to explain why such a gorgeous park was going to be blown to bits at the end of the season. Carl said the stadium was originally built for a football team and a baseball team and that has led to a lot of wear and tear internally. To the external eye, however, this place was just glorious and if Fenway ever met a similar fate, I told him, I would cry for days.

The fans here were decidedly different than those of the Sox and the Cubs. There were many of them and as I mentioned before, they were all in Cardinals gear, but they just didn't seem to be as into the game as we are. No one really cheered except for hits, of which there were few for St. Louis. But then again, there wasn't much for them to cheer and there were several empty seats due to the weather.

With the Sox holding onto a 3-0 lead in the eighth, Mare and I bid our new friends adieu and walked back to the bleachers. The environment was far more lively than when we left. Most of the buzz surrounded Sox centerfielder Johnny Damon. As Damon took the field in center for the bottom of the eighth, a crowd of Cardinals fans in our section chanted, "Johnny Special." The Sox centerfielder loved the taunting, raising his arms and flexing his biceps at the crowd. Our friends who had stayed behind told us this back and forth communication between Damon and the Cards fans had been going on for much of the game. It was highly amusing.

Along came the ninth and an at-bat by Edgar Renteria. The former Cards shortstop had been booed the entire game and this at-bat was no different. With the boo-birds in full force, Renteria launched a long fly ball deep to center. The homerun ball landed in our section and was thrown back by a Cardinals fan, much to everyone's delight. End result, Sox 4, Cards 0. It was the only win of the three-game series and I was happy to be there.

In short (although this column would suggest otherwise) it was one of the best and most memorable trips of my life. My only complaint is that the games left little time to do much else in either city, but baseball was the reason for our journey anyway. It's only the start in what my friends and I hope will become and annual summer event (i.e. following the Sox on the road). I doubt they will be as memorable as this one, though.

Legions out-dueled

second inning. Successive one-out singles by Dave Wall and Sean Harvey (each went 2-for-3) got things going for Post 86 in that inning, and the runners moved up on a wild throw on a pickoff attempt.

Melchionda then ripped his double into the left-field corner to chase Wall and Harvey home, and Braintree had all the runs it would need with Connors pitching his second straight outstanding game on the road in the young season. Melchionda's hit was the only extra base hit of the game.

Connors, who blanked Quincy in the season opener last Wednesday, 8-0, at Adams Field, has now pitched 12 scoreless innings on the season (the Quincy game was halted in the sixth inning due to lightning, as a thunderstorm hit Adams Field right after it became an official game). He has walked one and struck out 12 in those 12 innings.

He was backed by strong play from his infield as Melchionda, Tom Trull and Chris Dominguez all made good plays, and center fielder Tom Huddleston pulled off another one of his sensational diving catches, this time robbing Ryan Ferriter of an extra-base hit with his grab in left-center.

Connors had two baserunners in only one inning, the fourth, when Scott Carroll singled with one out and Kevin Signorelli reached on the only Braintree error of the game. But Connors then got Terrence O'Brien and Jack O'Leary to fly out to end that threat.

Cohasset got leadoff hits from Mike Signorelli and and Garrett Callahan in the fifth and sixth, but Connors then retired the next three batters each time. In the seventh, Mike Signorelli singled with one out, but Connors got the last two batters of the game on a ground out and a strikeout to improve to 2-0.

"We've gotten tremendous pitching and played excellent defense so far," said Fabrizio. "The hitting has been a little bit sporadic. I'm happy with the start, but we're going to be playing better teams as the season goes on and we're going to have to hit better than we are."

Cohasset recreation activities

Cohasset Recreation Department Youth Tennis Lessons Ages 7 and over

The Cohasset Recreation Department will be offering Youth Tennis lessons this summer for boys and girls ages 7 and older. This seven week program starts on Tuesday, July 5, with one hour lessons meeting twice per week on a Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday schedule. Various levels of instruction are available. The cost of the program is $80 per participant.

Registration will be held the week of Monday, June 13, through Thursday, June 16, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon and 1 to 3 p.m., as well as Tuesday, June 14, from 5 to 7 p.m., at the Town Hall Auditorium.

You must register in person during the times listed above. If you know your swim and/or sailing schedule prior to registering for Tennis, it will be helpful as we have more scheduling latitude than either swim or sailing lessons.

Cohasset Recreation Summer Wrestling Clinic Grades 3-12

The Cohasset Recreation Department is announcing that registration will be accepted for a summer Wrestling Clinic to be held at Cohasset High School starting Tuesday, July 26, through Friday, July 29.

The Clinic will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. for grades 7-12 and cost $125 per wrestler. Grades 3-6 will meet from 1 to 2:30 p.m. and cost $55 per wrestler.

This unique wrestling opportunity will be run by CHS wrestling Coach Torin Sweeney.

Registration forms are available at the Cohasset Recreation Department office, 1st floor, Town Hall. Space is limited - early registration is advised.

WHOLE HOUSE REMODEL

The Kakas family of Sandwich says...
"Throughout the entire process, Capizzi Home Improvement had a 'can do' attitude. We were so happy with the initial project that we expanded the work to almost the entire house inside and out. We would recommend Capizzi Home Improvement to anyone thinking of remodeling their home."
- The Kakas Family

FAMILY ROOM ADDITION

Another satisfied customer writes...
"From the day we first met with your rep, we felt genuinely convinced Capizzi Home Improvement could do the best job of making our addition exactly what we wanted at a fair price that fit our budget. They were on time which is incredible considering that every other company we've worked with since owning the house was always on "Cape time". We were allowed to dream and the Capizzi team made that dream happen."

REMODELING

Ardeo's Restaurant of Yarmouth says...
"The front of our building was totally redone with new trim and a restored entryway. The job was completed on time as scheduled. The crew kept the work area safe and clean for our patrons. We would highly recommend Capizzi Home Improvement. Job well done"
- Joe Jamiel, Owner of Ardeo's Restaurant

VINYL SIDING/ALUMINUM TRIM & ROOFING

The Edwards/Fox Family of Marstons Mills says...
"When the representative came out to talk to us he was "right on" with what we needed to have done to our roof. With the bad weather we had this winter, the gentlemen doing the work checked frequently during our job to make sure everything was ok and that there were no problems due to the weather. From start to finish, we couldn't find better people to do the work for us."

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

Girls home season ends with a sweep; Youngest girls fall in Duxbury

A season full of hard conditioning paid off in the heat as the Cohasset youth girls lacrosse team finished its home season on Sunday June 12, playing four games at Deer Hill School against teams from Hanover and Hull.

Cohasset teams were bothered by the weather, but the visiting teams wilted in it.

The Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under team (grades 5 and 6) opened the day with a doubleheader, playing first against Hanover Blue and then Hanover Yellow. Hanover Blue arrived shorthanded, so several Cohasset girls volunteered to play for the visiting team. It was not enough.

Lindsey MacNaught scored a first-half hat trick, with Anna Michalowski adding two goals and Kathleen Kelly one, as Cohasset controlled the opening half 6-0. Cohasset dominated the second half too, but only scored once, with Whitney Jaffe feeding Christina Healy to answer Hanover's only goal.

Molly McElgunn made two saves in the Cohasset net.

The Blue team should have been wiped out from its effort, but insteazd they simply turned up the heat in the game against Hanover Yellow, racing out to a 9-0 lead that was actually more lopsided than the score would indicate. Kaci Kucinski scored twice and picked up one assist, Lindsay MacNaught notched a goal and two assists, and Michelle Berube, Olivia Murphy, Hope Kissick, Anna Michalowski, Eliza Kinnealey and Dylanne Axelson picked up single markers in the half. Axelson's goal was the first of her youth lacrosse career, as she typically is a stalwart on defense.

Hanover's team was depleted by injury during the game's first 25 minutes, and several Cohasset girls again crossed sides to play for the visitors during the second half. That helped to slow down the Cohasset team, but not by much.

Kucinski fed Kinnealey for a score before Abby Brown broke through for her first goal of the season. After Hanover scored – on a shot from Olivia Murphy, who had crossed sides at the break – Olivia Franklin answered with her first career goal. Sarah Evans saw action in the Cohasset goal for the first time this year, stopping three shots in the second half, to team up with Molly McElgunn and backstop the team to the win.

The 12-1 final raised Cohasset Blue's record to 8-2-1 on the year.

The Cohasset White 13-U team squared off against Hull and upped its record on the season to 7-3, rolling to a 12-5 final that was not as close as the score might suggest.

Jessica Fusco scored a first-half hat trick – which represented one more goal than she had scored all year – with Olivia Murphy, Whitney Jaffe, Paige DeSisto, and Kaci Kucinski adding solo scores, as Cohasset raced to a 7-2 lead.

Madeline Manning and Merrick Sease made the game 9-2, before the teams traded goals the rest of the way to a 12-5 finish. Kucinski, DeSisto and Lindsay MacNaught answered Hull's goal to make sure the contest never got close again. Ellie Tedeschi put together another solid game in the net to help slam the door on the visitors.

Unfortunately, at the 15-and-Under level (grades 7 and 8), Hull failed to have enough players to field a team, so Cohasset White found itself without an opponent for the second straight week.

But the Cohasset Blue team still had to square off with Hanover, and again the home team's superior conditioning and depth led to a blow-out.

Lindsey Allard assisted on two of the game's first four goals – one to Isabelle Franklin and another to Kaley Madge, and Gabriella Flibotte picked up a solo score and then fed Kayla Farren for another as Cohasset led 4-0 less than five minutes into the game.

Allard answered a Hanover score, before Franklin scored again. Amy Meikelham finished a Flibotte feed and Caitlin Mahoney powered home a dash from behind the net, as Cohasset pushed its lead to 8-2 at the break.

Cohasset held back during the second half, but Flibotte, Mahoney and Franklin answered Hanover's scores, as the home team eased to an 11-5 win. Grace Clougherty and Thomson Jaffe combined to make 7 saves in the game, with Clougherty stopping several taken at point-blank range.

Cohasset's 11-and-Under girls took to the road for their second game of the season, facing off against an excellent Duxbury team that clearly had an advantage of having a full season's worth of games under its belt.

Duxbury came out firing and built a 6-0 lead in the first half before Cohasset came out much more aggressive in the second half. Kate Bodner got Cohasset going with her first goal of the season on a nice shot into the top of the cage. Cohasset built up strong pressure by winning several draws in a row, with Gabrielle Weisman and Kylie Coffman dominating that important phase of the game. Maria Buckley scored her first goal of the year to finish off a well-executed fast break.

Emily Robbins, Peyton McNaught and Maddie Curley shared the goaltending duties and helped keep Duxbury at bay. Mackenzie Axelson, Kathryn Dunn, Michaela Durkin, Molly Fitzgerald and Rachael Littauer all played well on defense. For the game's final 20 minutes, Cohasset played as well as Duxbury did, continuously attacking the Duxbury goal and just missing several nice scoring chances; ultimately, however, the big first-half deficit and those near misses proved too much to overcome, as Duxbury closed out the game with a 10-2 advantage.

The Cohasset girls teams at the 13-U and 15-U level will combine to play both days of the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League Jamboree at Bridgewater State College on June 18 and 19, with teams from each age level playing six games over two days. Cohasset's 11-and-Under girls will play at the Jamboree on Sunday only, competing in three games as the spring season comes to a close.

Boys U13 Silver pick up their first win of the year

In its final game of the season, the U13 Silver team outlasted a gutsy Norwell to team notch an 11-9 victory. After racing out to an early 7-goal lead behind the defensive play of Alex Kinnealey, Scott Wilson, Patrick Dunne and goaltender Alexander Everett, the boys from Norwell fought back mightily in the second half.

Cohasset's first half offensive burst was led by Morgan Grasz, Matt Swanborg, Terence Durkin and Derek Youngman. Jake Durkin won many key face-offs to help Cohasset control the tempo.

In the second half, Cohasset received strong two-way play from Adrian Dunne, Brendan Horrigan and Luke Ernst.

While the Cohasset defense struggled down the stretch to contain the Norwell offense, Chase Murphy made a number of outstanding saves in goal for Cohasset to preserve the win.

CEA volunteer drivers provide valuable service — Cohasset Elder Affairs provides transportation for our senior citizens twice a day, five days a week by volunteer van drivers. This transportation service includes medical trips in the specially-equipped medical van driven by three capable and dedicated individuals.

To provide the services needed for our seniors, we call on at least 40 volunteers during a given month. These essential trips take the elders not only to their medical visits, but to supermarkets, banks, pharmacies, the post office, hardware stores, dry cleaners, hair dresser appointments, and for notary public services and legal services.

We are so fortunate here in Cohasset to have dedicated residents who volunteer their time to provide these vital services. Below is a list of these "heroes," who during the past year have driven the seniors to their destinations, and returned them safely to their homes:

Deer Hill students learn about pet health

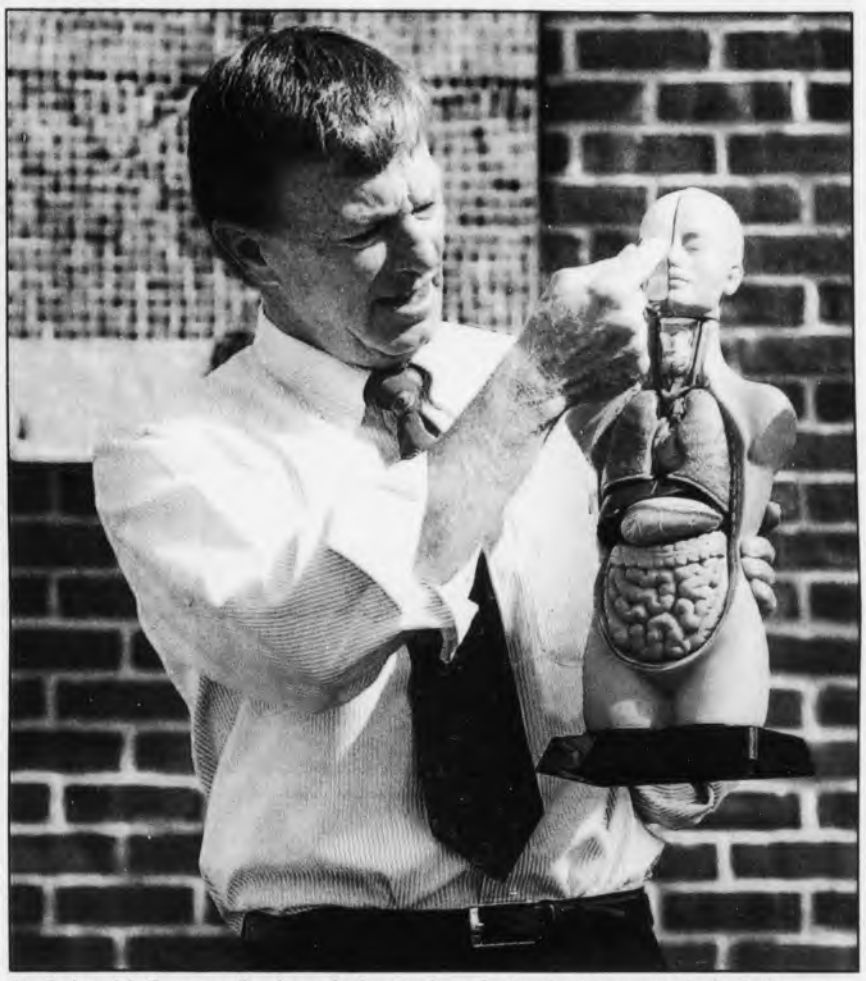
Veterinarian Gregory Conard of the Hingham Animal Clinic shows the third and fourth graders at the Deer Hill School a ferret during a presentation on anatomy. The program introduced children to health care specialties for both people and animals.



Third grade student Kathryn Dunn brushes the hair of "Midget," a pregnant pony brought to the Deer Hill School by Carousel Academy in Hingham to help teach students about anatomy.

Third graders Sarah Whilton and Zoe Meyers react to a cute ferret who visited the Deer Hill School Friday June 3 during a program called "Anatomy of a Body: The care and keeping of you and your pet." The program was put on for third and fourth students.

Equestrian trainer Erika Schembari of the Carousel Academy in Hingham stands behind pregnant pony, "Midget," due to give birth in July. Third grade student Kathryn Dunn stands by Midget, who had come to Deer Hill during a special program on anatomy.

Dr. Robert McCunney talks about the human lung during the "Anatomy of a Body" program at the Deer Hill School. McCunney is an environmental/occupational physician at Mass General and MIT.

Garden tour bursts with color

By Susan DeWinter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The gardens that are highlighted in the Hidden Treasures Garden Tour sponsored by the Garden Club of Hingham are varied, unusual and lovingly cared for year round. The tour will take place on Thursday, June 23 from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., showcasing seven private Hingham gardens.

Tickets, which include refreshments, gift boutique, plant and planter sale and raffle, may be purchased in advance for $20 by calling 781-749-4404 or from Beauty and Main, Bookport, Treasures in the Square, Hingham Public Library, Derby Street Shoppes, Corson's Glass House, Rooms in Bloom, and Kennedy's Country Gardens.

Tickets will also be sold at the South Shore Country Club on the day of the tour for $25.

The club is proud of its choices as well as its new addition to the tour, a boutique at the South Shore Country Club open to non-ticket holders and interested shoppers as well as garden devotees.

The owner of the marvelous hilltop garden on the tour has been heard to say: "By its very nature, a garden is never done. My husband and I have been re-designing and re-planting our beds for the past six years, following as my husband refers to it, the 'royal we' school of gardening -- I plan, he plants."

Another unusual water view greets garden tour visitors from the harmoniously created garden that overlooks 55 acres of tidal marshes known as Home Meadows. Originally designed for a wedding in 1992, this spectacular site sports a wide variety of elevations, rocky outcrops and lovely dry walls as a foundation around which the present owners have created manicured perennial gardens. Difficult areas often were changed and modified until the perfect solution was achieved. Wooden structures provide 'bones,' around which a variety of plants are thriving in their own particular environments. Visitors will soon discover that in this garden, there can be found a perfect spot for every kind of retreat.

Moving on to formal gardens, originally designed in 1907 by British landscape architect J. Herbert Kellaway, one should take note that the gardens were redesigned in 1930 by landscape architect Elizabeth Leonard Strong of Leominster. Working jointly with landscape architect Paul Ripley of Outdoor Living Environments, the current owners have recently worked to return the property to its former 1907 feel. The loggia has been restored to serve as the vantage point for both the formal garden and pool. Cleveland pear trees have been planted in homage to the area's Pear Tree Hill moniker and most other plants and shrubs are reflective of varieties known to have been popular in the early 20th century.

The two country casual gardens that fill the house with flowers for picking and inviting the butterflies will charm any flower lover. Both are cleverly divided into several spaces. The first of two, sunny areas, sporst tree peonies, roses, lilies and hemerocallis. The shade area shelters rhododendrons, azalea, hosta and ferns. A fenced inner garden enclosing a brick patio is filled with potted roses and other flowers from an adjacent winter garden green house, and moves on in through a rose arbor into a decorative kitchen garden.

And in its turn, the final garden is a true summer fiesta of color and extravagant color bursts. Asiatic lilies, daylilies, coreopsis, foxglove, globe thistle, sedum, false dragonhead and monarda bring out the gathering baskets for summer bouquets. It's hard to believe that such a splash of delights began after the summer drought of 1991. Rather than replant grass, the owner started a garden with a mixture of bulbs and "pass-along plants" from friends. Then a former mass of trees and briars developed into a shady woodland garden dotted with bleeding hearts, hosta, heuchera, pulmonaria and flowering shrubs, that are now a tranquil respite on a warm day.

Carillon recital in memory of the Thompsons

The second program in the 81st season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the Cohasset Carillon will be given on Sunday evening, July 3 by Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's Church.

Warner's program will be played in memory of Blanche and Leslie Thompson, long-time members of St. Stephen's parish. Included will be selections appropriate for the eve of the Fourth of July, with patriotic music from the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. The 57-bell instrument is located in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church overlooking the Common.

Warner's program will be played in memory of Blanche and Leslie Thompson, long-time members of St. Stephen's parish.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from your parked cars. Printed programs, scheduled and brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets, and picnics to the Common or the church courtyard. Following the program, the tower will be open to visitors for a demonstration by the carillonneur and a look at the bells.

For further information, phone St. Stephen's Church at 781-383-1083, Sally Slade Warner at 978-475-2599, or Mary Kennedy at 781-383-9599.

Carillon rings in 81st concert season

The 81st annual summer Carillon Recital series of the 57-bell, Cohasset Carillon, will be given in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, on eight successive Sunday evenings, beginning June 26 through Aug. 14, from 6 to7 p.m. The public is invited to attend free of charge and may bring picnic suppers, lawn chairs and blankets to Cohasset Common and the church courtyard on Highland Ave. Printed programs will be available at both locations. Concerts are held rain or shine and in bad weather concert goers listen in live from their parked cars.

The June 26 first program will be performed by David Maker, carillonneur of the University of Conn. at Storrs. Mr. Maker will play a varied program including music composed for the carillon, American folk music arrangements and arrangements Thelonious Monk and George Harrison tunes. After this and all recitals in the series, there is an open tour for all interested in climbing the tower's 45 stairs to see how the instrument is played.

July 3, St. Stephen's carillonneur Sally Slade Warner will play a program perfect for the eve of July Fourth. Guest artists for the following Sundays are:

July 10, Alexander Solovov, Elena Sadina, Sergey Grachev, Russian carillonneurs from Mechelen, Belgium.

July 17, Mary McFarland of Belmont, N.C.

July 24, Todd Fair, carillonneur of the University of Denver in Colorado.

July 31, Milford Myhre, carillonneur emeritus of the Bok Tower, Lake Wales, Fla.

Aug. 7, Malgosia Fiebig of Gdansk, Poland.

August 14, Daniel Kerry Kehoe, carillonneur of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn. For further information, call St. Stephen's Church, 781-383-1083 or Sally Slade Warner, 978-475-2599 or Mary Kennedy, 781-383-9599.

Panagia golf tourney to benefit Greek church

More than one hundred golfers are expected to compete for over $350,000 in cash prizes at the 2005 Panagia Golf Classic (The Boat Tournament) Monday, July 11 at the Black Rock Country Club in Hingham.

There will be a shotgun start at 12:30 p.m., and Black Rock will also host a luncheon including an auction and raffle. The 5th annual tourney will benefit Handi Kids, a non-profit, recreational facility for children with physical and cognitive challenges, as well as the new community center of the historic Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church on Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

The church was constructed in 1895-1900 by the Pope family, in memory of their son Alexander. In 1980, the church become the place of worship for a parish of now more than two hundred Greek Orthodox Christian families, now under the guidance of Rev. Fr. John G. Maheras of Scituate. The name of the tournament — "Panagia" — is Greek for "Most Holy One," which refers to the Virgin Mary.

This year, the tournament added the moniker, "The Boat Tournament" in recognition of the support of 3A Marine, which each year has sponsored a boat as a hole in one prize.

This year, the tournament added the moniker, "The Boat Tournament" in recognition of the support of 3A Marine, which each year has sponsored a boat as a hole in one prize.

The tournament is a Florida scramble format and each golfer will shoot in four hole-in-one contests on all of Black Rock's par threes. In a closest-to-the-pin shootout and long drive contest, golfers will have a chance to win $100,000 in cash.

The putting contest will be named the "Norm Resha Memorial Putting Contest" in honor of Norm Resha from "Calling All Sports," (96.9 FM). Norm passed away this winter.

"We are expecting a sell-out, but still have playing spots available and sponsorship packages" said Norwell's Jerry Kehoe, the tournament director.

Tournament fees of $200 per golfer/$800 per foursome, must be paid by July 11, $200, and include a box lunch and dinner. For more information, call (781) 826-9526.

New American Red Cross Learn-to-Swim program at Cohasset Swim Center

A new swim program designed to help swimmers of all ages and abilities develop their swimming and water safety skills in a positive learning environment is being offered at the Cohasset Swim Center this summer.

Learn-to-Swim teaches aquatic and safety skills in a logical progression. The objective is to teach people to swim as well as to be safe in, on and around the water.

The six levels and their objectives include:

Level 1- Introduction to Water Skills: helps students feel comfortable in the water and enjoy the water safely.

Level 2- Fundamental Aquatic Skills: gives students techniques in fundamental skills.

Level 3- Stroke Development: builds on Level 2 skills by providing additional, guided practice.

Level 4 - Stroke Improvement: develops confidence in the strokes learned and improvement in aquatic skills.

Level 5 - Stroke Refinement: provides further coordination and refinement of strokes.

Level 6- Swimming and Skill Proficiency: refines individual strokes so students swim with ease, efficiency, power and smoothness over greater distances. Level 6 is designed with "menu" options that focus on preparing students for more advance courses, such as Water Safety Instructor and Lifeguard Training.

Additional information and registration forms are provided in the Cohasset Swim Center brochure being mailed to residents. Learn-to-Swim lessons are offered in three, two-week sessions:

Session I: July 11-July 22
Session II: July 25-Aug. 5
Session III: Aug. 8-Aug. 19.

OBITUARIES

Jean Hollingshead

World War II WAVES veteran

Jean Doris (Lappe) Hollingshead, 81, of Lexington, formerly of Cohasset, died June 12, 2005, at home.

Daughter of the late Anna (Hinck) Lappe and Edward Lappe, Mrs. Hollingshead lived in Cohasset for 30 years, before moving to Lexington, five years ago.

After attending Junior College, she served in the U.S. Navy WAVES, from 1943 to 1945.

Mrs. Hollingshead was a member of the Social Service League of Cohasset and was a New England Deaconess Hospital volunteer. She was a volunteer driver for the Cohasset Senior Shuttle. A member of the Protestant Congregational church, Mrs. Hollingshead enjoyed both bowling and golf.

Wife of the late Elmer P. Hollingshead, Jr., she leaves three daughters, Kimberly Michaels of Basking Ridge, N.J., Amy Connell of Scituate, and Joanne Busteed of Salem; a son, Jay Whitney of Sunderland; six grandchildren; and a sister, Diane Scalapino of Santa Barbara, Calif.

Services are private. Arrangements are by Douglass Funeral Home, Lexington.

Donations in Mrs. Hollingshead's memory may be made to the Multiple Sclerosis Society, 101A First Ave., Suite 6, Waltham, MA 02451-1130, or the American Heart Association, 20 Speen St., Framingham, MA 01701.

Alzheimer's Disease support group meets

Dr. Rudolph E. Tanzi will present "Alzheimer's Disease: Lessons from Research," Wednesday, June 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the monthly meeting of the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore.

Tanzi is professor of neurology and neuroscience at Harvard Medical School and director of genetics and aging research at Massachusetts General Hospital. He will review the history of Alzheimer's research including genetic factors and explain what changes in the brain result in Alzheimer's Disease. Tanzi's research resulted in the isolation of the first familial A.D. gene and has played a central role in several other Alzheimer-related genes. He has also studied the association of Downs Syndrome and Alzheimer's Disease. Tanzi has received numerous awards for his work nationally and internationally. A question and answer time will follow this presentation.

This meeting will be held at the Hingham Senior Center, located at Hingham Town Hall, 220 Central St. It is free and open to anyone interested in learning more about Alzheimer's Disease. For further information, call JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417 or Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426.

The Mariner welcomes photos of your loved ones to accompany obituaries by e-mail to mford@cnc.com or by mail to 73 South Street, Hingham, MA 02043

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my best-selling books.

I've shown tens of thousands that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

With low interest rates and soaring appreciation, now is the time that you could become my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy just one property. I bought four!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but to four properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about telling others how my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just the beginning... Within the next 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now, my goal is to create millionaires all across the country. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when my FREE workshop will be back in your area, because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

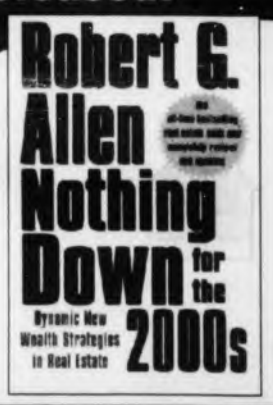
True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."
— Preston Fleming, Illinois



"I just sold my first project; my net profit after all costs was $65,000. I received the check on my 40th birthday."
— Henning Van Deusen-Jensen, California

"Today has been the best day of our real estate careers. We sold our fourth house. This will put our net worth to around $1,000,000."
— John (Chuck) Neuschafer, Georgia

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

Tony Award-winning actress Debra Monk, and OBIE Award-winning playwright/actor Christopher Durang in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of "Laughing Wild," which runs through June 26 at the Calderwood Pavilion.

Durang and Monk have audiences 'Laughing Wild'

In the relatively brief span of the two comic monologues in his play "Laughing Wild," delivered by characters known only as "Man" and "Woman," writer Christopher Durang manages to skewer touchy social issues from AIDS and the Catholic Church to pop culture icons. The show premiered in New York in 1987, but the current Huntington Theatre production - starring Durang and Tony and Emmy Award-winning actress Debra Monk — marks the first time the now cult classic has been mounted professionally in Boston.

Debra Monk, and Christopher Durang

"Christopher is a brilliantly talented man. He uses humor to make some very strong points. There is great fearlessness in his writing. It has real depth, real highs and real lows," explains Monk, 56, of her co-star and friend, the playwright best-known for "Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All For You" and "Betty's Summer Vacation."

"This piece is so well-written. It allows an actor to take that ride from comedy to drama and back which I love. I laughed hysterically the first time I saw it with Chris and E. Katherine Kerr. Embodying the piece now is so different, though, because I was in New York when AIDS was at its peak. I feel like I lived the play."

Monk, best-known to television audiences for her recurring role as Katie Sipowicz on "NYPD Blue," welcomes the chance to work with Durang and Huntington Artistic Director Nicholas Martin who is staging "Laughing Wild" in Boston. Martin previously directed the actress in a 2000 production of Arthur Laurents' "The Time of the Cuckoo" at Lincoln Center.

"Chris is very open to interpretation. He's not only a great writer, but he's also a great actor — funny and sweet and wonderful to work alongside. He laughs at everything. Nicky is doing a wonderful job directing us, too. This is my first time in Boston, and I came here specifically to work with Nicky again."

The play may have been written some 20 years ago, but Monk believes its themes remains current. "It's just as viable now, because everybody is still searching for a way to fit in. The social issues it explores are all still relevant, and some of them may even be more relevant today."

"Laughing Wild" will be at the Huntington Theatre's Calderwood Pavilion, 527 Tremont Street, Boston, through June 26. For tickets and information, call 617-266-0800, or visit www.huntingtontheatre.org .

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

Recent research suggest that the two ears may process sounds differently. The study involved an analysis of how infants' left and right ears reacted to two different sounds (fast clicks and a long tone). More than half of the nearly 1,600 babies studied demonstrated a bigger click response in their right ears, while more than half had a bigger tone response in their left ears. These findings raise questions about the best way to treat hearing loss. Deaf individuals often get cochlear implants in only one ear, usually chosen rather arbitrarily. More research may help lead to a more scientific choice, as well as help answer the question as to whether right and left hearing instruments should be designed differently.

Learning to hear with the assistance of hearing instruments requires practice in the beginning. Just as hearing is not usually lost overnight, it sometimes takes a little time to get used to better hearing through a hearing aid. We do much more than just sell hearing aids here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Our complete services include comprehensive testing, determining the most appropriate instrument for each customer's needs, precise fittings, and follow-up care. And all in-office repairs are free for all makes of hearing aids here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, PH: 781-337-1144.

P.S. If you have two ears with hearing loss and both could benefit from hearing instruments, you should wear an instrument in each ear (binaural fitting).

DESTINATIONS

Are we there yet?

Summer's the time for family adventures

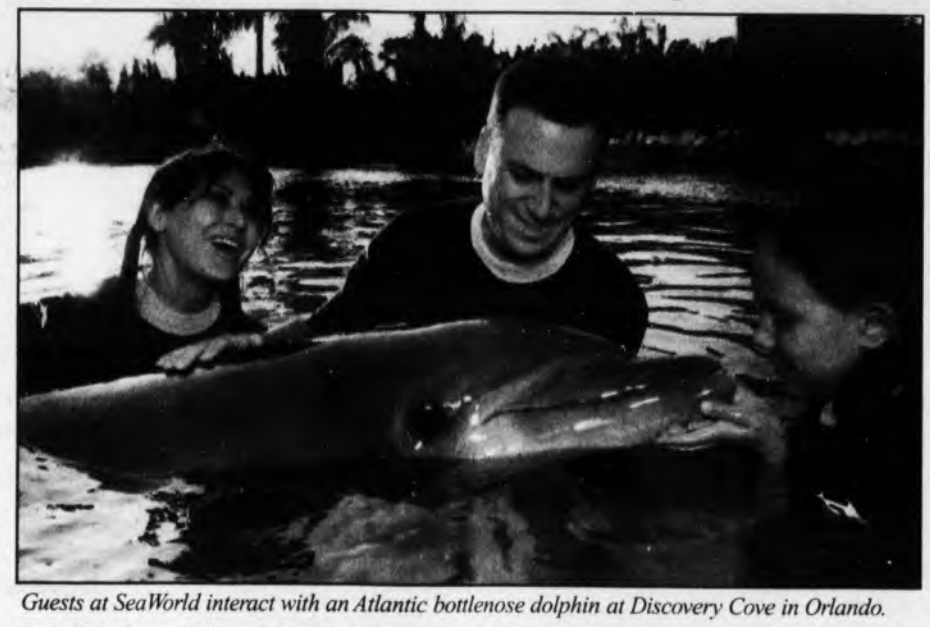
By FELICITY LONG
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Let's see. You've got the kids' summer camp schedule nailed down, your spouse's vacation time approved and a trashy vacation novel burning a hole in your suitcase. The next question: where to take the kids for your annual summer vacation?

If you're putting off the decision, you may want to think again. Vacationers are expected to clog the roads and airways this summer — despite high gas prices, the weak dollar, et al. The Travel Industry Association and AAA recently predicted that some 328 million of us will travel for vacation this summer. Those who wait for last-minute bargains might find themselves scrambling.

Check out the following destinations. Whatever you choose, have fun and relax knowing the kids will have something to write about the first day back at school.

Orlando, Fla.



Sure, it's hot, but bring extra sunscreen and hit the theme parks and attractions early or late in the day — saving the noonday sun for the hotel pool and water parks. Don't miss the new Fear Factor Live attraction at Universal Orlando — bugs for lunch, anyone? — the new Blue Horizons dolphin show at SeaWorld, the summer Twilight Discovery evening program at Discovery Cove and, of course, Stitch's Great Escape and the Cinderellabration Castle show at Walt Disney World in honor of Disneyland Resort's 50th anniversary.

St. Petersburg, Fla.

Enjoy the flip side of Florida at the family-friendly beaches of St. Pete. Fort De Soto Park was named the Best Beach in America in 2005, according to Dr. Beach (coastal geologist Dr. Stephen Leatherman), so designated for its seven miles of powdery sand and year-round sun. Best of all, active families can fish, walk nature trails and even explore old ruins nearby. On a rainy day, head to Great Explorations, a children's museum on Fourth Street that includes plenty of interactive fun.

Southern California

With bargain basement air prices (on the low-cost carriers) to Los Angeles, beach lovers don't have to stick to the Atlantic Ocean anymore. Spend time in San Diego getting up-close-and-personal with the wildlife at the famed San Diego Zoo. Mingle with the beautiful people on Santa Monica beach. Learn to surf. Take a jaunt to the theme parks, including Disneyland and Disney's California Adventure Park.

Guests at SeaWorld interact with an Atlantic bottlenose dolphin at Discovery Cove in Orlando.

And don't forget Universal Studios Hollywood, Legoland and Knott's Berry Farm, home of the bone-rattling Ghostrider wood coaster.

New England amusement parks

You don't have to travel far to find summer fun at amusement parks, particularly here in New England, where smaller — and less expensive — options abound. Try Quassy Amusement Park in Middlebury, Conn., where you can enjoy the Monster-Mad Mouth steel coasters or get soaked at the Saturation Station Family Water Play Area; Old Orchard Beach, Maine, for a nostalgic trip to the Palace Playland amusement park; and perennial favorite Story Land in Glen, N.H., with its Polar Coaster and Dr. Geyser's Remarkable Raft Ride.

Tennessee and Dollywood

Pay homage to Tennessee's favorite daughter at the Dollywood theme park, named, of course, for local icon Dolly Parton, and check out the beautiful Great Smoky Mountains scenery while you're at it. Then immerse yourself in music at the Smithsonian Institution's Rock 'n Soul Museum in Memphis, which highlights everything from blues and Elvis to soul music of the '60s and '70s, or the Country Music Hall of Fame in Nashville.

Hit the slopes

Need a break from all that heat? Head for the hills and enjoy the summer amenities at your favorite ski resort. Many now offer water and alpine slides, horseback riding, lift-assisted mountain biking and even gondola rides for scenic views. Golf courses at major ski resorts allow Mom and Dad to grab some time on their own or give junior his or her first lessons in the sport. Best of all, some of the most fun summer ski areas are an easy drive away — including Smugglers' Notch in Vermont and Attitash in Bartlett, N.H.

Hershey, Pa.

They don't call it the "Sweetest Place on Earth" for nothing, especially for the chocoholics among us. You can learn how chocolate is made at Hershey's Chocolate World (be sure to stay for Hershey's Really Big 3-D show), sample the 60-plus rides and attractions at Hershey Park or meet the new prairie dog puppies at ZooAmerica. Or try the ultimate indulgence — chocolate spa treatments at the Hotel Hershey Spa.

Hawaii

Yes, we know the Caribbean is closer, but with its cooling trade winds, iconic cultural attractions and world-famous beaches, Hawaii is worth the extra flight time. Hit the evening dance show and luau at the Polynesian Cultural Center on Oahu, learn to surf at the Hans Hedemann Surf School (various locations), live the history of Pearl Harbor or swim with wild dolphins. On Maui, visit the Haleakala Crater or take in the living reef wall at the Maui Ocean Center. On the Big Island, try rafting along flooded irrigation ditches in old sugar cane plantations or visit Volcanoes National Park. On Kauai, kayak the river where "Raiders of the Lost Ark" was filmed.

Bermuda

This stately island, known for its formal British ambience, has undergone a major transformation with regard to family travel. No longer are guests required to dress for dinner at many resorts, and youngsters are welcome where they once were given the cold shoulder. Explore the famous pink beaches on the South Shore; walk sections of the Bermuda Railway Trail, lush with vegetation and great views; take in the North Rock Exhibit at the Bermuda Aquarium, Museum & Zoo; try a simulated dive at the Bermuda Underwater Exploration Institute, and learn once and for all the difference between stalactites and stalagmites at the eerie Crystal Caves.

Cruisin'

From the Caribbean and Mexico to Alaska, Hawaii and even Europe, today's cruise lines offer a great way for families to sample multiple destinations. Best of all, most offer outstanding children's and teens' clubs for no extra charge. Although they can be pricey, cruise line shore excursions feature some of the best activity-based experiences in the business. Swim with stingrays in Grand Cayman, ride a zip line through the jungle in Maui or give a dolphin a smooch in the Bahamas.

Village housing

12 units planned in new structure

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Downtown Cohasset is going through a time of revitalization. Business owners have banded together to offer special events and draw people into the village, and a streetscape project is planned, which will help bring aesthetic improvement to the area.

But by this time next year, developer Wayne Sawchuk hopes to add another element to enhance the village — 12 new units of senior housing.

Sawchuk and his business partner Robert Fesler of Dresden, Maine, have plans to upgrade the Samuel Bates House, also known as the "1811 building" which houses businesses located at 35 to 39 South Main St., including Bia Bistro. Currently, the building has two apartments on the upper level, which Sawchuk said will remain the same. Business tenants in the lower levels will also keep their spaces.

Due to the building's long history in town, which Sawchuk

Litchfield talks about boot camp

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

On graduation day, Jaime Litchfield knew he wasn't going to follow the same career path as many of his fellow high school classmates. He was going to train hard, both mentally and physically, and he was going to be pushed to his limits. He was going to become a United States Marine.

In a town where roughly 90 percent of every graduating class goes on to pursue degrees from four-year colleges, Litchfield stands out from the rest of the Class of 2004.

Tuesday, Pvt. Litchfield, having just returned home from five months of boot camp and infantry training, paid a visit to the students in high school social studies teacher Scott Newkirk's international relations class to provide an inside look into the life of a Marine.

"I've wanted to join the military since I was 5 years old," said Litchfield, now 19. He said when he was younger, he had always anticipated joining the

Art lovers relish 50th festival

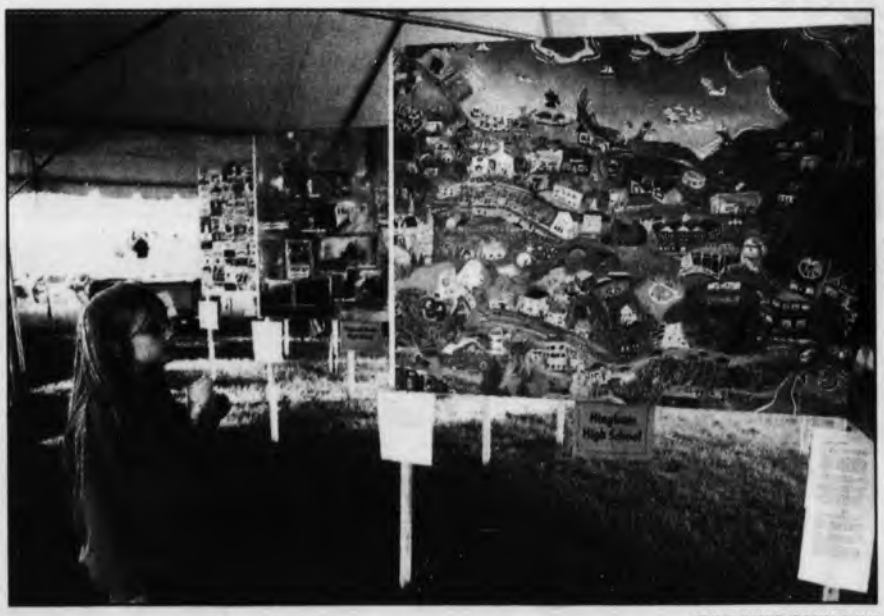
Event was a huge success

By Matt Whorf
CORRESPONDENT

This was an arts festival of a grand scale truly befitting a 50th anniversary.

The South Shore Art Center's 50th Annual Arts Festival, held on Cohasset Common this past weekend, could not have been a more all-inclusive event. And it also could not have been a better showcase for the rich past, present, and future of the art center and the South Shore arts community overall.

The festival totaled 130 artists and artworks in the Juried Show (out of 527 submitted from all over Massachusetts) and 165 in the Members Show. More than 150 volunteers, in addition to the art center staff, helped make it all happen. An estimated 8,000 to 10,000 art lovers trekked to Cohasset over the three days of the event.



"An overall diversity of craft and media, we believe, makes the show more appealing to artists, using artists in the global sense of the word."

— Diane Kennedy, festival coordinator

"This being our 50th annual festival event, in and of itself, makes it very special," said festival coordinator Diane Kennedy. "We have more exhibiting craft artists on the grounds of the festival for this year's event than ever before.

"A tremendous amount of

Celebrating life and hope

Relay raises $143K

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It's fair to say that everyone has been touched by cancer.

Those who haven't had cancer themselves, know someone who has.

A microcosm of that universal truth plays out every June in Cohasset for the annual Relay For Life, one of literally thousands of similar events that take place annually around the country each spring.

From 6 p.m. last Friday until 10 a.m. Saturday morning, hundreds of volunteers and participants celebrated on Alumni Field next to the middle-high school.

Some may think "celebrating" what is often a devastating disease seems out-of-place.

But cancer survivors and their supporters aren't depressed or looking for pity. On the contrary they are determined, full of life, and filled with hope. They also raise a lot of money for the American Cancer Society which goes toward cancer research.

This year's Cohasset Relay – the ninth annual – raised upwards of $143,000 for cancer research and local patient services.

Relay chairman Harry St. Onge said he was particularly impressed by the number of children taking part.

"I find when young kids get involved, they stay involved," St. Onge said. He praised the high school students at the Relay who demonstrated a "real outpouring of time to help with this effort."

Case in point is Emily Grebenstein, a Hingham High student. Her team, dubbed "The Impossible Dream" raised roughly $13,500, more than any other youth team.

When she was in the seventh grade, Emily lost her father to cancer. Just before he died that June, her friend brought her to the Relay that was held the end of May.

"There was a good feeling here and I kept coming back after that," Emily recalls.

Dave Hardy, also of Hingham and a cancer survivor, explained his team celebrates a particular

Teachers promised payment for professional development

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A promise made by former Supt. Edward Malvey to reimburse teachers for professional development courses is causing waves for the school budget. While the school committee is trying to balance the yet-to-be-approved fiscal 2006 budget — problems are still arising from fiscal 2004 and fiscal 2005, which ended last July.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh announced Thursday (June 16) that the school department has roughly $168,000 to make up in salaries for fiscal 2005, which relates directly back to Malvey.

She said when she came on board in July 2004, there were a number of agreements which were "sitting on my desk" and some of them dated back to the previous September. Some of the money owed to teachers goes back to fiscal 2004, but would be paid retroactively from the fiscal 2005 budget. "We have an obligation," to reimburse the teachers, she said.

School committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz said it is his understanding Malvey verbally agreed to allow certain courses to count toward professional development points (PDPs) for teachers, but the courses did not completely mesh with the guidelines outlined in the teachers' contract.

Slanetz said Malvey made a promise to roughly 15 teachers that certain courses would count toward their PDPs, but he never budgeted either for tuition reimbursement for the classes or for the increase in salaries the extra PDPs would warrant.

"She's doing her best to honor her predecessor's verbal commitment," said Slanetz of Walsh, adding she told the committee she is optimistic there will be enough money within the fiscal 2005 budget to cover the additional costs. Town Meetings have appropriated $93,000 for utilities, $65,000 for unemployment and an additional $200,000 for any other unforeseen costs which may arise from fiscal 2005.

MORE SCHOOL BUDGET NEWS, PAGE 12

However, Slanetz said there are also some costs related to longevity pay that surfaced from fiscal 2005 which will also have to be paid for. After 15 years of service, teachers may opt to take a longevity buyout of $3,000 per year for three consecutive years. The fiscal 2005 budget will need to pay between $9,000 to $12,000 in longevity pay for three or four employees who are planning to retire.

Interim business manager Joe McDonald told the school committee while roughly $9.2 million was budgeted for salaries in fiscal 05 — which will end June 30 — with the tuition charges and column changes taking effect in fiscal 2005, the school department has already paid out $9,368,000.

"You're out of balance," said McDonald, adding in fiscal 2004, the school department spent almost $9.1 million on salaries.

The school committee has been working on the fiscal 2006 budget since October, and Walsh said in November that $70,000 in tuition reimbursement had not been budgeted in fiscal 2005 and $55,000 had not been budgeted for column changes for that same year.

Last Thursday's meeting, which was called to have an emergency discussion on the fiscal 2006 budget, was the first time members of the school committee were informed those combined line items were actually higher than thought.

According to the collective bargaining agreement between the school committee and the Cohasset Teachers' Association for 2002-2005, teachers are eligible to receive tuition payments in an amount equal to the average per credit cost for courses charged by the University of Massachusetts up to a limit of two courses or six credits per contract year. In order to receive reimbursement for a course, a teacher must apply for and receive approval for the course before April 15 of that year. Courses applied for after April 15 may be credited for the next fiscal year.

The teachers, who are owed reimbursement for their courses, will receive payment retroactively. Walsh said all teachers should be squared away by June 30, which is the end of fiscal 2005.

However, moving forward, the salary line item will be affected for fiscal 2006, as the column changes from the classes will make teachers eligible for raises this year. Slanetz noted, however, contracts have not yet been negotiated, raises and column changes have not been factored in, and there is no way to predict what the impact will be on the budget.

Slanetz says more fees could generate money for schools

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz presented a potential short-term solution for the schools, which he believes could yield $225,000.

Coming up with the money necessary to balance the school budget is no easy task, but some members of the school committee believe the superintendent's recommendation to cut teaching positions to make up a $285,000 deficit is not the only solution.

Some members of the school committee would like to raise $180,000 to save four teaching positions that were slated to be either cut or eliminated from this year's budget.

Two elementary-level teaching positions which had been funded by public fund-raising last year will not be included in the budget this year. Also, two teaching positions which were going to be added — a high school English teacher and a grade one teacher — have been eliminated as of right now. However, some members believe with some creativity, those positions can be saved.

In addition, school committee vice chairman Alfred Slanetz said he would like to see an additional $45,000 raised to include an additional math teaching position in the budget which was proposed at the outset of budget discussions, but subsequently removed.

Slanetz presented a potential short-term solution for the schools, which he believes could yield $225,000. He said that amount of money would be enough to cover the four teaching positions at roughly $45,000 each, as well as add back the math teaching position to the budget that had been eliminated during previous rounds of cuts.

Slanetz proposed raising funds by implementing transportation fees for non-mandated riders, as well as parking fees for high school students who might opt to drive instead of riding the bus.

At $250 per year to ride the bus, and 500 non-mandated riders, Slanetz said the potential exists to bring in $125,000. Add to that a fee of $150 per year per car to park in the lot at the high school, and potentially 150 cars parking in the lot, and Slanetz estimated the school could bring in another $22,500.

If fees result in a decline in ridership, Slanetz said that will in turn allow the school to use its buses to service more athletic trips and field trips, which could also yield a profit. A department pays $45 per hour for field trips and the school pays an hourly rate of $18 to the driver. Slanetz said the transportation program currently generates roughly $50,000 in profit money from field trips, but due to the small size of Cohasset's fleet, cannot service field trips that require more than one bus. With less students riding the buses field trips would be possible, which Slanetz estimates could bring in an additional $25,000. When the town hires outside bus services to take them on field trips, they charge $80 per hour.

Slanetz also suggested looking into ways to save money on maintenance for the buses. He said if the town shared its mechanic with the school department, the person who works on the fire engines and DPW trucks could work on the buses as well.

"It's all a diesel engine," he said.

Slanetz suggested the schools "carpool" with other districts in busing special education students to out of district schools. However, director of student services Linda Gill said that is already happening. She said Cohasset shares vans with Norwell, Scituate, and Hull, and the charges are per student, not per van, meaning car-pooling wouldn't save any money for the town.

The school committee was scheduled to discuss other ways to help balance the budget at its June 23 meeting, which took place last night after the Mariner went to press.

Forest Avenue stop sign slated

The three-way stop at the intersection of Jerusalem Road and Forest Avenue is troubling some residents. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he has received phone calls from those who believe the intersection is confusing for people unfamiliar with the area. The intersection previpusly only had two stop signs for those driving on Jerusalem Road, but in July of 2003, a stop sign was added at the foot of Forest Avenue for those traveling from Hull. Selectmen have proposed another stop sign be added at the bottom of the hill on Forest Avenue, making it a four-way stop.

Police Chief Jim Hussey said he has been studying the intersection and agrees it is awkward.

"The area is primed for a four-way stop," he said. Hussey said while residents have told him people go too fast down the hill and a stop sign there would cause problems, he feels the area would be much safer with a stop sign. He also recommended either the blinking yellow light be changed to a blinking red light to warn residents the stop sign is coming up or installing in a "stop ahead" sign at the top of the hill.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil, who lives close to the intersection, agreed with Hussey.

"I haven't been woken up with people crashing on the beach in a long time," he said, adding he hoped with the addition of the stop sign that would never happen again.

Selectman Michael Sullivan also backed the proposal. "It'll take a little while for people to get used to, but it's a good idea," he said.

Hussey said he will write up a formal recommendation to Town Manager Bill Griffin to install the stop sign.

Residents sought for harbor health committee

Selectmen are looking for residents with an interest in studying the health of the harbor. Selectmen Gary Vanderweil has set the health of the harbor as a long-term goal for selectmen to delve into.

Vanderweil said things have changed dramatically with the harbor over the past few years as mollusks are disappearing, sea grass is dying, and galvanized hardware has a much shorter life when exposed to the harbor's water.

Vanderweil has suggested Paul Pattison, 104 Elm St.; Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road; Jack Buckley, 272 North Main St.; and Jim Drysdale, 4 Cedar Acres Lane, for the committee. But selectmen would like to hear from all interested parties before making the appointments.

Interested residents should either contact the selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105 or send a letter of interest to the board at Cohasset Town Hall, 42 Highland Ave. The appointments will be made at the board's next meeting, scheduled for July 12.

Village could be site of senior housing project has come to learn about during the planning process, he does not want to make many changes other than to make it look like new again. He said during inspections, he found some of the wood in the attic is hand-hewn, which makes it a true historic gem. He said the exterior architecture is also beautiful and "that's another reason not to touch it."

Where the real change will take place is behind the 1811 building, where Sawchuk has plans to build a three-story building that will have retail or office space on the first floor, six apartments on the second floor, and six apartments on the third floor. Sawchuk said there may be a single tenant for the whole space on the first floor, and he envisions the entire building creating more pedestrian traffic flow for the businesses that already operate in the village.

All apartments will be geared toward seniors, but may not "count" toward meeting the town's affordable housing needs. The town is currently trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state. Sawchuk said the rents for the apartments will be based according to the state's moderate income standard, but it will be a private project and not state-subsidized, a requirement for them to "count."

Wayne Sawchuk and his business partner Robert Fesler have plans to upgrade the Samuel Bates House, also known as the "1811 building" at 35 to 39 South Main St.

The apartments will all have two bedrooms and two baths and will be virtually the same size — roughly 900 square feet. Sawchuk said originally, plans were in place to have the apartments all one-bedrooms. However, he said where the units are geared toward seniors, if the grandchildren come to visit, "They'll need someplace to put them," he said.

The building will have a sprinkler system, elevators and an open rooftop patio. Sawchuk said from the street, the building will look like it has a full roof, but behind it will be an open space where residents can sit at tables and enjoy the outdoors. Zoning regulations require the building be built no higher than 35 feet, he said.

Sawchuk is working with Dan Belz, owner of the Newcomb Bates building which houses businesses at 45 to 47 South Main Street including Atlantic Bagel, to improve the area between their buildings. Sawchuk said he has plans to make a pocket park between the two buildings, in the area which is currently bare except for some shrubs and walkways. He would like to build a round park, roughly 50 feet in diameter, which would have a fountain in the middle and seating areas.

"The pocket park, to me, is going to be dynamite," said Sawchuk, adding it will be open to the public, but will most likely have gates in the front which will be shut at roughly 11 p.m. or midnight to discourage it from becoming a late-night hangout for teens.

Improvements from the new building will continue past its borders. Sawchuk said he has plans to plant new trees along the James Brook Walkway, as some trees will be lost in the backyard of the 1811 building during construction. In addition, there will be a new parking area in the back for those who live in the apartments. A new sidewalk and landscaping will be installed.

The 1811 building has a town sewer connection and Monday night the sewer commission voted to expand the sewer permit currently in place to allow the new office space and apartments to connect. The next step is the formal definitive site plan hearing before the planning board, which will take place sometime near the end of July. Sawchuk has plans to begin construction before Sept. 1 and said he hopes to be done next summer.

"I just think this is going to be neat," he said.

Deer Hill learns about train safety

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Tracks are for trains, not for kids!"

"We get it!" one fourth-grader called out after hearing the above refrain over and over again during a special assembly on train safety at Deer Hill School.

And that was exactly the point.

Operation Lifesaver, a railroad safety education program, paid the school a visit on June 10 and made slide and video presentations to grades three, four and five. The program hopes that all Cohasset youngsters "will get it."

"The only person I know who can run faster than a train is Superman!"
— Peter Trowbridge, Operation Lifesaver

Peter Trowbridge of the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Railroad Company talks to Deer Hill third graders about train safety during a special presentation dubbed "Operation Lifesaver."

Train service to and through Cohasset along the Greenbush line may still be two years off. But signs that the train is coming are becoming more evident every day.

A harbinger of what is to come, the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority is using dinosaur-sized equipment to clear a wide swath along the old rail bed in preparation for laying tracks and infrastructure.

Representatives from the Massachusetts Bay Commuter Railroad Company that operates and manages commuter rail service for the MBTA gave the Operation Lifesaver presentation and had no trouble keeping the children's attention.

"Is there anyone here who can run faster than a train?" asked Peter Trowbridge of MBCR. "The only person I know who can run faster than a train is Superman!"

Trowbridge and Mike Maloney of MBCR stressed to the pupils that trains are both big and fast.

In fact, the men, explained it takes a train traveling 55 m.p.h. over a mile to stop or the length of 18 football fields. It also passes by in the "blink of an eye," they said.

Maria Campedelli, a fourth-grader, asked if trains could carry "big things like elephants."

Trowbridge answered a train car could carry 10 elephants with no problem.

The children also learned that the train tracks and rail bed are private property and walking or playing there would be trespassing, which was a new word for most of the students.

But the majority of the program focuses on safety issues and how to cross at grade crossings, whether on foot or bicycle.

Trowbridge also explained that in many movies, actors are seen climbing on trains, jumping on trains and racing trains with their cars. He stressed these are scenes are fictitious.

"Movies aren't real," he said. "People do things in movies that they don't do in real life."

Principal Keith Gauley said even though the train is two years down the road, it was important the students become educated about its inherent dangers.

Cohasset's Richard Schmidt is truly a 'Super Dad'

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

LET THE FUN BEGIN!

Hello Cohasset, Summer is officially here! Although most of our children are still in school for a few more days, let the fun begin. Remember all of the "summer rules" like slowing down for children who are walking, running or riding bikes, use plenty of sunscreen and bug spray and making sure the kids are wearing helmets. Most of all, remember to have fun, enjoy all of those "little things" that go into making each day special. As we all have learned in many ways, life can change in a heartbeat so make sure to capture the moments.

AROUND TOWN 101

Just a note about this column to everyone who takes the time to send me the news, information about events and special announcements. I have to let you all know how much I appreciate the news coming in each week. It helps to make this column so full of wonderful reading. I do have to ask everyone to please make sure the items are to me by email(the best way) or if needed, by regular mail NO LATER than Tuesdays by noon. Anything I receive after this time will be placed in the following weeks column. Thank you in advance.

HUGS ALL AROUND

Thank heavens for little girls.... Molly Lord Naples was born June 17, 2005 and joins her parents Katie and John and big sister Samantha, who is 4 years old. Grandparents, Irene and David Lord and Fran and Bob Naples, are thrilled with Miss Molly. Best of wishes to all.

RICHARD SCHMIDT IS A 'SUPER DAD'

This year Richard Schmidt received a truly super gift for Father's Day: recognition for being among an elite group of special dads.

Richard's daughter, 13-year-old Emilie, nominated her father for the Fathering Project/Medical Foundation's eighth annual "Dads Make a Difference: a Celebration of Fathering" award.

Here's what Emilie said about her dad:

"My Dad is a super-Dad for a lot of the usual reasons, but for many, many more not-so-usual reasons. For instance, my Dad read me my first book when I was a baby, and now that I'm a teenager, he still helps me with my homework and studying for tests, especially science and algebra, not so unusual.

"On the fun side, my Dad taught me how to fish, play tennis, ride a two-wheeler. He takes me to fun places like zoos, Florida, and the beach. He swims with me, plays cards and board games. He also taught me how to ski and ice skate.

"He listens when I have a problem, takes me to religious education classes on Sundays, and teaches me a little bit about many things like astronomy and birds. He never misses one of my band concerts, and he's awesome making pancakes on weekend mornings too.

"In the not-so-usual category, ever since my Mom was in a car crash, my Dad has gladly taken over driving the carpool I take to school (which is 25 miles away). My Dad does the vacuuming, cleaning, laundry, so many of the chores my Mom used to be able to do, and I help all I can. He does all this, and still keeps his full-time job. Sometimes he gets tired, but he's always up the next day, ready to go again.

"(May30) I watched him march in the Memorial Day parade with the other veterans. He looks so handsome in his uniform from the Vietnam War. You see, even though my Dad does so much for me, he's not a young guy. He'll be 60 this year and there isn't a better Dad anywhere."

Emilie's Mom, Susan, couldn't agree more. "I don't think there's any guy more deserving than he is," Susan Schmidt said.

Emilie Schmidt, 13, with her dad, Richard.

Emilie's tribute caught the eye of "Dads Make a Difference" and Richard was one of 130 inspiring fathers that received the Super Dads Award on Father's Day.

CLARK GRADUATE

Robert Butman of Cohasset, graduated with a bachelor of arts in government & international relations from Clark University on May 22. He attended Cohasset High School. Congratulations.

BC HIGH HONORS

Boston College High School recognized the following Cohasset students recently for their achievements in the honors program. Alexander G. Hunt '07; Thomas J. Chase '08; and Alan T. Kershaw '08 all achieved high honors for the fourth quarter at Boston College High School. For high honors a student must have at least a 3.80 quality point average.

Patrick B. Flynn '07 and Clifford J. Musto '08 achieved honors, receiving a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2.

Nice work to all.

TOP NU STUDENT

Northeastern University is pleased to recognize those students who distinguish themselves academically during the course of the school year. Cohasset resident, Maura Duffy, a Northeastern University student majoring in nursing, was recently named to the University's dean's list for the spring semester, which ended in May 2005.

In addition to achieving distinction through the dean's list, Maura is an honors student, part of a burgeoning program at Northeastern, which offers high caliber students the chance to further hone their studies and interests, live in special interest on-campus housing, and participate in one or two honors courses each term.

GRADUATING WITH HONORS

John Whitehouse recently graduated summa cum laude from UMass Boston's nursing program. with a BS in nursing. John is also a Trinity college graduate.

John received the prestigious Segelman Award for dedication to knowledge and caring. John plans to work at Boston Medical Center, starting in July. Super news, John.

MASTER'S DEGREES

Hat's off to the Cohasset residents who received degrees from Boston University this spring! Sean P. Casey was awarded an MBA in business administration and management; Joseph A. Dionisio earned an MS in actuarial science; and David F. Watts received his MS in investment management. Congratulations all.

DEAN'S LIST

Meaghan C. Rizzotti has earned dean's list status for the spring 2005 semester at Framingham State. Meaghan, who is a member of the Class of 2007, maintained a quality point average of 3.25 or higher for this honor. Keep up the good work, Meaghan!

HIGH SCHOOL ABROAD

Congratulations to Emma Grinnell on her graduation from LAS American school in Switzerland! Emma received the English award in her grade 12 class as well as the LAS leadership award. Emma worked on a habitat for humanity project in Warsaw, visited Rome and Salzburg on class trips and learned to snowboard in the alps. Come September, Emma will be heading west to attend the University of British Columbia in Vancouver. We are very proud of her.

CYBSA DOCUMENTARY

Be a permanent part of history! Derry Schwantner is doing a documentary on the history of CYBSA! If you have a story to tell, a picture to share or an awesome play to brag about please let her know. Contact Derry at derrry@comcast.net (please note there are three 'r's' in Derry's email address). Filming for this project will take place over the summer. Derry is looking for memorabilia and pictures to photograph and scan, along with personal stories of you or your children to be filmed, past and present. please help us make this documentary a success! The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association appreciates it.

NEW ARCHITECT

Caitlin Elizabeth Stansell received a bachelor's degree with a concentration in architectural technology from Cornell University's School of Architecture on May 29. Caitlin is the daughter of Robert and Moira Stansell.

Above, Peter Brewer of Quincy points out the sturdy woodwork of the Lewis H. Story, a Chebacco fishing boat that was prevalent in New England waters 150 years ago. The Lewis H. Story was visiting Cohasset last weekend courtesy of the Essex Shipbuilding Museum, which has partnered with the Cohasset Historical Society and Cohasset Maritime Museum as well as the Hull Lifesaving Museum to bring New England's maritime history to life.

Top right, Janet Bryson, at left, of Norton, and Jennifer Bryson of Newton enjoy the weather and good conversation while sitting by the water close to where the Lewis H. Story was docked last weekend. The two are sisters-in-law who were in the area for a college friend's wedding. Visitors were allowed to come aboard the boat and explore the vessel, which is similar to the types of boats Cohasset fishermen used more than 150 years ago.

At right, Matthew Legge, left 7, of Cohasset, and his younger brother Michael, 5, take a closer look at the Lewis H. Story, which was docked in Cohasset harbor over the weekend. The Chebacco boat had come to Cohasset as part of a celebration of the town's Mackerel fishing heritage.

survivor each year. This year the team was called "Celebrating Eleanor" after Eleanor Perry, a principal in the Boston Public Schools. Another member of the team, Jean Rooney, works with Perry. The eight-member "Celebrating Eleanor" team raised an estimated $4,500.

For Dave Hardy, who has participated every year at the Cohasset Relay, the event continues to be as compelling as ever. "I get teary every time I do this," he says.

Hardy's wife Jeanne describes the survivors' lap and luminaria as "two touching and wonderful ceremonies."

Jeanne Hardy said the number of survivors and names on the luminaries lining the track send an important message.

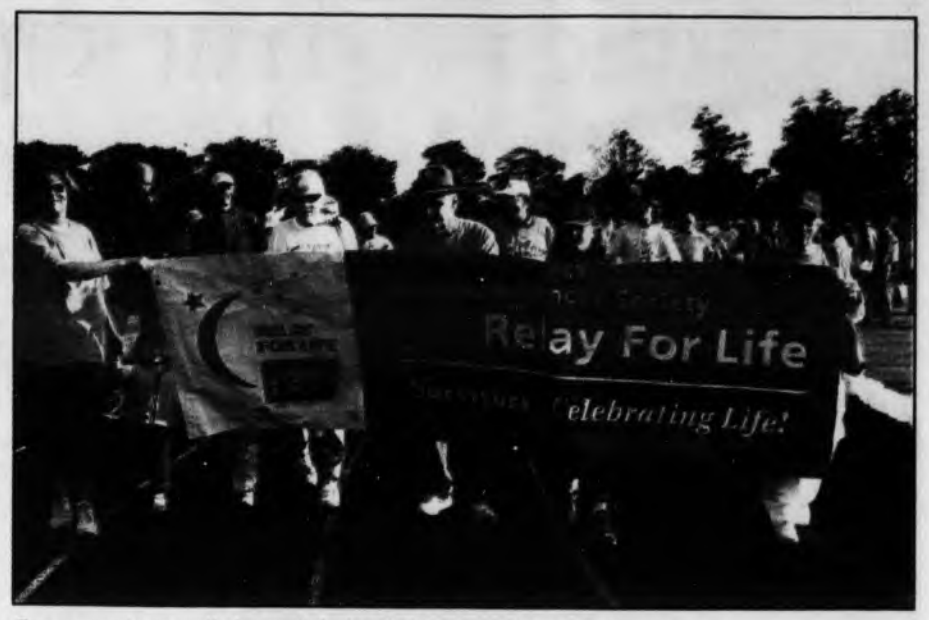
"Way too many people have cancer," she says. "It's important that we keep raising funds to find a cure.

"Hopefully that will happen in our lifetime."

Michael Shea holds the memory of his father close to his heart and how cancer shortened what could have been the best years of his father's life.

"He raised seven kids, put them through college and then retired," said Shea, adding six months later his father passed away from cancer.

Connie Zanoni of Scituate, who served as registration chairman, says she lost her brother to lung cancer. She received a card from one of the Relay organizers, whom she knew, with condolences and a request for help. She's been helping ever since. Her husband, John, has joined the volunteers.



"He found he had to, to keep peace in the family," Zanoni said with a smile.

St. Onge, the chairman and a Cohasset resident, has agreed to take the helm of the Relay again next year. Planning starts each January.

St. Onge, a cancer survivor, said the history of the Relay is an inspiration.

"The Relay was one person's idea," he explains. "That was 20 years ago. Now there are more than 4,500 Relays and over 3 million people involved."

In May 1985, Dr. Gordon Klatt took the first step of his 24-hour walk/jog/run around a Tacoma, Wash. Track and raised $27,000 to support the American Cancer Society. In Massachusetts alone $9.2 million was raised in Relay For Life events in fiscal year 2004. $306 million was raised nationwide. 'Touch-A-Truck' puts kids in the driver's seat

Child ID program also being offered

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Seeing a fire truck drive by is exciting for a child — but not as exciting as actually climbing into the driver's seat. This Sunday, June 26, from noon until 4 p.m., children of all ages will be invited to explore the insides of more than 20 different kinds of equipment during the Cohasset Call Firefighter's Touch-A-Truck event.

In addition, the CHIP identification program will be offered for free during the Touch-A-Truck event, now in its fourth year. Between viewing vehicles, children will be educated in abduction prevention and parents will be given the tools necessary to help investigators find their child if kidnapping ever occurs.

From fire engines, to ambulances, to police cars and cranes, to backhoes, race cars, and many other pieces of machinery — almost every kind of vehicle will be on display behind the Cohasset Family Health Center, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A), and all are fully accessible for children. Admission to the Touch-A-Truck is $5 for children and all proceeds will go toward the Call Firefighter's Scholarship Fund. This year, two scholarships were given to graduating high school seniors, in the amount of $500 each.

"The kids love them," said Jack MacNeill, president of the Call Firefighters, adding every year there are new vehicles for children to check out. He said because the Call Firefighters have been hosting the event for the past four years, they have come to make some great contacts, and people have been very happy to lend their equipment for the day. This year, there will be more than 20 different pieces of equipment on display.

Because many children attend the Touch-A-Truck event, it is the perfect venue to showcase the CHIP program — the nationally recognized child identification program sponsored by the Freemasons of Massachusetts. MacNeill is also Master of the Konohassett Lodge of Masons, and for the past year he has been working to combine the two events.

MacNeill said the CHIP program gathers valuable information and gives it to parents to have in case of an emergency. The Cohasset Police Department will be taking fingerprints and a local pediatric dentist will make dental impressions. Both teeth prints and fingerprints are unique to every individual and can be very helpful for identification.

In addition, the dentist will be taking DNA swabs. MacNeill said the CHIP program teaches children about the importance of doing whatever it takes to get away if being abducted, including spitting as much as they can. DNA in the saliva can be traced and can be very helpful in an investigation.

"The DNA swab is good for 20 years," said MacNeill.

There will also be older children on hand to interview youngsters on video to capture their actions, facial expressions, and other mannerisms that set them apart and could help to identify them if they were missing, MacNeill said. The video is short and could be distributed to the media to reach a huge audience.

"But we hope it never comes to that," he said.

MacNeill said over the last three years, the Masons have spent $500,000 to be able to provide the service free of charge to parents, and information on more than 220,000 children has been collected and given to parents in Massachusetts alone. MacNeill said all of the information is packaged and presented to parents to take home with them when they leave the event.

The Touch-A-Truck event will take place Sunday, June 26 from noon until 4 p.m. at the Cohasset Family Health Center, 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Route 3A. Admission is $5 per child, and all proceeds will go to the Cohasset Call Firefighter's Association Scholarship Fund. Parents are encouraged to bring cameras.

CHIP participation is free and all information on children will be compiled and given to parents to take home that day. For more information on the CHIP program, please visit the Massachusetts Freemasons CHIP Web site at www.mychip.org.

Carillon recital in memory of the Thompsons

The second program in the 81st season of Summer Carillon Recitals on the Cohasset Common will be given on Sunday evening, July 3 by Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur of St. Stephen's Church.

Warner's program will be played in memory of Blanche and Leslie Thompson, long-time members of St. Stephen's parish. Included will be selections appropriate for the eve of the Fourth of July, with patriotic music from the 18th, 19th, and 20th centuries. The 57-bell instrument is located in the tower of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church overlooking the Common.

The hour-long recital begins at 6 p.m. and is free of charge. It will take place regardless of weather conditions. In case of rain, the bells may be heard from your parked cars. Printed programs, scheduled and brochures will be distributed on the Cohasset Common, and will also be available in a stand by the courtyard of St. Stephen's Church on Highland Avenue. Listeners are invited to bring chairs, blankets, and picnics to the Common or the church courtyard. Following the program, the tower will be open to visitors for a demonstration by the carillonneur and a look at the bells.

Warner's program will be played in memory of Blanche and Leslie Thompson, long-time members of St. Stephen's parish.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Friday is Mariner Day

Here at the Cohasset Mariner we've been publishing on Fridays since October 2004. As we explained at the time, the move from our traditional Thursday was necessitated by the reorganization in press schedules at Community Newspaper Company, which the Mariner is part of.

Cohasset, having a relatively small press run because of the size of the community, was moved into another timeslot.

We still hear the occasional complaint about our "new" day. Change is hard, especially after 26 years of arriving in your mailboxes and at the newsstands every Thursday.

While we continue to do our utmost to make the Cohasset Mariner the best it can be – our press day is unlikely to change back.

With that being said, the fact school committee meetings occur on Thursday nights can cause some confusion with our coverage.

It's important to point out that this would be the case regardless of whether we were a Thursday or Friday paper.

Because we go to press on Thursday – that night's school committee coverage – appears in the following week's paper. In other words, the paper is already printed and ready to be transported to the post office for Friday delivery before the school committee meets on a Thursday night.

This means the coverage in today's paper relates to last Thursday's (June 13) school budget meeting. Last night's meeting coverage will appear in next Friday's paper.

When we were a Thursday paper, we went to press on Wednesday – so that Thursday's school committee coverage still appeared the following week.

Confused? If you are, you're not alone. But short of becoming a daily paper – there are always these "coverage situations" with weeklies.

Nevertheless, we will continue to endeavor to provide analysis and in-depth coverage of issues even if we cannot have the "latest" news in the paper because it occurs the night before the Mariner arrives in the mail. Although a week later, our school committee stories are the most thorough as possible.

Selectmen have traditionally met on Monday or Tuesday – so we could always count on coverage of their latest meeting in that week's issue.

We've covered the school committee faithfully for years. But only recently has the school board -- with what has become a budgetary nightmare – become so controversial that some readers are looking for that Thursday night's meeting coverage in that Friday's Mariner.

While there are some things we can't do – we promise to provide you with the most total, comprehensive coverage possible. We also stay with issues week in and week out until they are resolved.

Fabulous festival

There is nothing so spectacular as the Arts Festival on the Common. We look forward to it every year. With the weather cooperating so beautifully, there was no place we'd rather have been than on the common getting our fill of art and music, shopping, shortcake and lobster rolls.

We are so grateful to be part of a community that can host such a wonderful event in a pristine setting for people of all ages.

Cohasset put out the welcome mat this weekend – and anyone from out of town who paid us a visit – didn't leave without a sense of envy of those who have the privilege of living in such a beautiful place that treasures its cultural side.

Did you know...

At a recent auction in Essex, a painting titled "Cohasset Salt Works," by Winckworth Gay (1821-1910), a Hingham painter and descendent of Rev. Ebenezer Gay, was sold.

The Salt Works was located at Sandy Beach, and consisted of a small windmill that pumped salt water through hollow wooden pipes to vats where it would evaporate, and the salt residue would be scraped away and eventually sold. The sea captains were good customers, as they would use the salt for preserving their fish. The great Lighthouse Gale of 1851 washed the works out to sea, and the only remaining piece of the Salt Works is part of a hollow wooden pipe that is on display at the Maritime Museum.

It is interesting to note that the Cohasset Historical Society owns a Winckworth Gay painting. It is a land-seascape looking northwest from Kimball's Point with Hull peninsula and Boston Harbor in the background. It is on display at the Pratt Building. The painting was donated to the society by Georgianna Thayer of Cohasset.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Praise for Supt. Walsh on school budget

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing as a concerned parent. Thursday evening (June 16) I attended the school committee meeting to listen to discussion regarding the cuts required as a result of the defeat of the override.

First, I would like to commend Dr. Walsh for her perseverance and professionalism. It seems some people forget that this is her first year as superintendent in Cohasset. She came to Cohasset and inherited a very difficult financial situation. As a member of the Osgood School Council, I have been privy to the constant budget process over many months. It is my opinion that she is doing everything in her power to ensure that in a time when resources are scarce, our schools are operating in a fiscally responsible manner without sacrificing the learning experiences for our children. She does not deserve the hostility that I observed.

With that said, I listened to the recommended alternative cuts suggested to ensure that four teaching positions are maintained. Given that the budget has already been cut and it was down to the bare bones, I was interested to see where the cuts would come next. I was astonished to hear that the alternative cuts included: a large portion of professional development funding for the teachers; baseline testing for grades K-2; accreditation associations; and miscellaneous other items.

These cuts will also have detrimental effects on the quality of education provided to our children. After much discussion about cuts and potential cost savings, Joe McDonald, the school business manager, pointed out that we are already under funded approximately $168K for the salaries for fiscal 2006. As a parent of a second grader next year, I wish we could squeeze blood from a stone. It seems implausible that we will find the funds to save the four positions this year and make up the shortfall in the budget that already exists.

The Concerned Taxpayers of Cohasset are determined to find excess in the budget. Perhaps eliminating cell phones for certain administrative personnel and monitoring electrical use are appropriate saving measures in this fiscal climate. However, such savings do not alone solve the immediate problem.

Those critical of the school budget fail to recognize that state aid to wealthier towns in Massachusetts, Cohasset included, has been cut consistently in the last 12 years. It was refreshing to hear the possibility that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts may come to our rescue in future years.

In referring to an article printed in the Boston Sunday Globe (6/12), Dr. Walsh provided information regarding Chapter 70 which provides funding for educational aid. The legislature is considering increasing state aid from 10 percent to 15percent for the education budgets of every city and town. This would help the 63 wealthiest communities that have been hit hardest by the reduction in educational state aid over the years. The final decision will not be made until the fall, but it could mean approximately $600K in additional state aid for the school budget in the future.

We as a community need to step to the plate immediately, and contact our local state representatives and the governor to ensure that this increase passes. This is an opportunity for parents of students who either did not support the override or did not take the time to vote, to write a letter and lobby to ensure their children receive the benefits of additional state aid and the academic excellence they deserve.

Unfortunately, this year the Cohasset school budget will not provide everything we would like for our children. However, moving forward we need to make sure this happens. Additional funding from the state and more parental involvement to understand the budgeting process will ensure we achieve our goals.

Support appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

Thank you to the many families who contributed their used soccer gear to the recent collection for the Passback program.

The 187 items donated will be distributed to children who desperately need basic soccer equipment. Our collection includes 56 shirts, 59 shorts, 13 pairs of cleats, 33 pairs of socks, and more. Wow!

Thanks for helping.

Coach Kevin DeVito praised as the 'best & brightest'

TO THE EDITOR:

The phrase "best & brightest" is one that's thrown around far too frequently in towns like Cohasset and Hull but vivid proof was witnessed each day this spring with the Cohasset High Schools boys' lacrosse team.

In early March, with the 2005 lacrosse season just on the horizon and a glaring need for another coach, a familiar name to long-time CHS sports fans was forwarded to me for consideration, Kevin DeVito. He was a recent star on many teams at CHS and Lafayette College. Our high school boys' program of 33 players requires a daily focus on skills development for the varied positions that are played in the sport of lacrosse. The need for added quality coaching was a must for this group of athletes to get to compete in the State Championship Tourney again in 2005.

What we also got in this Kevin DeVito bargain was daily view of young man with a strong sense of community and giving back to the town of Cohasset. The open position was for that "highly sought-after, unpaid volunteer coaching" slot with all the glitter and accolades that come from that role.

Just like many volunteers before Kevin, sports and coaching involvement tend to bring out the best in our young men or women. Each day, Kevin tirelessly took time out of his workday to attend to the development of our 2005 boys' lacrosse program and players. These high school players also got a daily dose of what's right about sports: giving back to the community.

I have no doubt that Kevin's role was one of the big reasons that the very smallest squad in the Division 3 tourney could rise to play in the State Championship game last week. While we fell short in the championship game, the lesson taught by Kevin each day, is that our student athletes can always show a strong sense of community involvement and it's the best we can hope for from our public education system.

Kevin DeVito exemplified "the best & brightest" to our 2005 boys lacrosse team. As the boys' head coach, I also learned a lot about winning from our 2005 team and Kevin DeVito. Many thanks to Kevin DeVito and to his family for having him return to Cohasset this spring.

School board chairman's behavior faulted

COMMENTARY

LUCIA FLIBOTTE

Anyone who attended or watched on TV the recent school committee meeting this past Thursday (June 16) has to be very concerned about the behavior, conduct and leadership abilities of the current School Committee Chairperson, Ms. Jamie Williams. During this meeting, Ms. Williams treated the Superintendent, Dr. Walsh with such disdain, the meeting room was overcome by an awkward silence.

She then went on to cut short in a rude and disrespectful manner my attempt to voice my concerns with the direction of the meeting. And finally Ms. Williams, showing her absolute disdain for dissent, tried her best to silence a sitting member of the school committee, Rick Flynn when he voiced concerns over the direction of the meeting.

I have never witnessed such unprofessional and rude behavior at any town meeting during my 15 years as a resident of Cohasset. I must add that based on the numerous e-mails, phone calls, and comments I received over the past few days, many other town residents share the same opinion.

What I found equally troubling was the focus of the meeting established and enforced by Ms. Williams. I sat and listened to a number of suggestions being bantered about focusing on savings and possible revenue enhancements that have already been looked at. The problem with these suggestions is that the town reviewed the school budget line by line, a process that encompassed four plus months of meetings, joint review with other town boards and consumed hundreds of man hours.

At the joint meeting between the school, advisory and board of selectmen, there was a consensus that a $400,000 town/school override was necessary and its failure would result in a loss of teacher positions. Ms. Williams was in attendance at this meeting and I assume she was in complete agreement with this conclusion since she did not voice opposition or comments contrary to the accepted conclusion.

The credibility of the schools, the budget process and the call for the failed override are now being put in jeopardy by this approach and we need to put an end to this now.

Now we sit in the aftermath of an override defeat and we start to revisit cell phone bills, charging students for parking and bus service? A very open (to all), transparent budget process was completed, the impact of a failed override was spelled out and now we want to go back on this. The credibility of the schools, the budget process and the call for the failed override are now being put in jeopardy by this approach and we need to put an end to this now. That was the point I wanted to make at the school committee meeting but Ms. Williams suppressed my comments mid-sentence. I guess I was not on her personal invite list for this meeting.

It is unfortunate that the town is facing the current budget crisis that in all likelihood will result in teacher cuts. But what we must do now is look to navigate through this crisis and work on the issues involved with our school funding that continually creates this annual budget crunch. As a member of the advisory committee stated in the joint meeting this past spring, if everyone agrees that education is our community's number one priority, then we should allocate funds accordingly.

The school committee needs to play an important role in communicating the issues involved with the budget. To this end, I hope we all recognize that there is no fat in the school budget. Sure there might be a few dollars here and there, but anyone who has attended the budget meetings can only conclude the next round of cuts will include teachers in order to pay our bills. The parents and people who care about our schools also need to get involved, learn the facts, attend meetings and most importantly vote.

The town needs to be confident in its elected officials and leaders. The School Committee needs a leader who can work well and effectively with others, even those who do not share the same opinions. We need the different boards of the town to come together like they did this past spring and start to work on next year's issues.

It is unfortunate that in her short tenure as School Committee Chair, Ms. Williams has demonstrated an inability to lead the committee, build consensus and conduct herself in a civil and professional manner. My only hope is that Ms. Williams comes to the realization that she is in the public's service and this includes constituents, fellow committee members, school officials who may not share her own opinions. She needs to be an advocate for the schools and build bridges, not destroy them, with all members of our community.

School business as usual can't continue

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

How did we get in this school financial crisis and can we do anything about it?

Some prior and current school committee members abdicated their fiduciary responsibility and rather than looking out for the students and taxpayers left everything up to the 'paid professionals'. Budgets were blindly accepted, warrants were signed – done without questioning the state of the finances. It is as if you gave your teenager the Debit Card, didn't monitor the spending then just kept replenishing the account.

Former Chair Rick Shea stated on numerous occasions that it was not their job to 'micromanage'. But if it isn't the school committee's, whose is it? They should be paying attention to items such as:

- retaining more money in the classroom and less in discretionary overhead,
- whether administrators are controlling the operation in a cost effective manner,
- if curriculum esp., at the high school level, is competitive with similar towns,
- if fee programs cover expenses,
- if the buildings are clean and running efficiently.

Another reason is the acceptance of overrides as a way of life. It is a lot easier to throw trust and money at ineffectiveness and take the easy way out — constant overrides. An example of this long time mindset was the statement at last week's meeting by former School Chair, Nancy Sandell, ' the school should just go for another one.' This attitude negates the will to constantly do the best for our students and residents

School Committee member, Rick Flynn appears to be attempting to carry on this tradition. Rather than get to the meat of the problems he defends the employees who helped cause them while demeaning residents who attempt to offer solutions to the fiscal crisis that brought us to where we are today.

Exactly where is that?

We are still dealing with issues from the '04 budget even after:

- $400K override
- $200K transfer at the March 2004 ATM to complete Fiscal '04
- $ 95K given for an unpaid utility bill at the December 2004 STM

At the very end of last week's meeting, the business manager dropped a quiet bomb. Another $168K has been added to the '06 budget in the salary column for teachers' tuition reimbursements and column raises that were not paid during the Malvey tenure. Is this legal? Why did Superintendent Walsh wait almost a year to bring them up? Why wasn't former Chair Rick Shea or longtime member Rick Flynn on top of this?

The administration is hoping to end '05 in balance without coming back for more. In addition to cuts made, the schools have additionally received:

- $400K override
- $160K given at the December STM for unemployment and utilities
- $200K given at the April 2005 ATM to complete Fiscal '05

As to '06, there were some very interesting disclosures last week regarding this so called bare bones, transparent, needs based, built from the bottom up budget. Many items parents used to pay for, e.g., AP textbooks, student assignment and agenda notebooks were included. As were articles usually donated by the PSO.

Also were wish list items e.g. a large $1,800 laminating machine for just Deer Hill. Currently there are three machines between both schools and the Osgood principal stated her teachers use their large laminator everyday like they use a copy machine and wouldn't like to walk across campus to use one. We should be looking to purchase class materials wisely rather than spend the exorbitant supply cost of lamination materials plus the man hours involved. This attitude also exhibits the administrator's territorial mindset that precludes them from sharing within the system or looking toward any type of cooperative endeavor with other school districts.

The Osgood principal noted that she over budgeted for first grade glue sticks by $500. $4K in new testing was another item to go but she failed to mention the extra secretary – she lost a grade and added secretarial time last year. With the projected decrease of 35 students in next year's K class should we be looking for more secretarial hours?

The evening went as expected. Superintendent Walsh indicating in her mind there are no discretionary items in the budget – everything is education. Also she noted that sharing the SPED transportation which she previously deemed illegal, now she says we are already doing. Principal DeLorenzo suggested the usual scare tactics of cutting JV sports and not paying NEASC accreditation. Everyone cut magazine subscriptions, teacher development, etc. etc.

Taxpayers can no longer afford to increase the school budget 6.5 percent (in the range of $1 million a year) each and every year...

The reorganization and economy suggestions to avert laying off teachers, keep money in the classroom and balance the '06 budget that Chair Williams and Dr. Slanetz were hoping for from the administration never materialized. So they took it upon themselves to give specific directions regarding non-education impacts in areas such as transportation, cell phones, health insurance, etc. attempting to get us back on track.

There are solutions that will take work on the part of our employees e.g. going on line to discover those sites offering free professional development and finding staff with skill sets to enhance more than one area of our curriculum. It will also cost the parents more money in possible fee increases for lunch and KEDS to cover all the cost of operation rather than having that money taken from the classroom.

The town has the huge debt service of $52 million for the education facilities plus exorbitant utility bills on these inefficient buildings. Taxpayers can no longer afford to increase the school budget 6.5 percent (in the range of $1 million a year) each and every year plus soon begin paying capital expenses for upcoming school maintenance and technology needs and hope the town maintains any hint of affordability or diversity.

We appear to finally have some school committee members ready to roll up their sleeves and bring some fiscal responsibility and accountability and they deserve our support.

HEALTH NOTES

Household sharps need careful disposal

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

One of the most insidious products of our throwaway society is "sharps." Sharps are hypodermic needles, syringes, etc. used in human patient care or treatment, or in medical, research or industrial laboratories. Also included are other types of broken or unbroken glassware that were in contact with infectious agents, such as used slides and cover slips, and unused hypodermic and suture needles, syringes, and scalpel blades. Millions of people use syringes, needles, and lancets to manage their care at home. For example, diabetics sometimes use hypodermic needles for insulin injection. These are called household sharps.

Household sharps represent a special threat to children, pets, and workers who handle trash. They must be properly stored and then discarded after use to protect from illness or injury prevent reuse, protect the environment, and keep sharps out of household trash and recycling bins. To dispose of household sharps, you can bring your used sharps to any hospital or nursing home or healthcare facility in the State. The Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Station is not a sharps disposal site! Just call the Board of Health for information on days, hours, and location of the sharps disposal sites in Cohasset. Or ask your health-care provider about how and where to dispose of sharps.

Follow these guidelines to safely store used sharps in your home until you are able to safely discard them:

Household sharps represent a special threat to children, pets, and workers who handle trash.

- Put used sharps (needles, syringes, and lancets) in a sharps container or a puncture-resistant, plastic bottle (for example, a bleach or laundry detergent bottle). Close the screw-on top tightly. You may want to tape it as well. Label the bottle, "Contains Sharps".
- Keep sharps containers away from children and pets.
- Put used sharps immediately into your container. Keep the container closed between uses.
- Bring your container with you when you travel, and dispose of it at home when you return.
- Never flush sharps down the toilet or drop them into a storm sewer.
- Never clip, bend, or recap sharps.
- Never put sharps containers out with the recycling. Loose needles, syringes, or lancets should never be thrown into a recycling bin.
- Don't put sharps in soda cans, milk cartons, glass bottles, or in any containers that are not puncture resistant. Coffee cans are not recommended because the plastic lids come off too easily and may leak.

Several manufacturers offer products that allow you to destroy used needles at home. These devices sever, burn, or melt the needle, rendering it safe for disposal. Check with your pharmacist or search the internet using keywords "sharps disposal devices." The prices of these devices vary according to product type and manufacturer.

Sharps are not recyclable!

Do not put the sharps container out with the recyclable plastics.

Having disposed of sharps properly, we repeat, we are a throwaway society. Most of the rest of the world which has reached a certain level of affluence, also tends to increase this trash disposal proclivity; but nowhere as much as in the United States.

A rather remarkable analysis of the waste disposal problem appears on the University of Michigan web page: www.umich.edu/~gs265/society/wastedisposal.htm. The author, Luke Bassis states: "The disposal of garbage in the world is a problem that continues to grow with the development of industrialized nations and the growth of population. Since the beginning of time people have needed to find a way of disposing of their trash.

"In 18th century England and France, carters were paid by individuals to carry trash and discard it on the outskirts of town."

So, what's changed? Disposal in open pits is mentioned in the Bible (Deuteronomy 23:12-14). Since then we have come a long way and have developed types of waste that cannot simply be dumped into a hole. In a future article, we will discuss this real problem and it's long term implications for your health.

2005, the year without summer?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A friend of mine name of Ray Bearse once wrote "A Guide to the Green Mountain State" in which he quoted one of those old Yankee farmers as telling him: "A Vermont year is nine months of winter and three months of damn poor sleddin!'"

For a while there last week, as I cowered under the blankets at six o'clock in the morning and defied the best efforts of my friends to entice me out into the 40ish-degree temperatures, I thought that the old farmer's description had moved south to annoy me.

But cheer up.
It could be worse.

My memory may be failing me but I don't ever recall a year when I turned off the furnace on the eve of the summer solstice (June 21 at 2:46 in the morning) and lived to regret it.

Yessiree, Tuesday was the first day of summer and my first reaction was, "How could they tell?" If this is global warming then why do I have to take a blow torch to the ice in the watering can so I can feed the begonias?

But cheer up. It could be worse.

Ray's old farmer also told him that one of his ancestors had survived the year 1816 on his Vermont farm which is impressive for 1816 is still known in some quarters as "the year without a summer" and in others as "eighteen hundred and froze to death."

That was the year that snow fell in Boston on June 7 and there was frost all over New England on July 8 and the frost of Aug. 22 was so damaging that it caused crop failures and food shortages well into the following year.

It snowed in Montreal on June 6 and 8 and sub-zero temperatures that same month destroyed crops before they had a chance to get started and frozen ponds, which might have been a boon to hockey players, froze wildfowl.

Contemporary reports told of snow on the tops of the mountains of northern New England in August. Cold nights and a light ground frost in mid-July wiped out the corn crop and a particularly hard frost in early September took out the rest of the plantings.

The loss of the harvest of 1816 started the first great exodus out of Massachusetts and the rest of New England as the farmers, rendered suddenly poor by the crop failure, packed up and moved west for new starts in states like Ohio, Wisconsin and Indiana.

The cause of "the year without a summer" in New England was later found to be a volcano named Tambora that erupted some 12,000 miles away in what was then the Dutch East Indies the year before.

The explosion spewed tons of ash and dust 28 miles into the air and, caught up in the jet stream, darkened the skies around the world for the next year and, indirectly, led to the creation of one of literature's masterpieces.

Mary Shelley was staying in a villa in Switzerland at the time but her plans to return to town were disrupted by the stormy weather brought on by Tambora. So she stayed at the villa instead and began writing "Frankenstein."

Or so the story goes.

Catch OUR TOWN on TV

After a very short spring break, OUR TOWN, Cohasset's very own cable TV show is back to its regularly scheduled programming. On Monday June 27 at 9p.m. on Comcast channel 10 featured guests include former school committee member Rick Shea and school budget investigation committee member Gabriel Gomez, who will provide their differing perspectives on how to overcome the recent challenges of school funding.

Gomez will also detail the goals of his new committee to heighten awareness regarding registered sex offenders.

Roving Reporter Rich Ofsthun details the making of the upcoming CYBSA documentary being made in town. If you miss the show on Monday, catch it again Tuesday at 9:30pm or Thursday at 8:30pm.

School budget headache is nothing new

New override try is floated

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the past two years, operating budget overrides have been floated for the schools, each of which would have raised the tax levy $400,000 over the 2-1/2 percent increase allowed every year. While voters passed the figure for the fiscal 2005 budget in April 2004, this spring was a different story.

But even though the override failed, at the June 16 school committee meeting, the idea was floated by former school committee member Nancy Sandell to try to hold another special Town Meeting and a special election, and try to pass an override once more.

While the school committee did not say whether it would consider going for another override this year, it would be no surprise to see that happen. Financially, the school department has been in a serious situation for the past two years.

When the override was passed for the fiscal 2005 budget, planning had begun in early October 2003. At that time, school committee members included Pat Martin, Mark DeGiacomo, Rick Shea, Rick Flynn, and Chartis Tebbetts.

The first red flag to present itself was an unexpected rise in utility costs. The actual total cost for utilities for all three schools was $259,925 — but the schools had only budgeted $95,900. This left a deficit of $164,025, due in large part to the construction going on at the middle-high school with utilities used by workers during extended hours, with some effect from Deer Hill construction. In addition, the increased price in natural gas coupled with a severe winter pushed the budget further off its mark.

The months passed and in December former Supt. Edward Malvey and former Business Manager Ivan Klimko presented a budget that allowed the schools to keep all services at the same level. The proposed budget was essentially a "wish list" of items the school would like to have, if money was no consideration, which was pared down as the board established funding priorities.

At that time, the schools would have needed a budget increase of 13 percent to maintain services. However, with a decrease in state aid, the school budget reflected an increase of 6 percent, which was not sufficient considering the bills that were coming in.

Not only were the utility costs much higher than had been budgeted, the line item for substitute teachers had been underbudgeted, by almost $74,000 and the cost of covering contractual obligations alone was roughly $490,000.

In April 2004, Town Meeting and then the Town Election passed the $400,000 override for fiscal 2005. At that time Jamie Williams and Adrienne MacCarthy were elected to the board, bringing some new eyes to the budgeting process.

Fiscal 2006 budget discussions began early in the 2004-2005 school year. With a new superintendent on board in Denise Walsh, a different approach began — a needs based budget. Figures were plugged in based on what she felt were the needs of the school.

But as fiscal 2006 discussions were beginning, problems from fiscal 2005 began surfacing, and in the first week of November, Walsh sent a memo to then Acting Town Manager Michael Buckley that a number of line items were underbudgeted for fiscal 2005 and could be as much as $500,000.

Some of the problems at that stage went back to fiscal 2004, including a $93,000 gas bill which surfaced as that fiscal year came to a close, and $65,000 worth of unemployment costs. Walsh said it would be important to keep an eye on five areas from fiscal 2005 as the year went on including transportation, cleaning/custodial services, tuition reimbursements for professional staff, special education tuition, and legal fees.

Voters at the fall Special Town Meeting were asked to allocate $93,000 to pay the fiscal 2004 bill, as well as an additional $93,000 to put into the fiscal 2005 budget for the rest of the year. Voters were also asked to allocate $65,000 to cover the fiscal 2004 unemployment costs, as well as an additional $65,000 for the budget moving forward.

With the town having passed the $400,000 operating budget override the previous spring, voters were not happy to hear of the school's financial situation. One resident called for three school committee members to resign effective immediately, but voters ultimately approved the appointment of a new investigative committee to determine why the school department is over budget. Even with that override, the school committee had needed to reduce its budget significantly by cutting teaching and administrative positions, eliminating the middle school athletic program, and not giving salary increases for administrators.

To help make up some of the costs moving forward, the school committee began talking about implementing fees and athletics were the first to receive an increase. In addition, the idea to start up its own preschool and also expand to full-day kindergarten — which would be run on a fee basis — were thought to be good revenue generating ideas.

When the Annual Town Meeting began to roll around, talk of going for another override began. The needs based budget prepared by Walsh had a large increase in special education tuitions which led to a roughly $700,000 gap between what the school department said it needed and what the town has said it can afford.

In addition, further costs had surfaced from fiscal 2005 and the town was asked to approve $100,000 to be put into the Reserve Fund to cover school department expenses, such as utility costs, as well as another $100,000 to be added to the school department budget to offset any further costs from fiscal 2005.

Cuts were made in the proposed fiscal 2006 budget, including the elimination of $40,000 in maintenance costs, $40,000 in supplies and materials, $30,000 from the athletic budget, a proposed math teaching position was cut freeing up $45,000, $6,000 in texts was cut, along with $51,000 in support staff. As a result, the school department believed it could get by with a $400,000 override.

While the override passed muster at Town Meeting in April, it did not pass at the ballot box during the Special Election in May, and the town and schools have split the difference. The town's approved budget of $12.6 million, which includes the override figure, will be amended at a Special Town Meeting at a date to be determined. If the override had passed, it would have been the fifth operating budget override approved since 1999 and the 12th since 1988.

Cutting started before Town Meeting

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The town and school departments have come to a mutual agreement regarding how best to divvy up the $400,000 override shortfall. While it may look as if the schools are paying more than half the cost, with the cuts that took place prior to Town Meeting, both sides are on comparable paths.

Town Manager Bill Griffin and Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh agreed the school department would take on $285,000 of the $400,000 shortfall — leaving $115,000 to be made up by the town. The entire $400,000 would have gone to benefit the school department had it passed.

"Although we approached it in very, very different ways, we came to the same thing," said Griffin.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley explained the town is expecting to receive $70,000 more than originally projected in local aid reimbursement, and a $15,000 reduction in the town's charter school assessment. With those additional funds, the $400,000 gap has been reduced to $315,000. With the schools picking up $285,000, the town is left to come up with $30,000, and Buckley along with Town Manager Bill Griffin will decide where to make those cuts.

Buckley said the town cut roughly $680,000 before its proposed fiscal 2006 budget was presented to Town Meeting including:

- $8,000 from the Selectmen's office
- $1,000 in Town Manager clerical reductions
- $1,300 in Director of Finance supplies
- $6,000 from the Board of Assessors office
- $2,300 for Treasurer/Collector supplies
- $30,000 from the legal budget
- $18,000 from the Town Clerk
- $30,000 from the Town Planner allocation
- $17,000 from water purchase
- $135,000 from the police department (one officer, one seasonal officer, dog officer hours, training, capital)
- $191,000 from the fire department (one paramedic, capital, and water purchase)
- $2,300 from the harbormaster
- $48,600 from the DPW (one laborer, highway materials)
- $8,700 from the Board of Health (agent, nurse hours, supplies)
- $12,000 from the Elder Affairs office
- $575 from the veterans budget
- $33,000 from the town library
- $3,400 from pension assessments
- $15,000 from worker's compensation
- $93,000 in health insurance enrollment reductions
- $21,000 in property insurance for police and fire accident coverage

The schools had originally planned to ask for a $640,000 override. However, feeling $400,000 would be more acceptable for taxpayers, they made the following cuts to get to the $400,000 figure:

- cutting $40,000 in maintenance - to be covered on the town's side of the budget
- cutting $40,000 in supplies and materials - hopefully to be taken care of by Cohasset Educational Foundation funding
- cutting $30,000 in athletics - hopefully to be supported by local boosters clubs
- not hiring a new math teacher for $45,000
- not purchasing new math books for $6,000 which would have been used in that teacher's class
- cutting three instructional aides for $51,000

Now that the override has failed, the school department is being asked to come up with its $285,000 share and members of the school committee are working hard to see if there are any alternatives to cutting teaching positions. Talk has surfaced of implementing transportation fees, and raising lunch fees to make up that difference. However, Supt. Walsh believes the only way to make up the money is to cut positions, as she had asked the three building principals to come up with a list of additional cuts to make up the difference, and none could come up with enough money.

LIBRARY CORNER

Summer Library Hours The library is closed on Sundays through Labor Day. Summer hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Knitting Group A new knitting group meets on Monday evenings from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., in the library's Historical Room. This is a fun group for all who love to knit or just have an interest in knitting. Bring a knitting project and join like-minded friends at the library. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Can't be competitive without funding our schools

To The Editor:

It's too bad that the recent override ballot vote didn't pass in Cohasset.

Maintaining an excellent public school system is an essential part of staving off the coming bust in real estate prices. Hopefully, the Cohasset Public Schools can continue to provide an excellent education, but since the override didn't pass that will be difficult.

Within 10 years, in order to be successful in the worldwide economy one will need to be fluent in Mandarin (Mandarin and Cantonese are two major dialects of the Chinese language). Spanish, a language spoken by much of the world, is currently a portion of the curriculum. That's good. Spanish, as taught in the Cohasset Public Schools, is excellent. Without an override, how can language offerings be expanded to include Mandarin?

Science and math, which are currently excellent programs at the Cohasset Public Schools, need enhancement so the U.S. can maintain its knowledge superiority in the world (the composition of the MIT student body is currently largely Chinese). We've already lost most manufacturing to low-cost regions, such as China. A no vote for the override means accelerating the outsourcing of design jobs. Implementing these educational programs costs money. Please vote in-favor of the next override before we are responsible for making the U.S. a third world country.

Sure there are some inefficiencies in the school department, but voting down an override will not solve them. These spending aberrations are being addressed. The anti-school talk I hear is very shortsighted. We can't afford to be pennywise and pound foolish. Real estate buyers pay a premium for property in a town with an outstanding school system, and as far as purchasing property in a third world country. Forget it.

Litchfield talks about boot camp

Air Force, but as the years went on, he decided he would embark on a journey which would lead him to become one of the "few and the proud."

On Dec. 28, Litchfield left his Beechwood Street home and headed to Parris Island, S.C., where he spent 12 grueling weeks going through boot camp. He describes his experience as three months of constant mental and physical stress.

While he could still receive letters from home, Litchfield said he was cut off from just about everything. He didn't know the Patriots had made it to the Superbowl until he read it in a letter. He said when his family, including his mother (Cohasset school transportation coordinator Peggy Litchfield) and friends came to his graduation, he couldn't step out of formation to say hello, he just tried to catch a glimpse of them from the corner of his eye.

Pvt. Jaime Litchfield visits Scott Newkirk's international relations class on Tuesday to talk about his experience training to become a Marine.

"If you want to be a Marine, you have to earn it."

— Jaime Litchfield, Beechwood Street

During boot camp, drill instructors are very tough and Litchfield said they are constantly yelling. "Marines swear in a different kind of way I've never heard before," he said. He said boot camp continually wears you down until you're not even sure you want to go through with it anymore.

"You are stripped of everything, including your pride," he said, but it's all a part of a bigger plan to weed out those recruits who aren't strong enough to become a Marine.

"If you want to be a Marine, you have to earn it," he said.

"Everyone at some point or another wanted to go home," Litchfield said, adding there were times when training kept him awake for 72 straight hours during which time he was only fed five times. He said even during regular training days, rules are strict and when in the dining hall, everyone is required to sit a certain way, with the back straight and no looking up from the plate. If the rules are broken, it results in being kicked out of the hall without finishing the meal.

Litchfield said boot camp was all about discipline, and while it was very physical, when completed, he knew he could deal with the stress of being in a combat situation. In addition, he is now part of a brotherhood which he said is very strong.

He said during training, the importance of always rescuing fellow soldiers, whether injured or deceased, is highly stressed. Everyone trains wearing hundreds of pounds of gear while dragging one or two fully armored comrades to safety during a mock war situation.

"Every Marine comes home no matter what," he said. Regardless of personalities or feelings when not in combat, Litchfield said he knows no matter what, Marines would do all they could to save him in battle and he would do the same.

Litchfield became a Marine in March. With a score of 232 out of 250 points for his rifle qualification, he is now an expert marksman. Because he scored so high, he was given the option of choosing which path he would like to take.

Litchfield was only home for 10 days before he shipped out once more to attend the Marine's School of Infantry at Camp Lejeune in North Carolina, where he spent four weeks being trained in "common skills," and another 2-1/2 weeks training to become a rifleman. Now, he is a fire team leader for a rifle company operating out of Londonderry, N.H.

During those first four weeks of training, Litchfield learned all about how to use many different kinds of weapons, including live hand grenades.

"It was one of the loudest things I've ever heard in my life," he said.

Litchfield said he also fired bazookas, M16s, and a variety of other weapons. His testing during this part of training was also very intense, as it required memorizing all the parts of a rifle and being able to assemble and disassemble it in minutes. Every week, he said more than half of the Marines failed their tests, but he "aced" all of his and was offered a job to be a sniper.

Litchfield returned home from training Friday, June 17, and life is not the same as it was before he left. He said as a result of all his training, his "muscle memory" is still very much reacting as if he was completing training drills. He said last week, some kids in the neighborhood were lighting off firecrackers, and when he heard them, he immediately dropped to the ground but then felt foolish realizing where he was.

Although he is only signed up for the next 5-1/2 years, Litchfield said he could see himself re-enlisting when his commitment is up. Currently, Litchfield is a reservist and could be called to active duty at any time. He said there is a good chance he will be shipping out to Iraq at some point, as virtually everyone in the Marines spends some time in the Middle East. Just about every drill instructor he came in contact with during his training has been to either Iraq or Afghanistan at least once.

"We're the first to go and the last to know," he said, adding the Marines are only required to give 72 hours notice before shipping out.

While being a Marine is hard work, and requires a lot of sacrifice — especially for those who have wives and children, Litchfield said he wouldn't change anything about his experience.

"It's not for everyone," he said. But now that he has made it through the toughest part, "It is the most memorable thing I've ever done," he said.

The Strawberry Festival at the Second Congregational Church is always a big attraction at the Arts Festival.

Art lovers relish 50th festival

credit has to go to the many volunteers, including artists, students, members, faculty and friends of the art center, who helped put the festival together," she said. "As the festival coordinator, I'm generally the overseer of all the volunteer efforts, but I have all these captains working under me, who altogether did a great job."

Kennedy explained what was most critical about the 50th annual arts festival was the overall quality of artists and crafts exhibiting, which she described as very high and very selective.

"Altogether, we had to turn away some 50 percent of the total craft artists who applied," she said. "Not only for quality but also variety. An overall diversity of craft and media, we believe, makes the show more appealing to artists, using artists in the global sense of the word."

The overall diversity of craft and media was in full splendor throughout the common all weekend. There were the usual individual tents of roughly 90 craft and fine artists showcasing and selling unique handmade items, including jewelry, glass, pottery/ceramics, wood, baskets, fine art, photography, clothing/fiber/bags, leather and metal. Unique hats and clothing were also offered.

Also featured on the festival grounds were such mainstays as the signature 10-pole white exhibition tent filled with paintings, photographs and drawings; the festival performance stage featuring musical groups; and the Young Artists Exhibition in the KidsTent. Ongoing events and attractions such as en plein aire painters, fine art and crafts, musical performances, strawberry shortcake, lobster rolls, and artist demonstrations were in great supply.

New for this year, the art center added an installation to further involve the area youth community. The art piece, "Our Town: Outside the Frame," was a collaborative piece created for the 50th festival celebration by nearly 200 South Shore high school students. Rockland Trust was the principal sponsor of "Our Town" along with Adrian Morris Salon, Cohasset Jewelers, Kitchen Concepts, Strekalovsky Hoit Raymond LLC and a number of individuals from the South Shore.

The piece was comprised of 16 oversized mixed-media paintings by young artists from 15 area high schools. The students were invited to find an artistic theme for each of their towns, using their own viewpoint on what is remarkable about their towns.

For those wishing to chow down at the festival, the strawberry shortcake and lobster roll specials, sponsored by the two of the neighborhood churches, have become as much a fixture of the event as the art.

"We've had a great collaborative effort for the last few years with both the Second Congregational Church and the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church," said Monica McKenney of the art center. "The Congregational Church has sponsored the strawberry shortcake sale for many years now, and last year the First Parish Church started the lobster roll sale as a regular feature. It's an important fundraiser for the church."

The festival performance stage brought a steady flow of musical acts over the three days, what Kennedy described as "a mix of jazz, folk and bluegrass, with community bands like the Rusty Skippers from Cohasset and the South Shore Bay Band from Duxbury."

"I think it was just the right mix of music sets," said Kennedy, "not overpowering and very enjoyable for all listeners."

"Everyone who came out was very pleased with all aspects of the festival — the art, the crafts, the vendors, the food and overall atmosphere," added McKenney. "After 50 years, I think we're finally getting it right."
